It was shortly after the fort was completed that Governor Samuel Norton and his entire series three overland journeys into the northwest, the last of which was to take him to the Arctic shore at the mouth of the Coppermine river, fully 1,000 miles distant. And it was not long after his return that the fortress was ruined by the French, bitter opponents of the British claim of supremacy on the Bay.

Without a step to defend themselves, Bamfort and 39 men surrendered in 1782 to a force of 400 Frenchmen, half of them starving and most of them unable, who landed on the gravel shore from three sailing vessels. Some historians held that Hearne, who was carried back to France as a hostage by Admiral de la Perouse, should have been criticized less for his abandonment of the fort than the company for providing so feeble a garrison.

Before de la Perouse swung his heavily-armed ships back toward the north, he looted Fort Prince of Wales of food and ammunition, blew up what powder remained, wrecked the guns and battered down the walls on every side. Yet even his considered vandalism could not prevent the fort's ruins from lifting their wrecked shoulders as an historic site and a masterpiece of old time masonry.

Almost two-score guns will lie on the broad parapets of the fort, almost buried in the moss which has grown up to a thickness of three or four feet, and even given root to hardy willow bushes and berry plants. More than 20 feet high stand the white walls of the stone residence built for the fort, but moss has laid a carpet so deep it reaches half-way up the window-sills.

The square entry to the fort, protected by a crumbling stone parapet 30 feet closer to the shore, is lined by a rock breastwork—and strengthened by a set of wooden beams placed by the Dominion department of railways and canals to prevent the doorway from collapsing. The glory of forgotten decades humbled by enemy gunfire has been almost buried by fleeting time.

Beautiful Woman Gives Cologne Police Clues

Berlin.—A tale of mass murder in which the villain slew 964 men and women before his cannot brought about his own death on the rack because thirty-seven children were among the victims, is told in six time-yellowed pages found in a cranny of the Cologne City library.

The career of Christian Genippenkind, a bluebird of the 16th century, came to light when an inventory was taken of the library's thousands of volumes. It was in the form of a newspaper, published semi-annually in 1581, and described the arrest, confession, and finally torture of the murderer.

It was Genippentgina's proceeds, in the days ago, to waylay lone travelers on the road to Cologne, slay them and take their possessions. Then he would drag the bodies to his cave and enter their name in the annals of his exploits, detailing the amount of money obtained and the manner of how and cry raised by the relatives of his victims. Even his wife was numbered among them.

One day there passed by a woman beautiful that the killer stood abashed in the road and offered her a place in his mistress his heart instead of death. At length, grief-stricken, she informed Cologne authorities of the fiend and a posse captured him while he slept. He confessed his crimes and directed his captors to other caves where the bones of his victims and his records of his fiendishness were found.

After a trial of several weeks, during which the countryside was up in arms, he was found guilty and sentenced to death on the rack. He was torn limb from limb over a period of nine days.

MORMANS SEEK MORE CONVERTS

Imposing Tabernacle in London's West End Section

London—An imposing Mormon tabernacle is to be built shortly on a site in London's West End at a cost of about $4000,000. When it is completed the headquarters of the European mission of the Mormon church will be moved from Liverpool to London, and copies of Mormon literature including the millennial star" will be distributed from it.

Bishop James H. Wallis, who has recently arrived here from Salt Lake City on a two-year visit to superintend work believes that the temple will attract a larger following in London than it has been possible hitherto to reach.

He stated that there were between 6,000 and 7,000 followers of the church in the British Isles, of whom 700 live in London. Until now meetings have been held every sabbath in hired halls, and new tabernacle have been gained principally by personal solicitation.

There are 400 Mormon missionaries in Europe, of whom 300 live in the British Isles and 15 in London.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

"But I still don't understand. Why couldn't anyone have bought it? Why did Morales take the chance of losing it?"

"No one could have bought it because it wasn't for open sale. To get it you had to have first a concession from the government. Your father got that concession long ago with Morales's influence when they were partners. But neither Morales nor I knew he actually bought any land. Then, through Morales's treachery, your father lost those concessions, but in between he must have made fast to that one tract of land, the Esperanza. Meanwhile, Morales has gone on using it, as he uses dozens of others, preferring that it remain the property of the Mexican government and without expense to him." Suddenly he stopped. "Hark is, of course, if it's all true. Who told you this?"

"I can't remember. He wrote his name and the law firm down for me. I have his card in my purse."

Ted looked at his friend. "This is the first I've seen you've better leave for Sonora. If that land is really mine, I'm going to start a little squeezing on my own side of the line. Morales will find he's got a new neighbor."

But Don Bob had already risen to his feet. "If the tale's true it will be a bad blow for Morales's dream of empire. Oh, it's too good to wait for! Let's ride over with Ann. I want to see that name. Then I can do some telegraphing to an amigo in Sonora. He'll tell us quick enough."

The girl looked at him in quick concern. "Are you able to drive to Mendosa's?"

Bob's voice was confident. "Dear girl, I've recovered. You're born the best little doctor in the world."

He went inside, strapped on his shoulder holster, and led them down the steps. In the darkness as they drove up at Mendoza's none noticed the long limousine parked in the shadow of the patio. Before they reached the door Bob stopped.

"Ann better not be seen with me. You two go in ahead. I'll take a table and Ted can get that card from you and join me."

She led Radcliffe down the long, darkened hall, and throwing open the door of her room, turned on the light. "Sit down a moment," she said and, closing the door, stepped behind the tapestry that hung before her small dressing-room. In a moment she had returned with a card, but as the man rose to go she shook her head. "I've got to sing soon, but I want to talk to you now for five minutes while you're here alone. It's about you. She reached for the upended dress and a pair of stockings, then disappeared behind the tapestry, and Ted heard her kicking off her shoes.

"I wanted to warn you what you're in danger—very real danger," came the voice. "Morales suspects you are in love with his niece. He's afraid she is beginning to love you."

"How do you know?"

"For a moment he heard only the soft rustle of silk, then she answered: "Morales knows. Two days ago he came here. He offered me money to entangle you, so that she would have you. I agreed because so long as he hopes this plan may succeed you will come to no harm. After that, I'm afraid to think. We must hurry Bob, but we've got to—"

A light knock sounded on the door. He heard her little start of surprise, and saw her bare arm and shoulder as she pulled the tapestry aside.

"Quien es?" she called.

For answer the door swung slowly open. With a choked cry Ted started to his feet. There at the doorway stood Morales, his face sealed in an exultant smile, and at his elbow was Adela.

Ted heard their eyes turn to Bob, the man standing by the chair, and behind him, striding the tapestry that hall-clothed figure of the girl that all the border knew as Adela Reed.

As the door swung closed, Ted leaped forward, but the girl flung her arms about him.

"Not now," she pleaded, while her hands held him back. "You must not give her a chance to say something she can't recall. Give her time to think. Wait until you're calm. Then go to her."

In Ted's brain was still the memory of Adela's eyes, and for a mad moment his hands twisted with blind rage. Roughly he unwound the girl's arms, and left the room. Downstairs he ran through the long patio, then out into the night. Adela was nowhere. He searched inside the gaming hall, passed down the line of tables, then hurried into the patio again.

Mendoza stood looking down the road.

"The senor seeks someone?"

"Paco Morales."

The little innkeeper waved toward the road. "Only this moment he left—Senor Morales and his lovely niece." Mendoza looked up at the big, grim-faced man and added in mild surprise. She was weeping, the poor little lady—weeping on such an exquisite night of spring!"

CHAPTER XXVII

As Ted swept down the long aisle between the tables as Bob looked up. Something in the man's quick tread warned him of impending trouble, for never before had his face been so stern, the eyes so deadly. And his voice, as he told Bob what had happened upstairs, held a pent-up fury even more menacing than his eyes. Bob sat for a long moment in thought. At last he said: "I'm inclined to agree with Price that the old Spaniard is just a little mad. How he must have loved Adela!"

"I can't forget her eyes—they weren't menacing — they weren't even questioning—they were only terribly sad." Ted raised a clenched hand and the square line of his jaw set. "Morales would open war—now, by God, he'll have it."

"Softly, old son."

"Softly! I've walked softly long enough. To hell with more side-stepping, Bob!" He fell to pacing up and down. Oh, it's all clear enough! He wants me out of this country and out of Adela's heart. And if he has his—he'll!" Ted looked about him. "I could do a little killing myself tonight."

Bob rose. "I think, old fellow, we'd better be going. Jito and his gang are out in the bar—we don't want any trouble."

Once again Ted's jaw set. "Ever since I came here I've been avoiding trouble with Morales and his vaqueros. Tonight it's their turn to step aside."

After a moment's hesitation Bob shrugged and dropped back into the chair. They sat in silence, their unseeing eyes fixed before them, while about the white music swayed and dancers passed and repassed, looking down curiously at the two grim-faced men.

Then, as Bob turned to break the black silence, a waiter hurried over to their table and touched Ted on the shoulder.

"Senor, Jito gives you his message from the bar. He hopes you will join him in a drink when you are no longer engaged upstairs."

The insolence of that challenge stung Ted to instant action. He jumps to his feet, upsetting the little table. His eyes became narrow, bloodshot slits, but his voice was calm.

"Come," he said to Bob. "I am accepting Jito's invitation—and God, help one of us tonight."

Just outside the door that led into the long bar of Mendoza's, the two men stopped. All bedlam had broken loose in there, and above the chorus of shouts rose the crash of splintered wood, then the silvery shattering of glass. Then the thud of a heavy body followed, and the roar of voices redoubled. Bob loosened the top button of his shirt. Then he opened the door.

In sharp contrast to the darkened patio, the white lights of the mirrored bar-room for a moment dazzled their eyes. Lined up before the bar twenty or more sombrero'ed Mexican vaqueros stood, their girdles hanging loose in their belts, powsled spurs biting into the wooden floor. A table toward the lower end of the bar had overturned, and bottles and glasses were scattered about it, but it was toward the upper end that the eyes of the vaqueros led. The crowd had drawn back to the wall, leaving a space of dead floor empty, and here, in the centre lay one of Mendoza's waiters. Above him, leaning over, was the huge, bent figure of a cowboy, and as he raised his dark face, Ted recognized Jito. An ugly grimace played about the Mexican's mouth. He seemed to be turning over in his slow brain of his what next to do to demonstrate form before him.

"Throw him out, Jito," laughed a little vaquero. "Watch him not to interfere with caballeros."

Again the hair was filled with cries and oaths, while his men urged Jito on. The big Mexican stooped, picked up the waiter, carried him to the door and, raising him above his head, hurled the man into the darkness. A storm of laughter and applause arose, but suddenly, as Jito turned back, all voices ceased, and in that sudden silence the sound of a fist struck the beating of his own heart.

For an instant the sight of Ted standing in the doorway, and across the giant vaquero's face came a look that brought every man to silent immobility and made more than one reach to see if his knife was sheathed by his side. Thrusting out his mind-shaking deadly silence fell, so still the dripping of an overturned bottle sounded down the long length of the room, where a moment before all had been an orgy of noise. There was no mistaking the message in Jito's eyes. In Ted's wrists the blood tingled, and he smiled as he sensed at last the breaking of that long-awaited storm.

To Don Bob, too, as he stood there, flashed the thought that now before them lay inevitable clash was at hand. The desert was not wide enough for those two men. Only one of them could survive. Jito's arm, and a whispered about his arm, and a whispered "Adios!" to Ted.

Step by step the great shoulders swayed across the floor. It was like the advance of a grimly, leisurely triumphant gloating and irresistible force. He knew that time meant nothing, and that the end was sure. Almost within arm length of Ted the Mexican stopped, so near that Ted could see the veins in the white eyes, and the little beads of sweat that stood out on the dark forehead. Jito swept low his broad sombrero in a gesture of ironic welcome.

"You do us much honor, senores, much honor." The words came as little thinky. The voice was not quite steady, but the black eyes blazed with unmistakable hate. He had not thought to see you so bonor a band of simple vaqueros. thought such salent as yours, senores, were more suitable for the company of women."

The grip on Ted's arm tightened. "Not yet," the quiet voice warned. Jito watched them. He stood slightly crouching, as if swaying. The unmoved silence of those two lashed him to fury. They were so utterly alone, so completely surrounded by his waiting horse, and yet they seemed so wholly unafraid. Riding his riding forward on the smooth floor, Jito moved a pace nearer.

The memory of the American, and of the night that he had spent on the desert with Adela, the memory of Adela drawing down the face of this man and kissing his lips—suddenly all this blazed like fire within Jito, so that the black eyes had become pin-points of hatred and the slow voice had sunk into a growl.

He spoke directly to Ted now.

LATE NEGOVAN VOLAROV

LESTER M. YOUNG

It was learned in this city this morning that Mr. Lester M. Young of 92 Spruce Court Apartments, Toronto, had passed away. The late Mr. Young was for many years in the employ of the Chown Company, Belleville, and some years ago moved to Toronto, where he held a responsible position with the Glass Metal Products Co. It appears that on Sunday, October 4th, Mr. Young had been visiting his son, on Dalhorth Ave., Toronto, and when leaving slipped and fell down the steps leading to his residence, striking a radiator in the hallway, fracturing his skull and sustaining other injuries. He never left the immediate cause of his death, although during the week hope was held out that he would recover, but on Saturday morning, October 4th, he was almost a certainty that he would not survive and he passed on this Tuesday morning.

The late Mr. Young was well and favorably known in this city and in Toronto. He was a veteran member of the Odd Fellows, and an adherent of Carlton Street United Church, Toronto. Besides his wife (a sister of Mrs. J.W. Barlow, this city) and one son Raymond, he leaves, his mother, Mrs. Young, who resides with his sister, Mrs. C. A. Hulley, and two brothers.

LEAGUE WORK EXPLAINED BY MRS. McINTYRE

Catholic Women of Belleville Hear Nat. President

SISTERS' WORK

Educational Phase of Work of Women's League

Belleville sub-division of the Catholic Women's League was signally honored on Sunday evening when Mrs. W. J. McIntyre, Charlottetown, P. E. I., national president of the organization, addressed a large gathering of the members in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy. This was the first visit of this talented officer to Belleville and Mrs. McIntyre's passage on the national aspect of the League's work in Canada gave to her hearers a complete vision of the activities of their organization.

Introduced by Rev. Father C. E. Baker, Mrs. McIntyre expressed her happiness at this opportunity to come to Belleville and talk on league work. The League was founded in three units. The first was the district sub-division, such as Belleville. Its work concerned the home parish and the social activity of the community. Upon the district unit's success the entire organization rose. Its members were the workers, doing good day in and day out.

The next unit was the annual sessions in each community would be held as far as possible. The Catholic social work in Canada were if not for the second unit, the diocesan organization. The work done at home in a general way was reported at the annual diocesan convention which in turn is represented at the national convention.

The Catholic Women's League of Canada, Mrs. McIntyre pointed out, was the only Catholic society, nationally organized, of men or women incorporated under the federal laws of Canada, under its own charter. It was established eleven years ago in Montreal and the small group of women responsible for its constitution and by-laws laid a firm foundation that has stood the test of the years.

Sisters of Service

Mrs. McIntyre told of the organization of the Sisters of Service, a community of sisters engaged in social work among immigrants. This community was supported throughout Canada by the Catholic Women's League and had done wonderful work in caring for the strangers of a girl alone. She spoke of the hostels in the large centres where immigrants could stay for a night, for the district where they would reside. Among the homely services the work of the Sisters of Service was especially important and Mrs. McIntyre recounted, nearly two minutes ahead of George Butler, of Edmonton, who was second, Ernest Hoyrup also of Edmonton, was third.

The correspondence course in Cate chism arranged by the Sisters of Service was invaluable in assisting children in isolated parts of the west in preparation for First Communion and Confirmation.

Education forms a major part of the Catholic Women's League's program and Mrs. McIntyre was urgent in her plea to Catholic mothers to see that their children had a good education. It was important that their education should be at Catholic institutions of learning for it is from grounding in the principles of their faith would safeguard them against the dangers of communism and paganism at work today.

The League Scholarships awarded each year to the girl winning a Dominion wide essay contest were described by Mrs. McIntyre who gave intimate glimpses of the girls who had won them. The scholarships are maintained by subscriptions from branches. The work of Junior Leagues was explained by the national president.

In concluding her address, Mrs. McIntyre made an earnest plea for the members to think of those in distress in southern Saskatchewan and to their aid to relieve it.

"When your own problems are cared for, when you have tended to the wants of the sick and the needy in your own community which has first claim on your resources, think of those unfortunate people starving and hungry, all of us suffering to do our share, making sacrifices to relieve the hardships of others will be living up to the principles enunciated on our banners 'For God and Canada,' a banner under which every Catholic woman should be enrolled."

The appreciation of the audience for the splendid address was expressed by Miss Kate Dolan, while Mrs. C. J. Brennan of Deseronto extended thanks of the visitors present. During the evening delightful vocal solos were given by Mrs. James Grant and Miss Kate Bawden.

100,000 ASK RETURN HOME

London, Oct. 13 (A.P.)—A petition from one hundred thousand emigrants in Australia asking that they be brought back to Great Britain because of their sufferings is under advisement by the government.

As presented by the British Migrants' Association, the plea said the emigrants were induced to leave their homes by "misleading and unthruthful propaganda" on the part of Australian government agents and that they now were in a condition of "misery and starvation and despair."

The petitions are lamentably frequent," the petition said. 'Hundreds of young women are exposed to the gravest dangers and young men are herded together in internment camps where worse conditions than those to which criminals are subjected are the daily lot of many."

The government also was asked to compensate the petitioners for their losses.

OLD CUSTOMS AT FESTIVAL

Festa of Saint Mamiliano On Island of Giglio

Island of Giglio, Italy.—The festa of Saint Mamiliano has reached its climax here and weddings are about to take place on this tiny island. For Saint Mamiliano, not only is supposed to protect the island against all harm, but also is the patron saint of young lovers, who await his festival to be betrothed.

Most of this month has been devoted to his service. The observances began when a relic of the saint was borne in solemn procession around the island. Then fishermen and vinegrowers, priests and villagers put to sea in a picturesque maritime parade and rowed slowly around the island with the relic displayed.

But that was only dull tradition. Action was far as the young folks of the town were concerned. Village tradition forbids a man to address the object of his affections until near the end of the festa of Saint Mamiliano. Then each marriageable girl in the town shuts herself in her room and does her best finery. Then she waits with open doors of her family grouped about her. The youth who had cast of her all those longings looks for a rose in her corsage to the house. So one greets him.

Slowly like someone coming home, he climbs a twisting stone stair to the room of his beloved. The family pretend they do not see him. The girl sits at her window, looking do the sea, awaiting a whispered invitation to dance.

For that is the marriage proposal here. If it is the right man who asks, she turns and nods, and they are engaged. With the family following, the couple go into the street and begin a five-day dance, during which they will dance only with each other and at the end of which they will go to the church of St. Mamiliano to post their banns. During this five day period they will be guests at each others' house or meals.

SWIMMING

The boys of past generations, who had only the 'old swimmin' hole' in which to dispel themselves in summer by any chance visualized the newly appointed "swimmin' hole" which is supplied to the boys of today by the Y.M.C.A. They had often muddy water in which to swim and weeds were often present in which their feet would become entangled but the boys of today are furnished with a pool of clear water, free from obstructions and they do not shiver on the edge before taking the plunge, because they know the water is at just the right temperature for comfort. The boys of olden days however, did not mind a little cold water and "the last one in" was said to be this, that or the other, as happened to suggest itself to 'the gang' at the time. These boys used to undress in the bushes nearby, but the boys at the Y.M.C.A. have dressing booths in which to dress, for which all boys there are shower baths under which they hurl the water before they hit the pool. This does not mean that the old swimmin' hole is a thing of the part, for it is still "going strong" in country districts and many boys in the City have favorite places along the shores of the Moira River and Bay of Quinte where they go swimmin' during the summer months. There seems to be a great many boys, who use the pool at the Y.M.C.A. year round. To see these lively boys diving and swimming—joking and laughing with their companions is indeed an interesting spectacle. Smaller boys just learning to swim, are given careful and watchful attention —in fact, much attention is required. There may be marathon swimmers amongst these boys—it can not be foretold how they will develop. In any event they are happy in developing their sinews included in their physical health and becoming expert in an accomplishment which may not only be a means of saving their own lives but also the lives of others. Under the able and exceedingly patient supervision of Mr. Ernest Bryant, who is very popular with all the boys, the swimming classes at the Y.M.C.A. are a great success and this includes as well the classes for girls.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) proved to be just what Mrs. Mitsalbrook needed.

Art Exhibition Bewilders Laymen with Futuristic

New York, N. Y.—A painting of a man eventually with a rat is just as bewildering to the layman here today as cubistic cabbages and futuristic cows were in the early days when a school of young French artists went underfoot.

"Conversation With a Rat" is the title of one of the modern French and American paintings now on exhibition. It depicts a man bent forward in social subject with a caricature of a small chubby man. In the background of the exhibiting painters, there is Joan Miro's "Peinture de Terre", in other words, potato. What one is told is a potato or two are two little red balls of green and pink flowers the lower edge of the picture. What is like a modern dream of a maid with a skulls head occupies most of the right of the picture. Above a thin witch like object in one corner has something else intergral. Below is a flame. Two miniature acrobats in red, yellow and green tights look like insects.

Davis Stuart exhibits a still life of wrapping paper and flowers. It embraces a number of things that might be interpreted as flowers. For instance there is a mug which tubs from which little black potes to be a flower with yellow top over —or so it seemed to be, might be a bud.

Representing the cubist school is Gabriel Kohn's "Seated Woman". It includes a butcher knife, a table, door, and locks and is done in shades of grey, brown and black.

Woodruff Hale, a young negro, also a pupil of the Australian school, exhibits what is labelled a landscape with trees growing right out of a violin placed on a table and a portfolio pushing up from the floor in front.

Peter Blume has a contribution called "Zeal Battery", which the layman is equally enigmatic. Five cannon are shown with trunks that are bouncing into the air off a wall in the centre of the picture and in the centre of the yellow fort glows down in one corner. There are lively touches of vermillion and blue.

WOMEN PILOTS ON INCREASE

112 First-Class Fliers in England Are Women

London, Oct. 13.—(By The Canadian Press)—Figures issued by the early years of private flying, which are regarded as a record as beginning seven years ago with the production in Great Britain of the first light aeroplane capable of safety for strenuous go-anywhere touring, is more noteworthy than the steady advance of the woman air pilot. Before the end of 1931 it will be improved that the task of aeroplane pilotage and cross-country navigation was by no means one for men only. In the immediate post-war period of events there were few aeroplanes engaged in one or other of the multitude of commercial aviation enterprises which sprang up at the time.

But today, in every flying station, women are qualifying for the pilot's "ticket" in ever-growing numbers. They represent a formidable minority in the ranks of flying club members, while the exploits of the best-known of them—Amy Johnson, Miss Winifred Spooner, Miss Amy Johnson, and the Hon. Mrs. Victor Bruce to mention a few names at random—have proved definitely that the British woman pilot can achieve results in competitive and long-distance flying comparable with all but the very best that men pilots have accomplished. Miss Johnson's few solo to Australia, Lady Bailey alone round Africa; Miss Spooner has done—and again equalled in severe racing contests the speeds and navigational performances of the leading men pilots flying against her.

In Great Britain the first aerial meeting for women competitors only, held at the Northamptonshire Aero Club's aerodrome at Sywell, indicates sufficiently the prominent position attained in the few years by the airwoman. Though the weather was very poor, not one of the women pilots bound for the meeting, some of whom travelled more than a thousand miles, lost their way, and the entire programme of events, including races, aerobatic women in suburban and farm communities.

The scientific explanation of the astounding results brought about by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) is well known. The iron and other elements in the pills increase the amount of haemoglobin or oxygen-carrying agent in the blood. Supplied with more oxygen through the blood, the tissues of the body become vitalized. The body gets better health—a feeling of well-being.

AMUSEMENTS

"FIVE STAR FINAL" ..... IS TREMENDOUS

It was a chastened audience which left the Capitol Theatre last night after seeing "Five Star Final," the Little Cinema-ready melodrama, which so stirred the emotions of Mae Brandeis and Boris Morkun it was presented at the Cort Theatre. The screen version has even added to the punishment for the audience of the play. It is all there —dramatic — tragedy — satire — hypocrisy — love —and all that is life.

The theme of "Five Star Final" may have brought to the lives of innocent people by the circulation boosting and utterly heartless methods of certain types of yellow journalism in the United States. The owner of the paper while constantly urging more sensational stories for the paper is as convincingly written to give her an opportunity to show every side of her many talents. Anyhow it does.

She gets years of laughter in her comedy scenes when Polly Moran, in the vivid scene in the 'political meeting,' where she faces the crowd and mayor, she does one of the finest pieces of character work ever seen on the screen. Here is a typical housewife, she changes to an actress, a public representative, a hoodlum and dominating the scene by her wonderful personality.

Laughs and Tears

Those who have seen her in "Anna Christie" or "Min and Bill," know her character work. Those who have seen "Eight Bells" or "Reducing" know how she garners laughs. In this picture you are the Marie Dressler of both types.

Charles F. Reisner deserves much credit for the deft direction of the new production, in which Marie Dressler is the mayor-lady. With Polly Moran as her campaign manager. The scenes at the rally are exceedingly funny.

The love interest is played by two personable young people, Wm. Haxwell and Karen Morley and John Millian contributes wickedness as the sinister gangster leader. Tom Kennedy does a splendid minor character work as the crooked manager. Jean Marsh as the girl victim of the gangs is appealing and good to look upon. An outstanding comedy figure is Rosco Ates, stuttering defendant of "The Big House," as Polly's husband.

A varied and entertaining program of short subjects preceded the exhibition of the feature attraction.

The entire program will be repeated again tonight, for the last time, and if you are in need of a good laugh tonic, see Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in "Politics."

MILITARY IN JAPAN'S MOVE

Writer Says Action Bold Bid For Internal Power

Moscow, Oct. 13.—A striking picture of Far Eastern events is given by an American writer, Upton Close, for many years familiar with China and Japan, who has just arrived in Moscow from Peiping, via Mukden, Harbin and the Chinese-Siberian Railway after two months in Japan and China, where he had interviews with Japanese officials in Tokio, Shanghai, Nanking, Peiping and Mukden.

Mr. Close's account is interesting because, on the whole, it coincides with information available in Moscow, which is watching events in Manchuria with the keen est attention, despite the official reticence of the press and public officials.

Mr. Close asserts the Japanese action in Manchuria is a "bold back-seat driver" movement, but that their hand was forced by the military, and the statement accordingly is not to be taken as the Japanese movement generally. Hirohito, the Emperor, is young people and rallied the press and mass opinion to the support of the military clique.

The only one of the five aviators with him found their plans being sucked into the crater by their flow through the stifling gases above it. Only Rubbart, who was flying alone and at a power dive, he said, were they able to escape what for a time appeared certain death.

PURCHASES IN FITZROY TNP. FOR HYDRO

Right-of-Way Department Head's Report to Hon. J. R. Cooke

VALUE QUESTION

Chairman of H.E.P.C. Issues Report to the Press

In handing to the press a report as to the purchase of lands in Fitzroy township by the Commission, the Hon. J. R. Cooke, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, stated:

"I am giving you a report made to the Commission by Mr. Hugill, head of the Right-of-Way Department.

"The report speaks for itself and fully outlines the pertinent facts and circumstances in connection with the purchase of the properties.

"The Commission believes that the criticism in the press, and otherwise, of these purchases is based on inadequate knowledge and information."

Hon. J. R. Cooke:

Re: Purchase of Lands in Fitzroy Township for Development of Chats Falls on the Ottawa River.

You have called my attention to Press despatches pointing out that Judge F. J. Daly in recent proceedings before him upon an appeal to Fitzroy Township against the decision of Carleton County Council with reference to equalization of assessment of the Township for County purposes, in giving his reasons for judgment, placed a total value of $15,000, upon twelve properties for which the Commission, through the Right-of-Way Department, had paid $40,778.00.

You have asked me for a report as to these purchases with such observations and comments as I may think appropriate.

I hand to you herewith list of purchases in Fitzroy township of lands acquired by the Commission in connection with this development. This shows in each case the name of the vendor, the acreage purchased and the price per acre.

I also hand to you herewith report of myself from Mr. A. S. Hugill, head of the Right-of-Way department, who negotiated all these purchases, making brief comments on each of the properties.

You will observe that the price paid was approximately $43.00 per acre. The properties were, in most cases, actual operating farms occupied and cultivated by the owners.

In the proceedings referred to the Judge had obviously under consideration only the value of the properties of the agricultural land. Witnesses were, and the Judge found, that the farms in question "were of low quality, rocky and unfor cultivation and, in most cases, inaccessible" and witnesses also swore that certain islands in the Ottawa River which the Commission had to, and did acquire, had no value whatever—for these islands we paid $2,844.00.

For the same reasons, as found by the Judge, these witnesses swore that another block of 74 acres acquired by the Commission at a cost of $3,324.00 had no value whatever and the Judge's findings are based on the evidence of these witnesses and without commenting on the prices paid for properties, states: "the properties in question were not saleable and would probably be held by the owners for a very long time had not the Hydro Electric Commission come along and purchased them for their own particular purposes—it was unfair for the respondent (the County) to take the sale prices (prices paid by the Commission) into consideration when making a computation of equalization."

The Judge was, of course, right in taking the ground he did that a price paid by a Commission for a property because of "special adaptability" for its particular purposes would not be a safe guide for assessment purposes and it is perfectly clear that the Judge in making the statement he did as to the value of these lands, had given no consideration whatever to the other factors which did not concern him on an assessment equalization appeal, but which a Board of Arbitration would have to take into consideration in fixing the amount the Commission should be compelled to pay in any expropriation proceedings. And I fancy that the Judge will be greatly surprised to find that his remarks have been construed as a criticism of the price paid by the Commission for lands acquired for its "particular purposes."

It would appear from the judgment that it was not easy to fix the value even as agricultural lands. The Judge states that the assessment of properties in Fitzroy township is probably about 45 per cent. of the actual value of the properties but five of these properties are actually assessed at 100 per cent. of the value placed on them by the witnesses and the Judge's finding in other words, if the Judge and the witnesses are right as to the value, then the Township Assessor had assessed these properties at more than double the amount he should have done in view of the 50 per cent. basis upon which other assessments are made in the township.

These lands are all contiguous to the border on the Ottawa River, the Mississippi River or the Mississippi Syne, and in any proceedings to expropriate these lands from the owners other factors than that of agricultural value must be taken into consideration.

As a result of our development at Chats Falls, a large part of these lands must be flooded, and the price which the Commission might be compelled to pay for the lands for the "particular purposes" of the Commission would not be any proper index of the value of these lands in the Township upon any equalization assessment appeal.

The legal doctrine of "special adaptability" for the purposes of the Commission and the private rights of the owners would be factors, and important factors, before any Arbitration Board in determining the amount which the Commission would be compelled to pay.

In addition to these special considerations, all these owners stress the fact that these lands have a special value as mineral lands and as these lands surround the property of the Kingdon Mining Company, which holds a block of over three thousand acres, this kind of claim before an Arbitration Board would have to be treated seriously.

The Kingdon Mining Company claims that its lands cost it, on the average, $100.00 an acre and, as you know, the Kingdon Mining Company is making a claim of approximately $1,000,000 against the Commission for certain of these lands that Certain flooding rights that the Commission must acquire, and I am advised that valuable mineral deposits are just as likely to be discovered on the acquired lands as on much of the Kingdon Mining Company's lands.

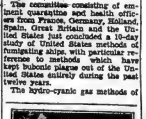
All negotiations with the Kingdon Company have up to date, we have failed and our expropriation proceedings in respect to this serious claim are pending.

In acquiring these properties in question, we have, in the settlement, made good bargains and avoided the serious possibility of being involved with damage claims not based on agricultural values, but on other elements of value which are not in any way before Judge Daly.

This is altogether apart from the general policy of the Department to make every reasonable effort to acquire necessary properties by negotiation and, unless the claims are unreasonable or extravagant, avoid expensive arbitrations.

You will not overlook that there was a considerable amount of standing timber on the properties, the value to the Commission of this timber being in some cases estimated as high as the total price paid for the properties as you will note from Mr. White's report, in one of the more important properties purchased, the owner originally asked for the timber alone more than twice as much as the amount at which we finally purchased the property, including the timber. The report of our cruisers shows an actual timber value of approximately the lump sum paid for the property and the purchase price of this property alone is more than one-third of the total of $40,778.00 paid for all the properties.

There are a number of other properties in the immediate vicinity, and generally of a similar character to those we have now been able to acquire by negotiation, and where prices ranging from $100 to $300 per acre are being demanded. These properties, I assume, must ultimately be acquired under expropriation proceedings and, when these values are finally fixed, I think it will be made very clear that the purchased properties were acquired at reasonable prices and at substantially less cost to the Commission than we will be compelled to pay when we get our final award under arbitration proceedings.



The Right-of-Way Department is under fire upon two fronts. We are criticized for paying extravagant amounts for the lands referred to by Judge Daly—and, on the other hand, in the arbitration proceedings, we are being attacked for not offering fair prices and, as I understand this report or the substance of it may be given to the press, I have avoided outlining in greater detail our available evidence and material intended for use on one front might be used against us by our antagonists on the other front.

RAT PROBLEMS FACES LEAGUE

New York — Improved methods of slaying rats has engaged the attention of League of Nations' experts. Success of the United States in barring from its shores the rodent which carries the deadly bubonic plague has been studied first hand by an international committee of doctors appointed by the League.

The committee consisting of emigration quarantine and health officers from France, Germany, Holland, Spain, Great Britain and the United States just concluded a 10-day study of United States methods of fumigating ships, with particular reference to methods which have kept bubonic plague out of the United States entirely during the past twelve years.

The hydro-cyanic gas methods of destroying rats in vessels arriving here engaged the attention of the foreign experts particularly, said Dr. F. A. Carmella, assistant surgeon general in charge of foreign quarantine and immigration for the U. S. Public Health Service.

Scarecrow Man Has Split Mind

Denver, Colo., Oct. 10.—The "scarecrow man" is no longer mute.

Charles Mays of Beardsley, Kan., has given voice to speech for the first time since he was brought to the Colorado Psychopathic Hospital here from a cornfield near Holyoke, Colo., where he was found with his body rigid and arms extended last Sunday. Although Mays talked incoherently, physicians believe that within a short time he may be able to intelligently answer questions asked him. Mays was identified Thursday by his brother, Wesley Mays, of Beardsley.

After hours of observation, psychiatrists have diagnosed the "scarecrow" man's case as schizophrenia, or a split-mind. He lives, they said, in a world of half fantasy and half reality. Persons afflicted with this mental disorder are unable, they said, to associate the reality of life with the unreal.

A turtle estimated to be fully 200 years old and weighing 80 lbs. was taken recently on the banks of the Qu'Appelle River, near Tantallon, Saskatchewan.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 54. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Another month and they reached a little river port. Here d'Arnot cabled his government for a three months' leave and his banker for funds. During their wait the bandsome "Monsieur Tarzan" became the wonder of both blacks and whites. A huge native had run amuck and terrorized the town. On the hotel verandah the black spied Tarzan. With a roar he charged the ape-man. Tarzan met the rush; his steel muscles gripped the black wrist of the uplifted knife-hand, a single wrench left the hand dangling below a broken bone. Crying with agony, the fellow ran away. Tarzan resumed reading.

Again Tarzan accepted a challenge. He was to kill a lion single-handed. Naked he went into the jungle armed only with knife and rope. With his wild days methods, at last he got the beast. Shouting the awesome victory cry, he shouldered the carcass, returned to the amazed group, and claimed the reward.

Often Tarzan longed for the freedom of the jungle. But loyalty to d'Arnot, the vision of a beautiful face, and the memory of warm kisses lured him onward. At length d'Arnot succeeded in chartering a small boat, and they set sail down the coast to dig for the buried treasure. Next day he returned bearing the great chest. Three weeks later they boarded a French steamer. D'Arnot was taking Tarzan to Paris, for would he divulge

Arriving, Tarzan, garbed once more in his jungle regalia, set out alone for the ape's kingdom where lay the treasure. Next day he returned bearing the great chest. Three weeks later they boarded a French steamer. D'Arnot was taking Tarzan to Paris, for would he divulge

EDISON LIES IN DEEP SLEEP

Man Who Rested Only 5 Hours a Day, Today Forced to Sleep

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 13—Long hours of heavy sleep have come to Thomas Edison—he who labored intermittently most of his 84 years on as meagre five hours of rest a day.

Dr. Robert S. Howe, the inventor's physician, said today that "Pa" was resistance to the complication of diseases from which he suffers has been "sweating."

"His heart action is good," said the doctor, "but he is definitely ailing, day by day."

The inexorableness of stewed pears was the only nourishment the dying man could take yesterday, Dr. Howe said. This, he added, was not enough to maintain his strength against the combatting ailments.

Mr. Edison failed yesterday for the first time during his illness to recognize his wife. A bulletin issued last night by his son, Charles, said the inventor's condition was "practically unchanged" and that "no immediate crisis is feared."

Police Seek Boys Who Scratch Cars

This is a very low form of amusement and the police are endeavoring to locate the guilty persons.

Bullet Hits Road In Front of Car

Boys amusing themselves with rifles near the Dale road west of the railway crossing, startled Mr. Clark of Rosemont when he heard a bullet "whirr" distinctly shortly before seven o'clock Sunday evening. On reaching the city he reported the occurrence to the city police and Sergeant Booth went out to investigate and found two boys, two of them with rifles. He brought the boys to the police station, later allowing them to go to their homes, but retained the rifles. The boys will be called upon shortly to answer for their conduct.

TYPHOON CAUSES THIRTY DEATHS IN JAPAN

Worst Storm in Years Sweeps Japan, Houses Washed Away by Floods

Slight Earthquake Adds To Terror of People

BRIDGES COLLAPSE

Thousands of Houses Flooded in Disaster in Orient

Tokyo, Oct. 14 (AP) —Thirty were known dead and many were missing today following one of the worst typhoons in years. First reports that 200 persons were missing in the town of Oga Mire prefecture, could not be confirmed.

Torrential rains accompanied by high winds, swept Western and Central Japan yesterday, causing floods and devastation in their wake, in many districts. In the Yoko-Yokohama district a slight earthquake occurred at the height of the storm, adding to the anxiety of the populace.

Considerable damage was done to shipping and property along the coastal regions and the inland sea. The greatest damage, however, was done along the Chadi river in Miye prefecture.

Numerous rescue parties were searching for refugees in the river districts of Yamaguchi prefecture, where several hundred houses were washed away.

Bridges and roads were washed away in Osaka, Yokohama and other large cities, thousands of houses in low-lying districts were flooded.

FORTY-SEVEN MILES CLOSER TO OTTAWA

Mayor Reid Enthusiastic Over Highway Thru Hastings

BOON TO CITY

Foresees Great Volume of Traffic Passing Thru Belleville

Belleville will be forty-seven miles nearer Ottawa when the new highway which stretches across the middle of Hastings county is completed, than it is by the eastern route, Mayor Reid was in Tweed on Tuesday and saw the plans of the roadway as now given great adoption in this for the development of Belleville.

Speaking to a reporter the mayor remarked that this would mean that Belleville's population would pour a great volume of motor traffic to and from Ottawa, owing to the route being shorter via Belleville and Tweed or Madoc than by the highway according to the old route via Belleville. Accordingly Belleville will have to lay plans for the accommodation of motor cars and parking, he said.

The work, he states, is to start at once on this section running across the middle of the county and will be rushed as a relief undertaking.

The route will be followed from Peterboro, across to the Hastings boundary, from Harmers to Madoc to Tweed and thence north east through Actinolite (formerly Bridgewater).

Tenders for the construction of a portion of this way are to be opened in a few days.

The Centre Hastings there is great enthusiasm with the promise of the linking up of the district with Peterboro al and provincial capitals and with the consequent improvements which this will bring. The undertaking will also provide relief.

Belleville of course will be linked up with the roadway across the province.

HARBOR MAY BE DREDGED

Largest Boats On Lakes Would Be Able to Enter This Dock

The industrial branch of the Chamber of Commerce met on Tuesday night in Dickens' restaurant for their monthly gathering and a splendid discussion was held on the advisability of the Dominion government undertaking the dredging operations in the Bay of Quinte to allow the larger boats to dock at the Belleview wharf.

W. E. Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings, was the guest at the luncheon and entered freely into the discussion with the members and probably some good will come from this meeting.

Last spring a dredge was placed at Telegraph Light to dredge a channel in 6 feet deep but the dredge was taken away in September last and the industrial firm managers in the city wanted to know from Mr. Tummon if this meant the cessation of this work permanently. It would be possible if Telegraph Light and the quay and the government dock in this city were dredged to 16 feet, for all the tankers, cement boats and the like could enter the harbor and the Industrial Alcohol Company to safely navigate the Bay of Quinte and the Belleville harbor. It was pointed out like that to happen as it would make for cheaper production.

Mr. Tummon promised the meeting he would give their request every consideration and take the matter up with officials in Ottawa.

Burglars Carry Safe to Rear of Garage, Suddenly Stop Work

Some time during Monday night burglars entered the garage of Mr. Lloyd Ketchenson, Frankford. They were after money and the safe was the object of their attack. Where the safe was located did not afford a satisfactory place to carry on their operations. They were husky burglars, so they removed the safe from the office at the front of the building to the inside rear of the garage. Here they set to work with an acetylene torch to melt their way to fortune. They either became discouraged in the attempt to open the safe, or were alarmed by some sound from without, as next morning the safe was found locked securely. Some progress, however, had been made by the burglars as the handle of the safe was half burned off. Provincial Constable Hammer has been assigned to the case. Recent finger prints found on the safe have been taken and the Provincial Constable is continuing investigations.

CABINET OF SPAIN FALLS

President Zamora Resigns After Six Months in Office

Madrid, Oct. 14 (AP)—Niceto Alcala Zamora resigned today as president of the Spanish Republic, six months to the day after he was first provisionally elected to that office.

The President offered his resignation once before recently but withdrew it when members of the cabinet persuaded him to remain in office. This time, however, he said it would be impossible to reconsider his decision.

Spain's Republican government appeared to have collapsed this afternoon with the resignation of President Alcala Zamora, which was followed quickly by reports that his whole cabinet also had stepped out.

Passing Too Close Caused Accident

Two cars trying to pass too close caused an accident on the Wooler road about 20 yards south of the C.N.R. subway near Trenton early on Tuesday, a truck owned by Gilbert O. Root, Mallorytown, and driven by his son, Carman, and a car owned by Roy J. Brown, R.R. No 1, Trenton, sideswiped. The car of Brown has a complete wreck after the accident. Mr. Brown had his four year old son with him and he had was slightly cut from flying glass but none of the others implicated in the accident were injured, which was a miracle. Mr. Brown was driving north and the truck was proceeding south. It is understood from the police at Trenton, that the truck and car were trying to pass too close together. The Brown car struck the front of the truck and then the rack on the truck caught the car throwing it away. Constable Huffman, the first traffic officer for Trenton, investigated the accident for the police.

MOTORCYCLE, CAR COLLIDE

Accident Near Bloomfield At Turn Into Lane

The District Office of the Ontario Provincial Police, Belleville, received this Wednesday morning a report from Provincial Constable Dumford of Picton covering an accident which occurred on the high way a few miles east of Picton last Sunday night about eight o'clock Mr. Ralph Cahoon, R.R. 1 Picton, was motoring towards Bloomfield and coming to a lane into which he desired to turn, he stopped to allow a car to pass before making the turn. A motor cycle, driven by Mr. William Leavitt, Picton, approached just as Mr. Cahoon turned, and the car and motor cycle crashed together, resulting in Mr. Leavitt sustaining a fractured left arm and leg. The front wheel of the motor cycle was broken and the body badly twisted. The radiator, crank shaft and both head lights of the car were damaged. County Constable Lovelace of Bloomfield investigated the accident with Provincial Constable Dumford. The report states that the motor cycle was travelling at a moderate rate of speed, also that Mr. Cahoon states that he had seen the motor cycle approaching.

MISS WALTON GIVES RECITAL

Former Belleville Resident Delights North Bay Audience

What was perhaps the most delightful affair of its kind so far this season took place in the St. John's Parish House, North Bay, on Thursday evening last in the form of a classic and old time recital by Miss Bertha Walton, mezzo-soprano, Montreal, who was ably assisted by Mrs. H. L. Bamford, pianiste. The recital was held in aid of the St. John's Chancel Guild and was a success.

Refreshments were served in Ballard Hall at 9 o'clock, following the musical programme, and a dance took place in the Oliver Hall with Mrs. P. O. Brown and her orchestra supplying the music.

The artists of the evening were introduced by Rev. H. A. Sims, who at the same time extended thanks to the Ladies of the Chancel Guild for arranging a program of such delightful entertainment.

The program for the main part consisted of vocal solos by Miss Streibel Walton, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Bamford. Several piano solos were also played by Mrs. Bamford.

FERGUSON IS CONFIDENT

Says Prosperity Will Return in Britain and Canada

Toronto, Oct., Oct. 14—(CP) Confidence in the return to prosperity in Great Britain and Canada was voiced yesterday by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London on the eve of his departure for England, concluding a two-months' holiday in the Dominion, he declared both countries would soon forge ahead as leaders in the political and economic life of the world.

Intra-Empire trade is far from being a side-tracked issue, he declared in an interview. He foresaw increased attention in England in the near future. He declined to discuss the political situation in Great Britain but he had not the slightest doubt as to the effect of the election there on the future of Empire trade.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson left here last night for Quebec where they will embark today on the Empress of Britain.

NEIGHBORS TALK

"I am employed in a theatre and it is a problem to make ends meet, as it help support my mother and sisters, I like to dress well but haven't very much to spend on clothes. To give the appearance of variety to my slender wardrobe I change the color of a dress or stockings as often as the things become faded. I always use Diamond Dyes for the work—using them as dyes for dresses and as tints for stockings. I have always gotten such perfect results that our colleagues talk about the great number of new things I have.

"I learned about Diamond Dyes from our wardrobe mistress. She says she has tried all the dyes on the market but none do such splendid work and are so easy to use as Diamond Dyes. I understand they are the world's most popular dyes—and they deserve to be."

Bennett Meets N. Y. Financiers

Ottawa, Oct. 14—Premier Bennett's visit to New York yesterday was regarded here as being of great importance to Canadian business.

His speech at the Canadian Club in that city was not the sole object of the journey, it is believed. The Prime Minister gave no inkling before leaving here as to his activities in the metropolis but it is regarded as certain that, in connection with the present currency and financial situation, he met with New York business to see important financial men in Wall Street.

Wells Brings Six-Point Economic Plan

New York, Oct. 14—H. G. Wells came to the United States last night for a month's visit and brought with him a six-point economic plan which he thinks would solve the world's ills, but, which, he said, he had no hope of anyone adopting.

For an hour the famous British author talked of revolutions, the unemployment problem and war, which, he thinks, will be fought principally with gas and flames; of the forgetting of all economic lessons and of the crash he expects twenties which he thinks will bring civilization to take in the near future.

Italians Offended By Auto-Dumping Clause

Rome, Oct. 14. — Displeasure in Italy at the decision of the Canadian government to apply anti-dumping tariff provisions against imports from countries whose currency has depreciated in foreign exchange markets yesterday was reflected in an editorial appearing in Giornale D'Italia.

It is unfair, the newspaper said, to apply anti-dumping provisions against Italian imports, as the Lira now remains on the gold standard, and any oscillation in its rate of exchange will be of short duration.

Voices Faith in Nation's Resources Before New York Canadian Club

By THOMAS CAMPBELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 14.—In highly optimistic and ringing terms, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of the sister nation, emphasized last night Canada's unconquerable belief in her future as a nation. The Prime Minister spoke at the opening of the new home of the Canadian Club of New York.

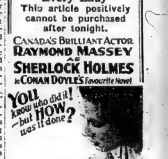
"Canada has an immense, an unconquerable belief in herself," Prime Minister Bennett declared, and with his remarks whole-hearted applause broke forth from his audience. "We have the faith that has accepted good times as our natural due and bad times as only an interlude in our onward prosperity and the still greater prosperity that is to come. I suppose we were born that way, and all the forces of world-wide events are powerless to change us. That does not mean that Canadians are visionary dreamers, or reckless and prodigal, for they are not. In any kind of life, thrift and economy are necessary. In our pioneering lives, they are veritable necessities. But I think that many Canadians are confused between the belief that they have and what they would have them. We face whatever situation may arise with the knowledge that however bad it may be, hard work by all our people, courage in every walk of life, and the most intelligent co-operation among the elements which compose our society cannot fail to bother our position."

The Prime Minister faced distinguished fellow Canadians prominent in the professional and business life of the United States. Leading American citizens engaged largely in industry, commerce and representatives of European countries augmented his audience. From all came plaudits as the Prime Minister spoke of Canada's unbounding faith in herself. Canadian ensigns intermingled with the Union Jack in the banquet room of the new club quarters.

Bank Statements Free

"I am not here today to discuss the state of affairs in Canada," Premier Bennett explained. "But for the purpose, the very happy purpose, of meeting old friends and seeing the turn of events which carry us hither and thither, has too long separated from me. Besides, to gentlemen whose normal business it is to keep in touch with economic conditions on this continent and elsewhere is stimulated through relationship to our country, there is little I could say which is not already known to you. Our trade reports, our bank statements, our reviews just appear as they are published and made available to all. They tell the story of our progress in these troubled times, that, and the fact that our great institutions built upon the foundations we long ago determined to be sound, stand unshaken in this economic convulsion which, has rocked the world.

"You all know that and the reason as well why, though we have problems, though we have unemployment, though Nature this year has been unkind to our western wheat areas, our problems are less acute than those of other countries, our unemployment situation while serious is controllable, and the making calamity in our west is one from which we can forecast an early recovery.



"Knowing the reasons, it is perhaps unnecessary to dwell upon them. Some day it is because of the incalculable wealth of our vast mineral and other natural resources; others because youthful Canada does not fail so readily a victim to the evils that prey upon older civilizations; others again suggest it is because we have achieved a unity in action which multiplies our strength to resist the influences which would check our forward march. Without doubt, all these reasons have been factors in the result, but, in my belief, there is a far more current reason and as it cannot readily be gathered from printed documents or appreciated by the casual observer, I shall tell you what it is."

Copyright 1931 by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.

One of the first things d'Arnot did upon their arrival in Paris was to arrange to visit a high official of the police department, an old friend. He took Tarzan with him. Here was explained to them the fascinating science of identifying criminals by finger-prints. Tarzan was interested.

Tarzan requested that his own fingerprints be taken. This done, d'Arnot drew forth a little book, turning to a page where were several tiny smudges. Surprised, Tarzan watched, recalling how he had given the finger to Esmeralda. Then he realized the meaning of their visit to the police bureau!

The answer to his life's riddle lay in those marks! With tense nerves Tarzan leaned forward. Was he a pure-blooded white man, the son of Lord Greystoke? Or was he a half-savage ape-man?

Much depended upon the absolute correctness of the comparisons. Several days' delay was necessary.

And now Tarzan was able at last to see the treasure. When the great oak, iron-bound chest was forced open, it was found to contain gold and silver—"doubloons" and "pieces of eight" from pirates' raids along the Spanish Main. Tarzan decided to take it intact to America with him.

What crime, suffering, and sorrow the thing had caused in its bloody history! So d'Arnot advised disposing of it forever. When the gold was appraised, it brought more than two hundred thousand dollars. And now Tarzan was doubly anxious to start upon his way to find Jane.

CANON CODY

With amazing unanimity of approval which was to be expected the people of Ontario have looked upon the appointment of Canon H. J. Cody to the presidency of the University of Toronto in succession to Sir Robert Falconer. His preeminence in the church, his wide catholicity of feeling and thought, and his warm personality, make him as the man fit for the post and one whom the people delight to honor, because of his fitness for the office.

As a member of the Board fo Governors, of the University, Canon Cody has long and faithfully served the interests of education in the province of Ontario. He was associated officially with education as Minister in the Hearst regime and retired after the defeat of the government, because his interest was education not politics.

Nowhere in Ontario was the news received with more interest than in Belleville where Canon Cody, the benign churchman and the public man is held in highest esteem.

No man has been in more constant and intimate touch with matters of education than he, not only through his association with the university but also through his work in the church which has taught him the supreme value of the right sort of education.

PEDESTRIANS

Pedestrians who use Belleville's busiest intersection, Front and Bridge Street, would welcome the day when restrictions are placed upon traffic of motors at this corner in the way prohibition of the turn.

Serious consideration ought to be given to the question of this problem. At present the pedestrian has the right to cross with the red light but he has to look behind him lest a car making the right hand turn strike him down. Most pedestrians yield their place and let the motorists have their own way on the turn.

The left hand turn of course does not cause the same amount of trouble to the pedestrian but it is a point and a menace to the motoring class and is responsible for the slowing up of traffic.

Some day there will be change but why it should not be made in this present generation seems hard to understand. There is an obstacle to change of course, that like persuction is unfortunately so close to the bridge and is at the corner where two direct lines of traffic cross. But the pedestrian's right to be allowed some rights and yet no one seems to have thought of him even though the pedestrians may still outnumber those who travel on wheels.

HUMAN FAILURE

Ninety-five per cent of accidents are due to man failure. The human mechanism just does not work as it ought to work.

Most accidents appear in the last analysis to be preventable. There is either carelessness, or there is a momentary lapse in the attention, some little diversion which precipitates the calamity.

It is the duty of motorists to keep themselves fit for their important task of piloting motorcars along a highway, one of the most responsible of positions..

HOW LONG, O AUTHOR?

"Thousands of readers were delighted when a long novel turned up a couple of years ago," comments the Literary Digest Times. "It had other virtues besides length. It was a genuine story, with a plot and agreeably complicated, and a dozen readers of the kind that somehow get themselves into ordinary conversation as if they were real friends. What a pleasant change that was! Novels had become so concentrated that reviewers must have felt compunctious about their praise of economy. Perhaps some of the novelists had misunderstood the use of that word. As the $2 book shrank in its covers, sentences and paragraphs withered. Sometimes a sentence, doubtless full of hidden meaning, contained two words. The rest was left to asterisks and the imagination of the reader. Dialogue became more staccato than a machine gun. Yet some of the little novels were marvels of appeal. They won laurels from the critics, awards from the prize givers, and buyers enough to put them in the front rank of best sellers.

"Then a book in the old style turned up, long and leisurely. The reviewers praised it. They made it quite clear that here was something out of line with the popular trend. It could not hope to win or hold a public accustomed to the short and sharp. But it did. Since then books have grown bigger. Authors and publishers are not less observant than playwrights and producers. As surely as a play profitably dealing with Abie and Rosie results in a flood of plays on the same string, a successful long novel will bring a crowd of aspirants to equal honors.

"If only the followers wrote novels as good as the original, critics and ordinary readers would not look back longingly to the days of the brief tale. Reviewers always have heaps of books awaiting their attention, but how much sadder is their fate when each volume is a tribute to the present taste for fat ones!"

SUNFLOWER'S SONG
By Aline Michaelis

The sunflower owes allegiance
To nothing save the sun;
But, ah! how can she meet the hours
When day is done?

Her fealty is splendid,
Her very heart she bares;
But as dusk deepens she must know
What bleak despair!

I know how she must ache for
Through the black abyss of night;
In all the whirling universe
No golden light!

I ko whow she must ache for
The signal-lights of dawn;
Her fear-filled vigils I can share
Since you are gone!

Yet eastward I am looking,
Morn's gates are almost won;
I lift my petals up in hope,
Come back, my sun!

HIGHER STANDARDS are required today for commercial and business, according to an article in the Rotarian magazine which says that college men are so plentiful today that if a man is to keep up with the procession he should have a master's or even a doctor's degree in his field. Education today is a far cry from the little red school house days where boys and girls were started on the road to education, a slow start at that, just given a slight push out into the great world where they had to educate themselves. Today with vocational and technical schools and manual training, practical education is making great strides and the youth of today are years ahead of the youth of yesterday in the everyday requirements of the work for a living world. While this adjustment to the machine age is being made it is urged that students look at their studies longer instead of swelling the great army of job hunters. Securing an education is becoming easier as the years go by, what with evening classes in almost every concievable subject likely to be useful in the battle of life, free libraries and daily newspapers which furnish a liberal education in themselves if read aright. College educations are harder to get and should be made available to all who desire them, in the opinion of many thinkers who see promising human material halted at the campus gates for lack of money to pay the fees which other lads not keen on a college education but willing to absorb the college bred stamp for distinction slide easily through the gates on the hard-earned dollars of a Dad whose education stared in little red school house and finished in the contacts made in the world of books and business. However, if college education were made to taste we would have much greater number of self-educated man who worked his way through college washing dishes, waiting on table, selling books or taking orders for magazines, aluminum, vaccuum cleaners, brooms and brushes. which creates the thought that if all the magazine salesmen go to college there will have to be some new colleges built to accommodate them or very large additions made, and that's about enough on the educational question for one day.

WHISTLING MORONS do not care a continental, whether Professor Charles Gray Shaw, of New York University, thinks they are balmy in the bean or not, but suspicions of the professor's complete sanity, according to his own standards, are aroused by Walter Winchell's statement that he caught Professor Shaw whistling while waiting his turn to talk to Winchell in the New York Mirror office not so long ago. And a darn poor whistler he was too, says Walter, a lip performer, not a throat warbler. So that's that, and we purpose keeping right on whistling even though we can't carry a tune.

"This is enough to try the patience of Job," exclaimed the vicar to his wife, after reading the newspaper. "Last Sunday I preached from the text, 'Be ye therefore steadfast,' and the printers have made it read, 'Be ye there for breakfast'."

Other Papers' Opinions

CONSCRIPTED CHILDREN

There is a movement among Ontario educationists to raise the age at which children are admitted to public school. In Woodstock, at any rate, it is acknowledged that pupils are being prepared for secondary school in a period of time too short by a year. Some people are beginning to question the value of a law which requires all children to remain at school until they are 16. The criticism is made that the collegiate curriculum directs too definitely to university; that many students go to college who will never be able to capitalize the years spent there, and that the pre-university spends too much, proportionately, upon higher education.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END?

The speed with which President Hoover's proposal for creating a $500,000,000 corporation to stabilize frozen assets of banks is being carried out shows that the United States really means business in this move. On the third day after the President's announcement the National Credit Corporation was already well organized. The prompt it constitutes a really practical step, and rightly is the basis for solid optimism.

This plan is directed towards remedying the greatest weakness in the present world situation, namely, the disorganization in the United States financial structure through lack of confidence in the banking situation. If the United States, the repository of the world's gold, becomes financially disorganized, as things are, many of the banks in need of assistance have few assets of the character prescribed under the present rules. Nevertheless, the great majority of these have ample values to apply against their liabilities, provided that assets which have been frozen by the stagnation of business and the drop in security prices can be mobilized. In particular, it is desirable that real estate and commercial values should be mobilized at this time.—Montreal Star.

A SHORTAGE IN VILLAINS

Efforts are being made to surround the movies with so interracial good will presented through motion pictures. These Chinese, for instance, are not a race of villains, although that might be the natural assumption. Our Japanese moviegoers who for years have seen them generally portrayed as direct wicked.

Movie writers, perhaps, chosen members of a race for villainous parts because they occupied a position of little importance from the region in which the pictures would be shown. But now China has its cinema theatres, and Chinese audiences fail to understand the villainy which has been assigned to the lended social standing of their countrymen. Some are made to mend through the pictures with knives in their backs, and supposedly Oriental smirks on the faces of China has objected. Pictures thus misrepresenting the Chinese have by banned from Chinese theatters.

In the search for substitutes the movie makers have found further complications, for pictures are made to be shown not alone in one country, and any other race so grossly libelled will immediately protest. And American audiences, enlightened by travel and radio and reading, frequently regard with suspicion and offtimes disgust the unfair presentation of other peoples in inferior light.

Hollywood now seeks some far-off and insignificant country from which its villains may be lifted. It will have difficulty. Perhaps the best thing would be to invent all special villains. Then there would be necessary "foreign villains" could while waiting his turn to talk to Winchell in the New York Mirror office not so long ago. And a darn poor whistler he was too, says Walter, a lip performer, not a throat warbler. So that's that, and we purpose keeping right on whistling even though we can't carry a tune.

Poet's Corner

THE LANTERNS OF ST. EULALIE
In the October afternoon.
Orange and purple and maroon,

Goes quiet Autumn, lamp in hand,
About the apple-colored land,

They glimmer in the orchard shade
Like fiery opals set in jade,—

Crimson and russet and raw gold
Yellow and green and scarlet old.

And O when I am far away
By foaming reef or azure bay,

In crowded street or hot lagoon,
Or under the strange austral moon,

When the homesickness comes to me
For the great marshes by the sea,

The running dike, the brimming tide,
And the dark firs on Pundy side,

In dream once more I shall behold
Like signal lights, those globes of gold

Hung out to every apple tree—
The Lanterns of St. Eulalie.

Reichtag Convenes First Since March

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Reichstag convened today for its first session since March with all the members of Chancellor Heinrich Bruning's new cabinet present, but with the Nationalist Opposition absent on the session opened.

Apparently the opposition members planned a late entry into the chamber.

Extraordinary precautions had been taken to prevent rioting and window smashing, such as marked the opening at last autumn's session. The streets were patrolled by a strong force of police and the Reichstag building resembled a fortress, with police trucks parked around it.

LABOR IS WARY

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 14 (CP)—Wary of becoming involved in unemployed schemes organized Labor of the United States has decided to leave the question of its approval of the gigantic Columbia basin irrigation project to its executive committee members of the Legislative committee indicated Labor should be careful of "selling its birthright for a mess of projects."

CONSCRIPTED CHILDREN

There is a movement among Ontario educationists to raise the age at which children are admitted to public school. In Woodstock, at any rate, it is acknowledged that pupils are being prepared for secondary school in a period of time too short by a year. Some people are beginning to question the value of a law which requires all children to remain at school until they are 16. The criticism is made that the collegiate curriculum directs too definitely to university; that many students go to college who will never be able to capitalize the years spent there, and that the pre-university spends too much, proportionately, upon higher education.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END?

The speed with which President Hoover's proposal for creating a $500,000,000 corporation to stabilize frozen assets of banks is being carried out shows that the United States really means business in this move. On the third day after the President's announcement the National Credit Corporation was already well organized. The prompt it constitutes a really practical step, and rightly is the basis for solid optimism.

This plan is directed towards remedying the greatest weakness in the present world situation, namely, the disorganization in the United States financial structure through lack of confidence in the banking situation. If the United States, the repository of the world's gold, becomes financially disorganized, as things are, many of the banks in need of assistance have few assets of the character prescribed under the present rules. Nevertheless, the great majority of these have ample values to apply against their liabilities, provided that assets which have been frozen by the stagnation of business and the drop in security prices can be mobilized. In particular, it is desirable that real estate and commercial values should be mobilized at this time.—Montreal Star.

A SHORTAGE IN VILLAINS

Efforts are being made to surround the movies with so interracial good will presented through motion pictures. These Chinese, for instance, are not a race of villains, although that might be the natural assumption. Our Japanese moviegoers who for years have seen them generally portrayed as direct wicked.

Movie writers, perhaps, chosen members of a race for villainous parts because they occupied a position of little importance from the region in which the pictures would be shown. But now China has its cinema theatres, and Chinese audiences fail to understand the villainy which has been assigned to the lended social standing of their countrymen. Some are made to mend through the pictures with knives in their backs, and supposedly Oriental smirks on the faces of China has objected. Pictures thus misrepresenting the Chinese have by banned from Chinese theatters.

In the search for substitutes the movie makers have found further complications, for pictures are made to be shown not alone in one country, and any other race so grossly libelled will immediately protest. And American audiences, enlightened by travel and radio and reading, frequently regard with suspicion and offtimes disgust the unfair presentation of other peoples in inferior light.

Hollywood now seeks some far-off and insignificant country from which its villains may be lifted. It will have difficulty. Perhaps the best thing would be to invent all special villains. Then there would be necessary "foreign villains" could while waiting his turn to talk to Winchell in the New York Mirror office not so long ago. And a darn poor whistler he was too, says Walter, a lip performer, not a throat warbler. So that's that, and we purpose keeping right on whistling even though we can't carry a tune.

MOTHER SAVES BABE IN ARMS, CYCLE UPSETS

Trio Practically Unhurt in Crash With Automobile

HOLIDAY RUINED

Side Car and Wheel of Motorcar Strike Causing Spill

Toronto, Oct. 14. — A mother's loving arms saved an 11-months-old babe from certain death yesterday morning.

There was genuine cause for gratitude in the Purdy home on Thanksgiving Day. Frank Purdy, his wife, Dora, and their baby Carol, were all alive and practically unhurt, after being violently hurled to the pavement when their motorcycle was struck by an auto and flipped completely over.

Although their projected holiday trip to Port Perry was ruined before it had fairly begun, they spent the rest of the day at their home at 462 Bruton Road, glad to be there alive and well.

Miss Maude Coo of 310 Brunswick Avenue, was driving south on Markham Street when she collided with the motorcycle and sidecar, which Purdy was driving west on Harbord Street.

Sidecar Hits Wheel

"As this car approached me from the right, I saw it was not going to stop in time to let me past," Purdy related last night. "When it was just about the width of the sidewalk away from me, I wheeled quickly to the left, south into Markham Street, hoping to avoid a collision. My sidecar struck the left front wheel of the auto, seemed to climb up it, and before I knew it I was sprawling on the roadway with the motorcycle partly on top of me.

"The engine was still running and the wheel continued to whirl around while the exhaust snorted. I had to get up and turn off the ignition switch.

"Were you frightened?" The Matt and Empire asked Mrs. Purdy.

"It was all over so quickly I didn't have time to think about it. Instinctively I clutched baby in hard as I could and we rolled over and over together. Luckily she was well wrapped up on account of the cold, or it might have been serious."

Purdy threw her head back instinctively against the pavement, but she seemed to be all right afterwards.

Mrs. Purdy ruminatively felt a bruised shoulder with a head which had been bandaged on account of minor lacerations. Purdy had a few bruises around the head, and although he complained of some soreness, he seemed to be a pretty good sport complaining at all.

The trio was attended by Dr. A. G. Volpe, 503 Markham Street, and soon afterwards was able to go home in a taxi. The motorcycle was badly battered and the motorcycle proper was a bit scratched and twisted in spots. Miss Coo's car lost fender and bumper, also her scraped her fender and, beyond a couple of minor dents that was the extent of the damage.

95% of All Accidents Are Due To Man Failure Says Authority

Chicago, Ill. Oct. 14—Dr. Harold S. Halbert, Chicago psychiatrist, told the National Safety Congress today that "ninety-five per cent. of all accidents are due to man failure."

"Thinking of safety in the presence of danger," the psychiatrist said, "is not so important as clear thinking at work and avoiding the diversion of attention to personal problems."

This "man failure", Dr. Hulbert pointed out "was not of the insanity or continuous mental incompetency, but thoughtfulness and carelessness.

"Avoid unhappiness in your work" he said. "This produces fatigue and contributes toward inaccuracy and accidents."

New York, Oct. 14—War on "medical hi-jackers" who victimize an uninformed public was advocated last night by Dr. Allen B. Kanavel of Chicago, in his inaugural address as incoming president of the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Kanavel turned a spotlight of criticism on the surgical profession and reached the verdict that "things are bloody" even for immediate improvement."

He told the 3,000 medical experts gathered for the opening session of the surgeons' annual congress that a paramount problem confronting the profession is the need for reduction in the cost of medical service.

Lost Artillerymen Are Found On Island

Sackett Harbor, N.Y., Oct. 14.—Five members of the 76th Field Artillery of Madison Barracks who had been missing since Sunday afternoon when winds kicked up Lake Ontario on which they were fishing were found safe yesterday by a naval militia boat at Stony Island.

They had been expressed for their safety by officers at the barracks. The men were towed to the naval militia boat that had searched the eastern end of the lake most of the day.

Their announced destination was High Rock, a strip of mainland two miles long and 50 feet high, too precipitous to be scaled. It was this information that led their fellow soldiers at the barracks to fear that they may have been driven into the teeth of the gale which snapped trees on the mainland.

"FIVE STAR FINAL"

Nancy Voorhees is dead!

So is Michael Townsend, the man who gave up wealth and the world of fashion to follow her into obscurity twenty years ago.

At last, after these years of mental torture and uncertainty, Nancy has found peace—the same Nancy whose pretty face was known to millions of readers in the days when she was on trial for her life, charged with the murder of her betrayer.

As the wife of loyal Michael Townsend—he who was loyal unto death today—Nancy lived silently and unknown in their small uptown apartment. Today, not long before noon, she died there, just as silently. But she was no longer unknown. The veil of mystery which curious neighbors had never succeeded in penetrating was torn aside. This happened suddenly and with a violence which has once more set the world ago. Nancy is news again. But Nancy is dead.

The crimson past which Nancy sought so desperately to hide is no longer her secret. The world knows her daughter knows what Nancy was. But also the world knows the love of Michael Townsend and his faith in her—a faith that has endured past the portals of live.

Entire story of the Voorhees tragedy may be seen in "Five Star Final" at the Capitol for the last time tonight.

Angela Baddeley, appearing with Canada's brilliant young actor, Raymond Massey, and Lyn Harding in Conan Doyle's baffling romantic mystery story, "The Speckled Band," at the Belle Tonight (Dressmaker Night), and Thursday.

"HIGH STAKES"

The "inside" story of the baby-faced ladies who prey upon the loneliness of wealthy men comes to the Capitol theatre starting tomorrow (Silver Gift Night) for two days.

Radio Pictures' "High Stakes" takes this situation and makes of it an exciting, swift melodrama, thrilling yet amusing in the situations it depicts.

Lowell Sherman, gay Lothario of many stage and screen successes, is the star-director of this latest pictorial achievement. "High Stakes" follows the countrywide praise lavished on him by critics everywhere for his performance in and direction of "Bachelor Apartment."

The role portrayed by Sherman in "High Stakes" is the same he played some years ago on the stage when "High Stakes" was one of Broadway's outstanding entertainments from the pen of Willard Mack.

Mae Murray, stage and screen favorite, once more tosses her blonde head in support of Sherman as she did in "Bachelor Apartment." Except that in "High Stakes" Miss Murray has the unsympathetic role of an alluring, unfaithful woman out to "take" from the millions of a foolish and aging millionaire.

Comedy cartoon and Vaudefilm support "Highstakes" and ladies will receive E.P.N.S dessert knives at Thursdays' Silverware Gift Night.

by

"Do you remember, senor, that once I sold you some day we might test our strength and lay all our foolish rules of the game aside? That we might fight with our fists like fighting fish for life itself? Well, what time could be better than now to amuse ourselves? And to be certain these comrades of mine? Or" —his voice softened as he saw the words contemptuously at the man before him—"would you prefer less dangerous games, such as losing a girl on the cards? That, while the boast to the world you are her lover?"

The restraining hand had dropped from Ted's sleeve. The faint sobbing of a child in the patio was the only sound throughout the room. No one breathed. Ted took one step forward. With his open hand he struck the dark, scowling face with a force that shot the Mexican's mighty neck back. Then, while the sound of that blow still filled the room, Ted spoke.

"You bad bastard." The low-voiced words carried to the far-off corners of the silent room.

Jilo's breath came with a gasp of uncontrollable rage. His hand slapped to the knife at his side and froze there, for now Ted's gun was into the middle of Don Bob's 45 automatic.

In rapid Spanish came Don Bob's words. "Let no one make a move." His eyes never left Ted's, though swarthy hands that had sought their belts stiffened and fell limply. He steps backward brought Bob to the last one of the group, who turned and hid himself upon it. He was looking down, now, upon those upturned faces. All were sullen, but those faces all turned toward him—all except Ted's who still stood there, his face menacing form of Jilo.

You have gone somewhat out of your way to force this fight, Jilo mio," Don Bob began, and to lay aside the automatic beside him on the bar. "Well, there is no place better than this, no time better than now if this must come, since you, Jilo, would have it so." His voice grew a little "Meanwhile, whatever happens, let no man take an unfair advantage of who interferes with knife or gun or fist during this fight. To assist, in the friendly, quiet fashion down on the vaqueros. "I hope in this I am quite clear, amigos."

Jilo laughed. He whipped off the belt that held his knife and pistol and threw it to Don Bob. He kicked off his spurs and threw them with his wide sombrero and chaps across the room, and now he stood, tall, lithe and unencumbered, his eyes happy with the coming conflict.

"You feel," he called up to Don Bob. "You feel, to think this boy can live another day after what he game tonight. Tonight we fight for life and not to push each other's shoulders in the dust." He raised both hands above his head. "Tonight I know no rules, and with these two hands, Don Bob, I swear to pieces your Eastern bay who comes among us with his woman's face and with a woman's heart."

Ted had stripped off his coat. As he laid it from him the other man whispered: "On your guard for every low trick in the game, and if you get him don't let up. There's the life and death itself in his eyes."

Ted nodded. "I know," he said and turned toward his adversary. In the face of danger Radcliffe had become calm again. Once more he was the cool, watchful fighter, alert and unafraid.

The room was still with the silence of death, and beyond the clearing circle before the bar every man stood motionless and tense, their breathless gaze fastened on the two figures who held each others' eyes beneath the blazing lights. Their shadows lay huddled beneath them as they stood now, barely an arm's length apart, watchful and deadly. They seemed greater than human, crouching there. They seemed not human at all. More like two primeval forces, the concentration of some legend of past heroic days. Jilo spoke in a low, growling voice.

"Cuidado, Americano. We fight now in a game where all is fair, and I think this time I hear you apart. Are you ready?"

Ted smiled.

Quietly Jilo stepped sideways, with his arms hanging loosely in front of him, his fingers curving as if in claws, and without a sound he began that slow, crouching walk of his, more like a kind of shuffling circle about Ted, watching him, waiting his chance. A quarter of a circle he had made, while Ted never moved, except to turn a little, following the cigarette in Don Bob's mouth to a corner of his lips as it appeared. The very soul of every man there was out there in that silent circle of waiting death.

Then, with a warning, Ted leaped. There was a quick inrush of breath from the spectators. Not one of them, not Ted himself, thought the first move would come from Jilo. It came in the leap of a panther, the man's heavy body hurled itself through the air, his left hand outward, and like pistol shots his fists struck Ted's chest and face. The Mexican stumbled back, and now the lights gleamed on a long, cruel knife in Jilo's hand as he leaped back, but like lightning Jilo's right hand struck down on Jilo's left leg, and a lunge and a growl the Mexican closed. His free arm wrapped about Ted's neck, and the short, powerful fingers of his knife hand, driving for-ward, tightened, and the corded veins of the wrapped wrist of the gunman showed the while that had begun cutting the life from his adversary.

"Jilo," whispered Don Vaquero. "He will tear the American's throat out." They were too close now for blows. In the bearlike hug of the Mexican, Ted's chest pressed against Jilo's shoulder. The tearing pain at his throat blinded him, blood was pouring in his head for want of air, and always those gripping fingers, those fingers of steel, were forced to flicker and grow dull. His agonized lungs were bursting, and mercifully Ted reached down and twisted the arm in his throat about the vaquero's wrist, then heaved with all his might. Slowly the Mexican's weight lifted, and suddenly Ted, with great body outward, then lunged for-ward.

With a crash they struck the floor, Ted's body on top of the Mexican's, and his the boards, Ted felt that killing grip loosen. With all his might he struck down with the knife and plunged to his knees, His head throbbed with pain, and he was dizzy for want of air, and always those gripping fingers clutched for his throat. Then they ceased to flicker and grow dull. His agonized lungs were breathing mercifully Ted reached down and twisted the arm in his throat about the vaquero's wrist, then heaved with all his might. With a crash they struck the floor, Ted's body on top of the Mexican's, and his the boards, Ted felt that killing grip loosen. With all his might he struck down with the knife and plunged to his knees, His head throbbed with pain, and he was dizzy for want of air, and always those gripping fingers clutched for his throat. Then they ceased to flicker and grow dull. His agonized lungs were bursting mercifully Ted reached down and twisted the arm in his throat about the vaquero's wrist, then heaved with all his might. Slowly the Mexican's weight lifted, and suddenly Ted, with great body outward, then lunged for-ward.

BUSINESS is BUSINESS

by Ethel Willis Hewitt

Dick Layton's off repeated threats to stick that anti-marriage clause in the next contract he offered a woman, was about to go into effect Monday. Dick had made enough trouble around the studio and on the sets. He eyed the new clause with satisfaction. That ought to put an end to that sort of annoyance. He reached for the telephone and dialed the Casting office.

"Bob Peters, okay, Dick Layton speaking. Get Helen Nelson girl working on stage 4—yeah, tall blond, that's the one, send her in to me. Also a dozen or so couples that can dance—sure, good looking too. Country Club set, stage 3. Then we'll need a tall, dark man, good looker, one leg; and Chinese coop; two sailors and a cat with four kittens. Yes—that's all so far. Don't forget the Nelson girl, shoot her right up, I'm waiting for her."

Dick laid the receiver back on the hook, chewed down on the end of his cigar and stared out of the window. At exactly 1.30 he looked up into the slanting grey eyes of Lisella Nelson. He leaned back and regarded her through half-closed lids. Yes—she had something. Her thoughts as recorded on the set, now, in a close up he was sure of it. She'd knock 'em cold in no time, or was no picker. "Sit down," he mumbled through a half-chewed cigar.

Miss Nelson sat. "Dyer do anything but kill me," she asked abruptly Lisella flushed.

"No—but if I had a chance—" Dick interrupted.

"Shut up. Listen to 'em they all could. That's for me to decide.

Lisella fluttered long curling lashes, but said nothing.

Dick pulled out a contract.

"You've got the making of a star. Of course, it's a risk, but no risk, no gain. We're in business for profit. What about a try out—say two pictures, that's a fair trial? If you get it over I'll put you under contract on the dotted line at her own figure.

Just at that point, Dick leaned across his mahogany desk.

"You mind if I make an anti-marriage clause," he remarked, casually.

Lisella looked up pat him. Misty grey eyes, in the ripe innocence of all the world—but then, Dick was in business for profit, representing the studio, of course, and business was—

"Well, you said business was business," she reminded him dutifully.

He bent down suddenly and kissed—her. The car seemed about to take a detour as his own Dick righted it with a quick twist of the wheel. "Do you love me?" he asked, as if life itself depended on her answer.

"Why don't you ask me, Alec when?" There was a little thrill in her voice.

"But we'll have to wait, they might use me for the enormous sum," she added weakly.

Dick laughed.

"Let em use. It was my fool idea. I'll pay for it. But there's one thing I don't do, and that's—wait.

Luella was silent.

"Is it all right by you, honey?" he asked softly.

"It's all right by me, Dick. If that'll make it any the quicker." Luellas grey eyes were serious.

With the tip of one finger, Dick raised her face and kissed her lips softly. They were silent for a moment, then Dick drew both hand into on the wheel and covered it with his.

"Never mind the risk. That's all I need to know," he said huskily.

"Let's go." He turned to look at her, and something in the cool, level, unkissable thrill. Then the police searched the car for finger

Poses as Stranger When His Victim is Found Dead

Finger Print Betrays Him

A man was seen running towards a motor car which had crashed into a tree in a park in London. He told the police he was going to give assistance to a man in the car who later was found to be dead.

The police arrested him on suspicion. They took his finger prints. He was a well known automobile thief. Then the police searched the car for finger prints and found one on the driving mirror on the wheel with the thief's. The dead man had been a victim of careless driving on the part of the crook, who was held without bail by a coroner's jury on a charge of manslaughter.

Thus are finger prints used to protect law abiding citizens by linking arrest and conviction to criminals.

Your Danger Prints on Foods

You may be surprised to learn that your finger prints are just as dangerous to you—in another way. Not through crime because,you are not a criminal —but through disease germs—certain kinds of them.

Your fingers pick up germs all day long from things which other hands have touched. These other hands may have checked a cough or a sneeze and so become covered with germs. Then when you touch some article of food your fingers leave on it these germs which other people have left on it with your system. Life Extension Institute of New York says that "Colds and some very deadly—may be passed around in this way—among them, flu," and colds.

The Pleasant Way to Safety

These germs must be removed from your hands many times a day—and always before meals. Germs are stubborn things—they resist heat and cold—but one thing they cannot resist—and that is the germicide in Lifebuoy Soap.

Catholic Men Voice "Control" Condemnation

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 14—The National Council of Catholic Men closed their annual convention here with resolutions condemning birth control and asking the President to advance the "unity and sanctity of the Christian home." The convention closed last night.

"So-called birth control is an infidelity of God, a denial of individual dignity of man and woman and a selfish betrayal of our country's welfare," the resolutions said.

The other resolution laid "much of the crime and evil of our day" to "departure from the standards of the Christian home."

Illustrations advertising theatrical and screen shows were condemned as "unwholesome, suggestive and purposely alluring," and other resolutions favored international disarmament and support of President Hoover's conference on unemployment.

Ancient House Makes Way for Parish Improvements

"Willowbank" or "The Castle" About 80 Years Old

HAS HISTORY

Known to residents, large and small, as "The Castle", the building on the property of St. Michael's Parish, Pinnacle street, is being removed to make way for further improvements to the setting of the Church. Associated with the city's history for many years, this building has long outlived its usefulness as a dwelling and its walls are beginning to crumble to ruin. When it was acquired by St. Michael's congregation, some years ago it was first used as parish house, and under various organizations of the church it has been the scene of many interesting gatherings of a social nature. Card parties were held there and for the younger folk the Castle was an ideal setting for Hallowe'en parties when the secret passages, winding stairways, attics and galleries held many chilling surprises for the bloodcurdling adventurer. The Town

This week the work of demolishing the building will commence and the stone will be used for a foundation in the modern parking space south of the church on Church street. Its site will be transformed into rolling lawns and sharp terraces next year.

This property is one of the best known of the older Belleville. For a time the house was known as "Willowbank" from the proximity of the willow trees on the premises.

This was originally owned by William Ponton, Pioneer, Gentleman registrar of the County of Hastings and an uncle of Col. W. A. Ponton, K.C. The house was built of solid cut stone, which according to the fashion of the times was covered with stucco. It was built about eighty years ago and stands today as solid as when it was first constructed. The house was a wonderful old structure and the garden was the admiration of a generation now past.

The builder's family was all born in this palatial home. Miss Julia Ponton, Mrs. Grace Lansford, of Panama; William H. Ponton, British Consul at Panama, and George J. Ponton, Superintendent of Plantations of the United Fruit Company.

The house was a great social centre in the fifties and sixties. One of the attractions of the grounds was the winding roadway leading down from the height of the Pinnacle street level below. To drive a horse up and down this was deemed an achievement in the early days.

Dear Jack we think of you often
And think of how you died.
To think you could not say goodbye

Before you closed your eyes,
Three little words,

They don't seem much
But they mean a lot.
Just a memory fond and true
To show dear Jack we think of you.

CRIME TRACED TO ALIMONY AND DIVORCES

Money Can Never Compensate Moral Woman

YOUTHFUL CRIME

Dr. Simon Addresses International Chiefs of Police

St. Petersburg, Fla., Oct. 14— Dr. Carleton Simon, criminologist and former deputy chief commissioner of New York, today told the International Association of Chiefs of Police here one of the fundamental causes of crime is traceable to divorce and "its accompanying evil—alimony."

Reviewing the problem of juvenile delinquency in his experience with increased prevalence of crime, Dr. Simon said "nothing assumes greater proportion nor is of greater significance than the deprivation of reasonable parental guidance to a growing child."

"Separation of parents, either by death, voluntarily or by legal means," he said, "is the reason why most of the family circles are destroyed."

Lack of Uniformity

"The lack of uniformity of divorce laws in different States is pernicious, making of the solemn bonds of matrimony a travesty. The ease with which divorces may be obtained in some States deprives the child too readily of its birthright, not only to parental love and affection but in moral guidance as well.

"In some instances he added, 'alimony is comparable to legalized prostitution; the woman frequently seeking matrimony with the original idea that her marital relations will be of short duration and that the law will provide her for an income for life.'

"Breach of promise suits also were condemned by Dr. Simon who declared "this type of action should not be permitted by our judiciary."

Money No Compensation

"Money can never compensate a moral woman and no honest woman desires the money of a man who does not want her. This legal action has been aided as a rule by the blackmailer and untold victims have been gouged by designing women and bands of criminals."

Dr. Simon characterized as wreckers of the home the congested living quarters in large cities, the high cost of living and "the increasing pace of living beyond income."

Dr. Simon said he had found no normal children were more likely to commit criminalistic, despite special training and care after they become delinquent." He said a crime is to be curbed, each state should demand legal procedure the enforced education of its illiterates.

THANKSGIVING NEEDED TODAY

Rev. A. E. McCutcheon

Speaks to Kiwanis Club

Rev. Earle McCutcheon, member of the Kiwanis Club, gave the address at the weekly luncheon of the club held on Tuesday, he taking for his subject "Thanksgiving" and there was a large number of the members out and it is the wish of the executive that the attendance be larger each week so that the club can give a respectable showing in the district. It is understood that drastic measures are to be taken by the executive if some of the members do not attend more regularly. President George Cole was in the chair and "Bouncer" Holway collected the fines at the usual. Banker was song leader, Leo B. Riggs was at the piano for the community singing. Two visiting members, W. D. Higle of Hamilton, and A. Shropshaw of Montreal were introduced to the club and briefly welcomed.

The speaker told the members that Thanksgiving was important and that it was the first time since the war that the day has been dissociated from Armistice Day and for which the government of Canada should receive thanks. On Thanksgiving the peoples of the world acknowledge the beneficence of a Man, that is genial and kind. If it is possible for people to give thanks for the 1931 harvest down as the one for which most thanks should be given this year, when the most dreadful year in all the ages, said the speaker. This year will be known as the year of great madness and never-ending war as far as pagan people. Kind Providence always gives the over-flowing cup and it would be well for all to "count their blessings". Thanksgiving comes between the crop supply and the winter need and it should be our thanksgiving this year, when we know we are able to help the stricken areas of the west. Civilization is passing through a new period and new order and it will emerge a better world and a better place to live in. The speaker believed that the mad race for armaments caused practically all the depression that we have at the present time and peace will only come when the nations of the world get together in brotherly love.

More About Business

(Weekly Message)

"If the Life Insurance Companies could double their business next year they would bring back prosperity"—declared an eminent economist in a public address last month.

This man-of-affairs realized two things:

1. The premium deposits guarantee financial security to the home—and the home is the basis of the nation.
2. The funds of the companies are not kept in vaults, but invested in mortgage loans, government and municipal bonds, to provide homes; build roads, schools and hospitals; develop transportation, communities and industries. Silently and effectively they are improving general conditions.

The London Life's contribution to the upbuilding of Canada since October 1929, can be measured by:

1. More than $200,000,000 of new insurance; and
2. New investments of $24,000,000.

BIG LEAGUES MAKE CHANGE IN MANAGERS

12 RECORDS MADE IN THE WORLD SERIES

Martin's 12 Hits and 4 Runs Batted in Game Tied Marks

FRISCH TO FORE

Set 3 Records, All Series Total of Hits, Times at Bat and Most Games

Twelve record performances marked the 1931 world series, including the displacement as hero of former records and the equaling of five others.

The Cardinals, led by Pepper Martin, came close to running wild through the record books. They won the series but gained no personal rampage was effectively stopped by Bruce and Earnshaw in the last two games.

Martin had a half dozen records all to himself by until he went hitless in his final two games. His early spurt, however, was the less heroic and he tied two long standing records with his total of twelve hits for the series and four runs batted in for one game, but stole five bases, within one of the record.

Frisch Increases Own Records

Frank Frisch, captain and second baseman of the Cardinals, set three new records. He increased two of his own by boosting his all-series total of hits to fifty-two and increased his total games by eight, to 38. He also enjoys the distinction now of having participated in the most world's series games, forty-three, six more than Babe Ruth.

The Athletics established a new defensive record by playing errorless ball in the five games and their defense was distinctly wobbly in the first contest.

Earnshaw, by striking out twenty Cardinals in twenty-four innings came within one of equaling Joe Wood's record against the Giants in 1912.

Simmons Misses Record

Al Simmons came within one of equaling Lou Gehrig's clean-up record by batting safely for eight runs batted in.

Individual Records

Most hits, one series, 12—Martin, equaling mark held jointly by Buck Herzog, Joe Jackson, Sam Rice.

Most runs batted in, one game, 4—Martin, equaling record shared by Elmer Smith, Goose Goslin, Babe Ruth, Lester Bell and Al Simmons.

Most hits, total series, 52 — Frisch, beating own former record of 48.

Most times at bat, total series, 186—Frisch, displacing own former mark of 179.

Most games played, total series, 43—Frisch, breaking former record of 37, held by Babe Ruth.

Most series umpired, 15—William J. Klem, National League, breaking own former record.

Most two-hit pitching performances, in succession, one series 2—Burleigh Grimes of Cardinals and George Earnshaw of Athletics in third and fourth games; equals feats of Ed Walsh of White Sox and Mordical Brown of Cubs in 1906.

Club Records

Errorless games, one club, one series, 5—Athletics, equaling mark of Giants in 1921.

Most successive errorless games, one club, one series, 5—Athletics, beating mark of 4 by Red Sox in 1918.

Most errorless games, both clubs one series, 8—Five by Athletics and four by Cardinals, breaking former mark of eight by Giants in 1921.

Most strike-outs, both clubs, one series 85—45 Athletics and 40 Cardinals, beating former record of 76 by Giants and Yankees in 1927, eight games.

Fewest stolen bases, one club, one series, None—Athletics for third straight year.

More Drunkenness Convictions in 1930

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 14—Increase of the prison population of Ontario is stressed in a statement issued yesterday by Dr. A. J. Irwin, General Secretary of The Ontario Prohibition Union. Convictions for drunkenness in 1930 showed a considerable increase over 1929 the statement says.

"With the passage of the liquor control act the jails of Ontario shortly became crowded," it says. "The overflow was due largely to liquor. Our prison population increased from 23,500 in 1929 to 26,138 in 1930, an increase of 12.1 per cent. Conviction with imprisonment for drunkenness increased from 6,722 in 1929 to 7,775 in 1930, an increase of 24.2 per cent."

SUPREMACY IN FISHING SHIPS

Decision to Be Made With Arrival of Challenger

By TOM MORGAN

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 14—The United States had come to Canada today to setink, or more probably, to continue, the question of sailing supremacy of the North Atlantic fishing fleets.

The challenger, the schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, had tied up after what was regarded as a record 21-hour passage from her home port, Gloucester, Mass. The schooner Bluenose, Captain Angus Walters' veteran sail banker and the present title holder, was en route from Lunenburg to the scene of the duel which will open off this port next Saturday.

Captain John Matheson, slim, soft spoken and youthful looking for his years, who never sought his bunk during the thirty-one hours of driving over the 400-mile ocean waste, was taking a rest. Captain Matheson will serve as mate aboard the Gloucesterman in the approaching contest for the International Fishermen's Trophy, under Captain Ben Bruno, veteran skipper.

Bruno trouble caused Captain Pine to travel by train instead of aboard his charge, and he was also here today.

The Gloucester challenger had a big welcome. Crowds gathered on only a single steamer and a school of whales on the voyage east. It was a pleasurable voyage when she was met and greeted off the Nova Scotia coast by the Canadian cruiser Champlain. The bluejackets lined the bridge and rail and shouted three lusty cheers that carried convincingly over the heaving seas. The cheers were as warmly returned and the cruiser dipped the invador and the war ensign in their honor.

Although driven by a northwest breeze as strong that her sail seldom emerged from the sea, Thebaud arrived virtually undamaged by the buffeting. The bolt-rope of her fisherman's staysail pulled out, but Charlie Landry, agile topmastman, remedied that with palm and needle. Most of the sane spread on Thebaud's decks to furnish her crew with comfortable sleeping gear for except for minor adjustments, she was ready for the starting gun.

NEW MANAGER MAKES PLANS

Jimmy Johnston Arranging For Series of Bouts

New York, Oct. 14—Jimmy Johnston, who will become vice-president and general manager of Madison Square Garden tomorrow, already has laid plans for a series of top flight heavy-weight bouts in the winter but he may have to get along without the services of Jack Sharkey.

There were strong indications that Sharkey and his handlers were preparing to go into partial retirement until next summer on the theory that the public wants a return match story over huge Primo Carnera entitles Sharkey to a "shot" at Max Schmeling's title next summer.

Johnston's plans for the next few months included a return match, indoors, between Sharkey and Schmeling and another return battle between Sharkey and Tommy Loughran.

But now it develops that Sharkey's famous left thumb cause of a 12-day postponement of the Carnera match was hurt again on Monday night and that Sharkey will not be able to fight for an indefinite period.

If Jack persists in his winter hibernation plans, Johnston will have to look elsewhere for his talent. It was understood that Ernie Schaaf, shooting Bostonian, who is owned jointly by Sharkey and Sharkey's manager, Johnny Buckley, was prepared to go in and substitute for the sailor. Schaaf, who has compiled a phenomenal string of victories in recent months, announces he is ready for any thrills, the heavyweights, barring Sharkey of course.

Even if Johnston's plan for another Carnera-Sharkey fight the chances are that Sharkey will not be idle. He already is slated to meet Paulino Uzcudun, veteran Basque, in the Garden November 13. If he gets by the rugged Spaniard, Primo may get more work, possibly against Schaaf or Loughran.

FRED GOYER GETS $2,500

Justice Logie Found Driver of Car Negligent in Operation

Although Justice Logie suggested settlement, his advice was not taken by counsel in the supreme court suit brought by Fred Goyer, Dundas ball player, against Stanley Tudor, in whose car Goyer was a passenger when it crashed into a ditch near Woodstock, September 1, 1930.

Goyer's neck was broken and he lost five months' work. He claimed Tudor was driving at from 35 miles an hour on a wet pavement, his statement being corroborated by two other passengers who are living in Dundas in county court. Finding defendant was negligent, Justice Logie allowed the plaintiff $2,500.

THE LEAF'S 1930 KID FORWARD LINE

The Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey club's forward system has always been noted for its famous "kid forward line." There was Charlie Conacher, Harvey Jackson and Joe Primeau. Being a far sighted individual, the last named member of the trio bethought himself of the future he and his pals would be known as veterans and hasbeens. So, out of the goodness of his heart, he has offered to Conny Smythe, the services of his three bouncing baby boys (we're not sure about the bouncing) as the next kid line of 1950. (We might mention incidentally, that the offer was made as a sort of celebration when the third boy was born to the Primeau family the other day. It is rumored that the first thing youngest member wanted was a hockey stick. (Don't tell Conny sometime like that about all babies!) At any rate, despite the trials and tribulations of a family, Joe is in good shape for the coming season. He is taking the day's exercise late in the night by taking the children for a walk. Conny thinks rather highly of Joe, he signed him up the other day on a two year contract at an increase in salary.

OPEN SEASON IN LEAGUE MANAGERS ON

Donie Bush and Jewel Ens Already Relieved of Positions

MORE TO COME

Bucky Harris of Detroit Skates on Thin Edge Also Robinson

(By Herbert W. Baker, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, N.Y., Oct. 14— The open season on major league managers already has netted two victims and the baseball world will immediately astonished if one or two more do not fall before the accurate fire of sharp-shooting magnates.

Donie Bush, a fiery veteran, has been cut loose from the Chicago White Sox and succeeded by Lew Fonseca, an active player still in his early thirties. The Pittsburgh Pirates, after casting Jewel Ens adrift, are looking about for a new pilot.

Dopsters, after a careful survey of the situation, look for the next managerial shifts to come from Detroit and possibly Brooklyn, and there seem to be sound grounds for the suspicion that a change may be made in one camp or the other, if not in both.

Harris May Go

Stanley (Bucky) Harris, who piloted the Washington Senators to American League pennants in 1924 and 1925, has just finished his most disappointing season with the Detroit Tiger.

Starting out the season with bright prospects, the Tigers, crippled for months by injuries to Charlie Gehringer and Jale Alexander, finished the season in seventh place, trailed only by the White Sox.

Club owners, in the main, ask for results and if they don't get them with one manager they try another. No definite word has come from Detroit in regard to Harris' present status but it is understood here that Frank Navin, the owner, has notified coaches Dan Dobor and Roger Bresnahan they will not be retained in 1932. Some experts professed to see in this a direct hit, that Harris also will go.

Robbie Situation Involved

The Brooklyn situation is a bit more involved. Baseball writers have been hiring a new manager for the Robins for years but, Wilbert Robinson always turns up at the helm when the season starts. He has held his job for some time despite the internal dissension that pets him and Steve McKeever on opposite sides of the fence and he may do again.

With an opening at Pittsburgh and possible job at Detroit or Brooklyn, considerable interest was aroused by unconfirmed reports of the resignation, apparently without cause of Dick Williams, who has just piloted the San Francisco Seals into a Pacific Coast League pennant. Williams, in his ten years with the Seals as player and manager, has made a reputation as developer of young players. He may land in the big league.

The job at Pittsburgh is understood to be waiting for Burleigh George Gibson, a former pilot of the Pirates.

Almost simultaneously with Williams' resignation came the news that Allan Sothoron, former big league pitcher, had quit as manager at Louisville. Later in the day, however, Sothoron signed as coach with the St. Louis Browns where Bill Killefer is manager.

The RECORD SPEAKS for ITSELF

In opening the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto on Friday, August 28, Earl Jellicoe said: "Over a period of 15 years, the population of Canada has increased by 4,000,000; the revenue of the Government from $22,000,000 to $70,000,000; the savings deposits from $149,000,000 to $2,000,000,000. In the same time, her manufactures have increased ten-fold and her crop acreage three-fold. This remarkable record encourages a feeling of optimism for the future."

Earl Jellicoe also made the following reference: "Canada's record growth constitutes an achievement of world importance and stands as a challenge to future progress. This phenomenal growth is the direct result of splendid courage and determination which the people of Canada showed so strikingly from 1914-1918".

China Complains of Acts of Aggression—Japan Refuses Intervention

Tokyo, Oct. 14 (AP) — Preliminary conversations designed to open the way for direct negotiations between Japan and China for settlement of their controversy over Manchuria resulted in failure today.

London, Oct. 14—A despatch to the Daily Express this morning from Mukden, Manchuria, said that Japanese troops marched out of the city yesterday afternoon, planning to control the entire Chinchow area and to advance east ward along the Peiping-Mukden railway in what they said was a drive against bandits. The despatch also said it was reported a Japanese air squadron was fired on by a Chinese troop train near Kaopangtze yesterday and that the air planes retaliated by dropping three bombs, which did no damage.

Geneva, Oct. 14—The League of Nations council listened for four hours Tuesday while the Chinese and Japanese spokesmen hurled charges and counter-charges about the Manchurian conflict. Then the council solemnly endorsed a declaration by Aristide Briand that the league surely will act to the extent of its powers to bring peace to the Far East.

Continuing its efforts for conciliation through private conversations, the council will not sit publicly again until its next step "to safeguard the peace of nations" has been determined.

Dr. Alfred Sze, China's emotional representative, and Kentaro Kaneko, unemotive and calm spoken man for Japan, exchanged long and dignified but intense verbal bombardment across the council table Neither disclosed the other from his Government's frequently reiterated position.

M. Yoshikawa again averred Japan's determination to treat with China directly. Dr. Sze declared China never would negotiate with Japan so long as Japanese troops were on Chinese soil in violation of treaty rights.

Japan's representative spoke twice at the end of the great horseshoe table, China's from the other. At the arc of the horseshoe sat M. Briand, chairman of the meeting, following intently their every word.

Edison Answers Wife's Question

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 14—Thomas A. Edison roused sufficiently from the stupor which has enveloped him to answer a question from Mrs. Edison but his precarious condition was described as "unchanged."

Dr. Hubert S. Howe did not say what the question was, but described the aged inventor as "brighter" than he had been.

A 9 p.m. bulletin from Charles Edison, a son, said:

"Mr. Edison's condition remains unchanged. He was in his chair for two hours this afternoon and is now in bed sleeping."

Earlier in the day Dr. Howe said the period in which six teaspoonfuls of stewed pears had been the inventor's only nourishment had increased to 36 hours and Mr. Edison was experiencing a "gradually progressive resurgence."

An interesting caller at the Edison home was Robert Edmund (Uncle Bob) Sherwood often described as the last of the Barnum showmen. Sherwood, 90, is an old friend of the inventor.

Asks Cheques For Hospital, Not Flowers

Montreal, Oct. 14—Leaving a request that friends who might wish to send flowers to his funeral send instead a cheque to the Montreal General Hospital, Charles Thomas Hays, Montreal insurance broker, died here. He was 74 years of age.

Mr. Hays took a keen interest in the affairs of the Montreal General Hospital of which he was governor honorary treasurer. Shortly before he died he penned a few farewell note to a friend: "Mr. Hare requests that any of his friends who might wish to send flowers might instead send a cheque in his memory to the Montreal General, the same to be acknowledged by the hospital authorities to his relatives without mentioning any specific amount."

MacDONALD IS GIVEN CHEERS

Declares Reds Always Against Interest of Workers

(By Frank H. King, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Seaham Harbor, Durham, England, Oct. 14 — Premier Ramsay MacDonald carried his campaign for re-election to the House of Commons into the stronghold of his opposition among the miners yesterday.

So packed was the hall at Murton, where he spoke last night that only with difficulty could Mr. MacDonald make his way into the place. While the chairman was speaking the Prime Minister had to sit on a table in a corner, his daughter, Ishbel MacDonald sat on the floor of the platform.

He spoke in halls, packed with miners at Seaham Harbor and Murton. In the afternoon he addressed an audience at Hawdon, known locally as a communistic centre, and with one retort to a young Communist he silenced heckling that made the start of the meeting uncertain.

"I'm a Communist and I'm against you," the heckler shouted.

"Of course you're against me, the Prime Minister retorted. "A Communist is always against the interests of the working classes."

The Seaham Harbor colliery, the scene of one of last night's speeches, has been mined for 100 years. The men are conservative in their labor views and Mr. MacDonald won their applause from the start.

As on the occasion of his opening campaign speech in his constituency, he put much effort into his explanation of the world situation and Britain's national emergencies

For Interests of Britain

"For you the general election is the protection of Britain from the financial crisis which is going on in nation after nation, and which, if it is not overcome successfully, will have the wreckage not of your bosses but your jobs.

One old fellow asked: "Will Mr. MacDonald nationalize the Bank of England?"

"He started on that now people, would get so frightened there would be no Bank of England to nationalize," the Premier answered, adding: "Solve our present difficulties first, and then we can consider the reconstruction of our financial institutions. That is all I shall say now."

Government Unlikely To Weather Storm in Dail Eirann

Dublin, Irish Free State, Oct. 14—One of the most bitter political struggles in Free State history will be fought out in the Dail Eirann (parliament) in the next few days.

COSSACK HEAD IS IDOLIZED

Gen. Budiony's Appeal Upon Russians Powerful

Moscow, Oct. 14. — The Soviet people's craving a national military hero finds an outlet in General Semen Mikhailick Budiony, Cossack with long moustache, whose first wife fought side by side with him. General Budiony's moustache makes him easily recognizable. He has big black eyes and a swarthy tan on his face when he is speaking. His figure is not of particularly heroic proportions, being short and inclined towards stoutness, but he is well built and carries himself like a soldier.

In conversation his manner is polite and every now and then he breaks Ellis a fit of laughter. He is noted for his anecdotes of army life, especially after he has drunk the health of his companions at a party.

Budiony has had his tragedy. He once was married to a woman no less a soldier than himself. In spite of the fact that she was the mother of two children she took part in battles side by side with her husband. She could ride a horse better than many of her mates of the other sex. She was an expert rifle woman.

One day when all their battles were over and more peaceful days had come, the soldier wife was cleaning a rifle and shot herself. Budiony married again but not to a woman soldier. He said he would never again wed a woman who used firearms. His second wife is a well-known actress in the Moscow Art Theatre.

Budiony has been well rewarded for his services to the revolution. On his breast he carries four decorations of the Order of the Red Star. Brucha, a city which the famous General conquered after a bloody battle with the Whites, has been renamed Budiony. He is an active figure in Soviet affairs, acting as a popular agitator.

Labor Asks Higher Wages If "Useless After 45"

Vancouver, Oct. 14 — The American Federation of Labor in convention here, yesterday turned its attention to those hoary-headed hands who, at the age of 45, find themselves thrown on the scrap-heap, marked "too old to work."

In a manner so casual that its significance escaped many in attendance, the Federation's fifty-hale first convention laid down the decree that industry continued its "useless-after-45" policy, wages must be increased sufficiently to allow workmen to retire on their savings at that age. The state organizations committee made the proposals in the form of instructions to state federations and local unions. It was adopted without debate.

Soldier's Heart Malady Cured by Operations

New York, Oct. 14 — "Soldier's heart," a baffling malady of modern high-pressure life is cured by a remarkable medical operation described to the American College of Surgeons last night.

Twenty of these new operations were reported in a paper by their discoverer, George W. Crile, M.D., head of the Cleveland clinic. Seventeen resulted in apparent cures. All were operated upon within the last eighteen months and the average time since the operation is still "well." Upon two others no effect, and a third has not been traced.

JAPAN WITHDRAWS OBJECTION TO U. S.

League Invites U. S. to Take Part at Once In Peace Negotiation

Five Powers on League Prevail on Japan to Waive Objection

U. S. POSITION

League Decision Made Late to Call in U. S. Representative

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP)—The Geneva correspondent of the Havas news agency reported this evening that the five principal powers represented on the League of Nations council had prevailed upon Japan not to interpose an objection to the participation by the United States in the council's deliberations regarding the Manchurian conflict.

U.S. Invited

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 15 — (AP)—The League of Nations council was reported tonight to have decided to ask the United States to participate in a session for purposes of settling the Sino-Japanese troubles in Manchuria.

Tokyo, Oct. 15.—(AP)—The Japanese Foreign Office today constructed its delegation to Geneva to use every effort to see that the proposal for including a United States representative in the League of Nations Council during discussion of the Sino-Japanese trouble be dropped.

The proposal caused more or less commotion at the Kasumigaseki Ministry which lost no time in sending instructions to its Geneva representative. The Foreign Office spokesman in Tokyo that, under the circumstances it should be Japan's policy to stay clear at the earliest possible moment. Officials in Tokyo said that the Japanese public would not tolerate United States and the League working together in the Manchurian tangle, which is purely an affair between China and Japan.

The spokesman for the Foreign Office said:

Japanese View

"There is all the difference in the world in United States as an outsider keeping itself informed as to the League's activities compared with its actual participation in the Council's sittings."

In connection with the Foreign Office's contention that public opinion would not approve of United States taking an active role at Geneva. the spokesman emphasized that it was "most assuredly, not due to any unfriendliness on the part of Japan, but more as a matter of principle."

The spokesman asserted that two Washington memoranda presumable notes urging peace and prospering conditions of activities in Manchuria to the requirements of international law had been withheld from the Japanese public on the ground that they might stir up anti-American feeling.

Geneva, Oct. 15.—(AP)—News that Japan and China would consider United States participation in the settlement of the Sino-Japanese dispute "unfair and unjustified" stimulated interest by League circles today.

The Japanese suggestion that the United States should be categorically stated if she intends this inclination to be made known was interpreted in some quarters as indicating a hesitating on United States' entry into the League.

The Council's "Big Five," including Foreign Minister Briand, Lord Reading and Dino Grandi, met privately in the League Secretariat at noon to talk over the situation.

Sidewalks Along Highways Will Cut Down Accidents

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 15—Construction of sidewalks along all highways in the province as a means of cutting down the accident toll was recommended by a jury before Mr. Justice McIvor at the Fall assizes Wednesday.

The jury's verdict, which awarded Jessie McNeily of Clarence Place, $800 damages on behalf of his seven-year-old son injured in an automobile accident, recommended the construction of sidewalks be undertaken "as soon as possible." McNeily asked damages of $5,000 in an action against Alfred Appolton, whose car struck the boy, breaking his right leg.

Department Issues Statement In Staples Case

Slice of France Asked by Germany in 1916 Before U.S. Took Part

Revelation at Washington In Gerard's Message To Wilson

PEACE EFFORTS

Wilson's Unsuccessful Attempt to Withdraw Austria-Hungary

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—One condition of peace offered by Germany two months before the United States entered the Great War was revealed today by the State Department as "a slice of France" and general allied indemnities.

The information was contained in a hitherto unpublished cablegram from Ambassador James W. Gerard on February 4, 1917, to President Wilson. It was part of a 706-page compilation of official correspondence made public by the state department.

"Even if there is war", it said, "German military calculated they can starve England before United States can do anything. These people have real pure god—Force."

Threatens War

"If you decide to make any threats," Gerard advised the President, "threaten war. Germans not afraid of diplomatic representations which simply means they can go ahead and do what they please and attack us if they will."

The German Chancellor, he reported, had spoken to him of "the great sacrifices the military and navy people have for United States."

"The German terms for peace at this time, Gerard informed his chief were:

"Germany to give up Belgium but retaining so-called guarantees such as railroads, docks, harbors, ports, commercial control," etc. a slice of France through rectification of frontier, will only give back a small part of Alberta and Bulgaria can do as they like with Roumania and everybody must pay indemnities to Germany."

Gerard added that "if Bernstorff (the German Ambassador), has given the President any other terms he is fooling him, but do not quote me to Bernstorff."

Falls With Austria

The united front in an attempt by President Wilson to induce Austria-Hungary to make peace shortly before the United States entered the war, also was disclosed.

Secret messages also showed President Wilson offering inducement to Austria-Hungary to forsake the German cause. He pledged that a previously expressed intention of the allies to disrupt the empire state by separating Hungary and Bohemia from Austria would not be carried out.

The effort formed a part of the general attempt made by the United States government in December, 1916, and the early months of 1917 to bring peace before entering the war.

It failed when the Austria-Hungarian government refused to dissociate itself from Germany in negotiations for peace or in the conduct of submarine warfare.

EDISON LIES ON VERGE OF STATE OF COMA

Deep Stupor Recently Comb, Pulse Weakens

END IS NEAR

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 15.—Thomas A. Edison today was on the threshold of the coma from which his physician does not expect he will ever awake.

Dr. Hubert S. Howe, the aged inventor's personal physician said that the "deep stupor" into which Edison has now sunken is closer to a coma than he has been at any time in the past few days and that Edison's pulse is showing definite signs of weakening under the strain.

The physician said that he could not at this time tell how long it would be until the end comes but that he intends to keep in closer touch with the Edison home throughout today and tonight.

In his morning bulletin, Dr. Howe said:

"During the past twenty-four hourg, Mr. Edison has not roused. He shows no signs of discomfort, simply resting quietly. There is no evident emergency."

But later he explained that he was worried about the change in Edison's pulse and had no way of being certain as to how far off the "evident emergency" might be.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 15.—Mrs. Helen Smith, 21-year-old bride, is one woman in a hundred thousand.

Although she shot herself in the heart last Tuesday night, she was still living today, and was expected by surgeons at the Edgewater Hospital to fight for life.

Dr. Charles G. Shannon, her physician, said that when she fired the shot her heart dilated between beats and the bullet grazed it and lodged in her back. This could not happen again, he added, in a hundred thousand times.

Mrs. Smith shot herself because she feared she would have to undergo a serious surgical operation. For three hours afterward she worked cleaning up her apartment and preparing her husband's evening meal.

Surgeons hope to be able to remove the bullet today.

PARTLY NEW KNEE GIVEN BY SCIENCE

Doctor Describes Use of Living Ligament

USE OF KNOBS

(By Howard W. Blakeslee)

(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, N.Y., Oct. 15.—Surgery now offers one a partly new knee. A new, living strap of ligament has been taken from other parts of the body and used to bind together the upper and lower leg bones at the knee.

This operation has been performed twice, and its technique was explained at a general session of the American College of Surgeons last night by William R. Cubbins, M.D., of Chicago.

The problem is like that of the stone age man who wanted a hammer. He created a stone head once so that it had knobs on both ends with grooves between them. He drilled holes or notches in the end of a wooden handle. He went to nature for leather thongs which he wound around the stone grooves. Crosses made in the thongs went down through the openings in the handle.

In the knee the two knobs corresponding to the stone hammer head are the normal contours of the lower end of the upper leg bone. The narrow hole to drill the holes. The new "thongs" in the operation are to reinforce the cruciate ligaments, which naturally bind the upper and lower leg bones like the stone age hammer. They are called cruciate because they cross each other in the form of a letter "X."

Dr. Cubbins obtains the material for his new ligaments from the tough membrane covering the large muscles above the leg of the person who needs the knee repairs. One comes from the outer or thigh side of the upper leg and the other from the muscle at the back. The strips from each are nearly a foot long and more than an inch wide.

After they are laced into place at the knee they are sewed to the membrane covering the bone. The cruciate ligaments may be injured by falls, bumps and twists. If they are weakened the knee might easily be dislocated.

"This strap is only a small part of the complex knee mechanism. Surgery previously has repaired several other knee repair jobs. Each has failed, however, to restore the body are grated into the knee.

Housing of Transients Becomes Local Problem

Council Names Special Committee To Find Property

DEBENTURE SALE

There was little business outside the question of the relief expenditure at the council held on Wednesday night. The council decided to place lights on North Front street from the upper bridge to the Cemetery road, such as have been placed on Dundas street, Station street and Highland, avenue. Hydro Electric Power Commission was given authority to purchase the property on Front street from the north side of the pavement running to the old limit and especially every traffic artery into the city lighted all the way to the city.

A letter was received from George Kay of Kingston stating it had been brought to the attention of him the city was dumping refuse on his lot on Lingham street. The council ordered that the chairman of public works and city engineer look into this matter and report back to the council.

Joe Shorti, Fire Chief Lynch and P. B. Smith will be a committee from the council to act with the larger committee to locate a place for the housing of transients this winter.

When the accounts were passed, Alderman Lockey took exception to an item of $14.50 for keeping a dog said to the C. P. R. telegraph company, stating that the company should have been sent via C. P. R. The chairman of finance, Alderman Woodley, explained to the enquiring Alderman that it could not be helped under the circumstances and told him how it came about. On the day the dog was picked up by Constable Standard, said Alderman Woodley, this tenders were closing for the sale of $312,000.00 worth of debentures of the city. We sent into consultation with the bank and was advised not to accept bids at that time and recall the debentures. This was done and immediately we had all the firms from which the city expected bids and also those from the messages were sent by C. P. R. telegraph. This situation will not arise again and I will see that the office bids are instructed."

When the question of debentures was brought up, Alderman Hill stated he was glad to hear that the city had them. "It has been commonly reported on the street," said the alderman, "that the debentures could not be sold and were taken off the market." Mayor Reid interjected that this was not a fair rumor as the city was in good financial condition and that the debentures would have been sold on the 24 inch rate if bank advised against accepting bids, but this was done through an oversight. His Worship also stated that practically all the debentures sold had been purchased in Canada. There was also a letter from the city to bring before the council and the meeting adjourned until tonight. A letter from Kingston was read allowing the Canadian Legion to hold a Poppy Day on November 7th for unemployment in this city.

STAPLE'S CASE IS EXPLAINED

Department of Immigration Explains Why Delay Caused

Ottawa Ont. Oct. 15.—(By The Canadian Press)—Delay in identifying the Dunn Staples, recently reported in despatches yesterday as being in want in Windsor, Ontario, is further deepened if Staples in the United States was due to the necessity of ascertaining whether or not they were Canadian citizens, according to the records of the Department of Immigration. The despatch from Windsor stated that John Staples, his wife and four children had been deported from the United States after six years' residence in Detroit. It was alleged that they had entered the United States illegally. Their difficulties with the United States Immigration authorities began last August when the family was prevented from entering Canada until their Canadian citizenship had been proved. The Staples family formerly resided in Trenton, Ontario. While awaiting deportation the adult members of the family were held in Wayne County jail.

According to the records here the family had been a public charge in Detroit since November, 1930, John Staples had for some years been employed by the City Gas Works in Detroit. He had domestic troubles which resulted in the family being brought by his wife and had not been heard from by his family support for nearly a year. Officials of the Immigration Department pointed out that it was necessary to be particularly careful at this time in guarding against illegal entry because of the number who endeavored to enter Canada in order to participate in unemployment relief works in this country.

"Iron Man" of Mexico Called in by President

Mexico City, Oct. 15 (AP)—Premier President Plutarco Elias Calles today called to the presidency of the Mexican Government again today following the resignation of the cabinet owing to "increasing political unrest."

President Ortiz Rubio appointed Calles, commonly known as "the iron man" of Minister of War in succession to General Joaquin Amaro, last night he accepted the resignations of Minister of Interior Lic. Emilio Portes Gil, Minister of Agriculture Saturnino Cedillo, Minister of Communications Juan Andreu Almazan, and General Amaro, Minister of War and Marine. Finance Montes De Oca.

In recent years," the President said, "there has developed a new and major problem, especially in the capital, originating from agitation of various irreconcilables in the political camp. Under such circumstances I feel it my duty to present to the consideration of my collaborators and political councils here the necessity of finding a solution offering inducement to Austria-Hungary to forsake the German cause. He pledged that a previously expressed intention of the allies to disrupt the empire state by separating Hungary and Bohemia from Austria would not be carried out.

The effort formed a part of the general attempt made by the United States government in December, 1916, and the early months of 1917 to bring peace before entering the war.

It failed when the Austria-Hungarian government refused to dissociate itself from Germany in negotiations for peace or in the conduct of submarine warfare.

MacDonald Will Use Plane in His Campaign

(By Thomas T. Champion)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 15.—(Canadian Press Cable)—With the aid of an aeroplane certain Premier Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald will address meetings in many of the various parts of the country in aid of members of the National Government.

The Prime Minister today received a telegram from the Association of officers of the Great War who asked him from the mail. "We admire your grit and determination." It read, "and we wish you every success. The nation must save this."

The strength with which the Labor Party is fighting their old leader on Seaham is evidenced by the announcement that Sir Charles Trevelyan, former Labor President of Education; Sir Ellen Wilkinson, General Secretary of the Labor Congress, and Miss Ellen Wilkinson, an redoubtable organizer, are among those going to Seaham to speak on behalf of William Coxon, the Labor candidate.

Nevertheless the number of campaign workers coming voluntarily to the aid of Mr. MacDonald is by no means negligible. Some of these have journeyed long distances, to help him fight for re-election.

Unnamed Colt Winner of Middle Park Stakes

Golden Hair Colt Wins By Two Lengths Over Leaningdale

SHORT HAND 3rd

Newmarket, Eng., Oct. 15 (CP)—W. Earl Dodge's unnamed colt by Gainsborough out of Golden Hair today decisively won the Middle Park Stakes, and practically clinched the championship of two-year-olds over Lord Derby's unnamed colt.

The Golden Hair colt won by two lengths from Leaningdale, while Lord Esmond's Short Hand third another length away. Fourteen colts were the six furlongs of the great fixture for two-year-olds.

The winner started odds on favorite of four to eleven. Leaningdale at 10 to 8 and Short Hand at 4 to 1.

The triumph duplicated victories in previous important events, including the Imperial Produce Stakes at Doncaster last month, when the Golden Hair colt was also odds-on favorite.

The Middle Park stakes has been run since 1866 and is worth approximately $20,000. Two more important events remain, the Dewhurst Stakes and the Cesarewitch Stakes and the Dewhurst Plate, but even before they are run the colt is assured of honors as the finest two-year-old of the season.

Continue Efforts To Prevent Split

(By Thomas T. Champion)

(Canadian Press Cable Staff Writer)

London, October 15.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Efforts to stave off the eve of nomination day efforts are being continued all over the country to avoid having the present crop of candidates appearing in the same division. How many have been averted and the efforts of the respective Government Parties to bring about fewer nominations are received tomorrow. It is certain that three-cornered contests will be considerably fewer than in 1929.

Yet, this confused general election campaign offers the anomaly of leading members of one faction of the Government being opposed in their constituencies by representatives of another, even while the rank and file are reaching more agreements every day. Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal Home Secretary, and Sir Donald MacLean, Liberal President of the Board of Education, will both find Conservatives among their opponents, for both are free traders.

One inflammatory speech cannot be passed by on account of speeches from the same source.—Lord Cecil.

Handicrafts Are Lost Art Here

Montreal, Que., Oct. 15.—Handicrafts are at a lost art in Canada. In fact, they are probably a more flourishing state than any other product in the Dominion, since many who have been deprived of their regular employment are turning to the traditional occupations of their fathers—and their mothers—to while away their enforced hours of leisure.

The heights to which the crafts of the native Canadian and those brought to his country by the new citizens from over the water have risen is strikingly illustrated in the display of work which adorns the beautiful collection of work which has been assembled for the annual exhibition of the Canadian handicrafts guild, which opens in the art gallery on Saturday. Dr. Victor Morin, President of the sub-guardian and nimismatic society of Montreal, will formally open the display.

AMUSEMENTS

MAURICE CHEVALIER, CLAUDETTE COLBERT IN "THE SMILING LIEUTENANT"

Delightful Melodies by Strauss

The screen's most unique stellar personality, loved the world over for himself, his songs, his virility, comes to the Belle Tomorrow for two days, matinee daily, in his new starring picture, "The Smiling Lieutenant," directed by Ernst Lubitsch, maker of "The Love Parade" and "The Patriot." He is Maurice Chevalier, the smiling French entertainer whose love-making and love singing have made him the idol of two continents.

"The Smiling Lieutenant" is a rollicking romance, with all the love and song appeal of his first moving picture, "Innocents of Paris"; with all the luxury of setting and story of "The Love Parade"; with the star of another Chevalier screen success, "The Big Pond," Claudette Colbert, in one of the leading feminine roles; with another bright screen light, gorgeous Miriam Hopkins, in an equally leading role, and with Charlie Ruggles, lovable comedian, in an important supporting part.

The story deals with the delicious romance of a young lieutenant of the guards, whose genius gets him involved with two women, one, a cabaret performer whom he loves and wants to marry; the other an old-fashioned princess who loves him and whom he is forced to marry. How this marriage turns his life topsy-turvy, and how the unwanted wife turns the table on her rival, is the amusing topic of the performance.

"HIGH STAKES"

With the opening of "High Stakes," the type of sophisticated drama popular with the majority, today at the Capitol Theatre, an E. P.N.S. desert knife will be given to each lady tonight.

In it, both as director and chief performer, Mr. Sherman shines, and his acting is never a delight as fine and rye and ear, he has gone further than in his earlier di ections) effort of for RKO-Radio. "Bachelor Apartment" and imparted a smooth and to easy flow to the rapid plot of the picture.

The cast has been well chosen and includes the vivacious Mae Murray, who has lost none of her fire and color despite the unsympathetic character of her role; Karen Morley, a young and personable lady whose talent is rapidly becoming the talk of cinemagoers; Edward Martindel, Ethel Levy and others, all capable players. Because of their efforts and Sherman's direction, and further because Willard Mack knew with his shrewd melodramatic flare that he was hitting the button in writing "High Stakes," the picture develops into a lively seventy minutes of entertainment.

"Having gotten to the east, nothing under the sun can prevent it from reaching Asia," he declared. "Shipping will take it over to Bombay, and Colombo, where mosquito

COMPRESSED AIR MOTORS COMING

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 15— Roy J. Meyers, Los Angeles inventor, believes both motor cars and airplanes eventually may, use compresse dair motors, eliminating the fire hazard and weight of fuel.

The inventor, who has experimented, with air devices for two decades, this week demonstrated a car of his own design which achieved a speed of 35 miles an hour on a 150-mile trip from Los Angeles to Bakersfield Calif.

FORESEES NEW PLANE MENACE

Eastbourne, England — The swift spread of disease from continent to continent by aeroplanes, starting epidemics which might paralyze the trade of world, is foreseen by Sir Malcolm Watson, who addressed the British Medical Association here.

Sir Malcolm is principal of the Department of Malaria Control of the Ross Institute and Hospital for Tropical Disease in London.

The mosquito which carries yellow fever germs almost certainly will be transported by air from its lost outpost on the west coast of Africa to the east coast, Sir Malcolm said fighting precautions are not adequate."

Dr. A. Massey, medical officer for Coventry, advocated surveillance of apparently healthy air passengers arriving from infected areas and the eventual organization of quarantine officers at airports.

70 Acclamations For Government Expected

London, Oct. 15 (C.P. cable) — The National government expects to get off to a flying start in the coming general elections. Indications are that between 60 and 70 members will have been returned by acclamation after nominations on Friday. The government expects to have a majority of between 20 and 30 when these are all in.

Three members have been elected already. The Scottish universities, entitled to three seats in the new house, have already returned three supporters of the government —two Conservatives and one Liberal.

RURAL HOMES FOR CITY FOLK

Ithaca N. Y. — Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt wants to attempt a state experiment which he believes will aid the farmers while alleviating economic distress among city employees. He wants to provide cheaper rural homes for city wage earners the state financing the project. It heas named a commission which is to consider state financing of the project as well as co-operation between public and private capital.

He wants quick action the commission being ordered to report by December 1 so plans for legislation may be whipped into shape for presentation to the 1932 legislature. Mr Roosevelt believes that modern transportation will permit the factory workers to live in rural communities where food will be cheaper and he believes also that development of electric power resources will sway from crowded cities permitting workers to live among cheaper rural surroundings at the same time providing the farmer with easily accessible markets.

WEDDINGS

BROMLEY—GARDINER

Ottawa—St. Mathew's Anglican church was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding at eleven o'clock Saturday morning, October 10, when Muriel Agnes, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gardiner, Smith's Falls, formerly of Ottawa, became the bride of Mr. Leonard Rutherford only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bromley, of Ottawa. Rev. J. W. R. Meakin performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was unattended.

After the ceremony, which was performed in the presence of only the immediate family of the bride and from and a few intimate friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bromley left for a motor trip to Quebec and the Adirondacks. Upon their return from their wedding trip they will take up residence at 227 Division avenue, Ottawa.

Out of town guests were the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gardiner, Smith's Falls; and her brother and sister, Mr. J. Fred Gardiner, of Belleville, and Miss Gladys E. Gardiner, of Smith's Falls.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 56

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

D'Arnot, the only son of an aristocratic French family of wealth, was unable to express his gratitude to Tarzan sufficiently. Never could he forget those terrible times among the cannibals when Tarzan had saved him from being eaten alive. Now he was brokenhearted at the thought of parting.

Tarzan wished to work his way across the Atlantic, D'Arnot would not consent. He had deposited money to Tarzan's credit and had given him a fine French motor car. Making him promise to return to Paris, d'Arnot reluctantly bid him adieu and wished him "Bon voyage" as Tarzan boarded the great liner.

The handsome "Monsieur Tarzan" was a great favorite during the voyage. One morning as he stood on the dancing spray, he heard a cry "Man overboard," and saw a youth slip to the dark waters below. Quick as a flash, Tarzan dived after, clasping him almost before the waters closed over them.

Tarzan became the idol of the ship. It happened that the rescued boy's grateful parents were James Clayther, and so Tarzan easily found his way. The day after docking, a big black car stopped at the modest home and a black-haired giant leaped happily up the porch.

Our old friend Esmerside opened the door. "If 'ain't the ape-man," she cried, and as usual was about to faint, but excitement prevented her. He learned that "Miss Jane" had gone up north to be married. He needed no further incentive to speed Tarzan over the miles toward Clayton's camp.

COLUMBUS

Chrisopher Columbus whose discovery of America 439 years ago was marked on Monday, may have had many misfortunes in life even after he discovered America, but his enormous fame is greater than that of every other explorer the world ever had. Marco Polo was a wonderful figure as he penetrated to the capital of Cathay and brought back tales of the Orient, but his journeys were not enlighted with such importance to the world at large. A large portion of the human race now lives in America inhabited in 1492 by scattered Indians and exercises a very powerful influence upon world movements.

Canadians ought not to forget Columbus, the daring navigator without whom there undoubtedly would have been no Canada as we know it today.

Of course in the nature of things the new continent would have been discovered sooner or later, perhaps soon, for a spirit of daring and emancipation was in the air. Columbus himself had caught the breath of this free world spirit.

HIGHWAY FOOTPATHS

The case for footpaths along the provincial highways would appear to have been made clear. It is only a case of time and money before the project is undertaken. Everyone realizes the need of pedestrian ways to take the place of those removed in places by the construction of the highways or to be provided where they did not formally exist. Times have changed and ways of locomotion have progressed since the day when walkers might with safety amble upon the roads, ready to keep an eye out for buggies, democrats, and lumber wagons. Keeping out of the way of cars on the highways is another thing.

August report for the province shows that there were three deaths and thirteen cases of injury to pedestrians walking on the highways of Ontario.

The Ottawa Citizen believes that the time is opportune to begin work on the construction of these paths at not too great expense as a relief measure. Most of the work could be done by hand labor, there are no heavy requirements for materials and these paths might be constructed along the provincial rights of way.

47 MILES SHORTER

It is good news to the people of Belleville to realize that they are to be forty-seven miles closer to Ottawa by reason of the building of the northern provincial highway which threads the centre of the province. Belleville is even more interested and Hastings is involved particularly because this will mean the routing through Belleville and Hastings of a large amount of traffic to and from Ottawa. The city is well supplied with good streets to stand the strain of this transportation, and also have good bridges.

To Hastings County it means a great deal for the country will get the benefit of transverse traffic entering from Peterborough county as well as that coming up from the south from Belleville to link up with the cross-country roadway.

THE NEW COCKTAIL

How many people in these parts have tasted the new cocktail, that of tomato juice? Tomato cocktails have for the juice has been on sale at the stores and there are fairly good sales of the product of the lowly tomato.

This cocktail is one that the "dry" man may drink without fear of contamination of his conscience. "Cocktail" has been associated with the insidious vice of "drinking" but drinking does not necessarily mean the use of intoxicants. The word "drink" is outliving the association with booze and it is coming to mean what it is intended to mean. So cocktail through the tomato is gaining a real prestige in the culinary world.

The Minister of Agriculture in the province of Ontario speaking at Woodstock praised the new cocktail in these words:

"In four places to which I journeyed recently I found tomato juice cocktails served by the ladies or others who had charge of the banquets. We recently have come to find that tomato juice is as good or better for us than orange juice. We can grow the tomatoes right here in Ontario. Those four places which served tomato juice did just that much to increase the demand for tomatoes, and that in turn did just that much to help those who grew tomatoes here in Ontario."

THE MASTERS

By Aline Michaelis

There are many masters in a life,
Though the world may never know.
Of the combats, fought not with sword or knife,
Or the struggles of foe with foe.

There are evil masters whose rule is grim,
And masters both kind and good,
And the one may gain through an instant's whim
What the other for years withstood.

There are many masters in each man's soul,
Assailing him one by one,
As good or evil may gain control,
And the combat is never done.

There are many masters, but year on year,
Though the conquests are widely spaced
Through hope by hope or fear by fear
The trend of a life is traced.

Though the heart of man is a battle ground
Where the good and bad contend,
The way of his spirit is plainly found
By the sum of his work at the end.

QUITE THE MOST INTERESTING reading nowadays is in the newspapers, said my friend, the Bridge street optimist, and the most profitable reading centres in the advertisements. Just imagine, says he, finding an invitation to come and buy a pair of trousers for one dollar, shoes for $1.50 up, according whether they are male or female, a whole pound of candy for twenty-five cents, a dinner for twenty-five cents, women's dresses for $2.95, fresh pork at ten cents a pound, smoked picnic hams at 13c, women's suits for $5.95, women's new fall hats for 98 cents, automobile tires from $5.95 up, sugar, almost twenty pounds for one dollar, good brooms for 39 cents, a 53-piece tea set for $1.29, a little over five cents the piece; rolled oats back round the old price of three cents per pound, and other big values too numerous to mention. Says the Optimist, the housewife can read the evening paper, make a list of purchases from the prices advertised and save enough on the shopping to take the whole family to the theatre, and she turns to the theatre advertisements to see just what show will please them best. And so the Bridge street optimist while he may mix his metaphors and his pork with women's hats and dresses, and his picnic hams with bicycle tires, yet he points to an obvious fact that money can be made by mining in the advertising columns of this great family journal, and that times are no good now that more goods can be bought for a dollar than for a long time before the war. So when you come to think of it times are better than they ever were before—for the most of us.

WOMAN WHO LIVED in hotel room in New York city had a million dollars in currency concealed about the room. She didn't trust banks she said and withdrew the money, from circulation. She lost the interest and a great deal of the capital because she was not able to put the wealth in a place where moth and rust would not corrupt nor thieves break through and steal. The old stocking bank is easier to break than the massive institutions which have been built up to protect the savings and the investments of moderate men who are sane enough to know that the banks can protect their money better than they can themselves.

SORROW AND LENGTH OF LIFE

Mrs. Harriet L. H. Hodges, of Lynn, Massachusetts, is 103 years of age. In an interview a few days ago she is reported as accounting for her longevity as follows: "Well I guess it never was very sorry, or it never wore myself out."

The theory undoubtedly is sound. On every page of history the evidence is found that worry is shortening life. But there is an interesting corollary. According to sacred writ: "In much wisdom is much grief, and He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow." If the mind does not perceive the heartaches and sorrows, the tears and the eyes and stop the ears to the woes of humanity may escape much sorrow—but they are not listed among the world's great.

Stevenson's book, "A People's Best" presents first of all a sketch of Colonel John McCrae, war surgeon and poet, prefaced by this quotation from a letter to his mother: "I would not have you considering that sometimes when we save we lose." Robert Baldwin, whose memory is revered as that of a great statesman, died at 64 after carrying heavy burdens in troubled times, and in "Great Men of Canada" it is recorded that he "was a man of sorrows." Hon. W. J. Hanna, who refused the membership of Ontario Cabinet in war-time in a lesser capacity, and to whose sympathetic work on behalf of prisoners the province proposed to erect a memorial, died worn out, before he was 60. Because Florence Nightingale, aged 90, responded to the needs of wounded soldiers, the world today lits the Red Cross Society, and her name will live forever. But no one who cares enough for humanity to try to better its lot can escape its grief, sharing the burden of its sorrow.

"The Saviour of men was a great pity of human sorrow, and compassion and turned mourning into rejoicing; the cheerfulness of His countenance attracted little children, and leading into His Temple men and women sick of body or soul felt themselves made whole. But He fulfilled the prophecy, 'A man of sorrows and acquainted with grief,' and His earthly career ended at about 33 years, on a day of sorrows which has been observed by the Christian world for nineteen centuries.

It is a wonderful thing to live to the age of 103. But the world will soon forget. It pays greater tribute to sacrifice, as of those who in the great war "gave of their rich, red wine of youth," and of whom a great bard has written, "They shall not grow old, as we that are left grow old: Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn."

At the going down of the sun and in the morning,
We will remember them."

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

TOM GILL

Once among these silent spectators a form moved. One of Jito's vaqueros whipped a knife from his belt and glanced quickly at the slick of a cocked automatic sounded unmistakably loud in the silent room. He looked up to see the gray eyes of Don Bob watching warily. Don Bob said no word, but the heavy Colt had shifted ever so little toward the Mexican who held the knife. Quickly the man dropped back into the crowd.

Then, suddenly, it was ended.

Once again the great fist of Jito raised impotently into the air, but the jerking, mighty fingers clutched nothingness, and now his knees bent and his head fell limply into ward. It was over. The giant of the border was down. One last moan of agony over those long tortured lips, and his eyes closed. As he slid to the floor Ted threw his arms about him raised him and carried that great, unconscious form across the room. On the bar he laid it's fallen adversary and stood for a long moment watching him while his own heart pounded wildly in his breast. For a moment the room swayed. His chest rose and fell, surging for air. Then he raised his head toward Bob and tried to smile.

The older man had turned toward the watchful little knot of vaqueros. "This man," Bob said to them in Spanish, "gives you back your chief. If he had chosen he might have killed them. We go now, but let none of you move until we are away."

Once more Ted looked at the crumpled bulk lying so strangely still across the bar. All hatred, all bitterness had gone out of him—he felt only a great weariness, a desire for sleep. Don Bob threw his cost over Radcliffe's shoulders and led him out into the night.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Next morning Ann Reed sat in her room smoking a late after-breakfast cigarette. Downstairs Mendoza was still alive with the tale of last night's encounter. Through the hot ranches and toward the foothills men were spreading the tale as they rode out in the early dawn. Twice already Mendoza had thrust his dark face into the singer's room to repeat to her some word of that night's romantic battle, but now, as she looked up from beside the sunny window, Mendoza had different news.

"A señorita asks to come up." There was a quaver of excitement in his voice. "It is the Señorita Morales." For a moment the little man was silent. "It must be about that fight of those two mad giants. Quien va? All the border will know of this by night, and then what will those swaggering vaqueros of Paco Morales say?"

The long lashes of the girl lifted. She smiled and dropped the cigarette into a bowl before her. "Ask Señorita Morales to come up."

And she was still smiling when the door opened and Adela Morales stood in the doorway.

Their eyes held each other with a long, questioning look. To the older woman Adela seemed enviably young and splendidly alive as she stood there hesitant in the doorway. A shaft of light from the window touched the coppery hair curling beneath the broad-brimmed Panama. The flush of desert winds was in her cheeks. She entered and softly closed the door.

"You know who I am," she said.

Ann Reed nodded. "And I know, too, why you came. Please sit down."

As Adela pulled off her driving gloves the singer saw her lips quiver, and knew that tears were not far from her eyes. A sudden wave of sympathy for the girl caught her. She broke the silence. "You were taken in last night by what you saw here, weren't you? Just for a moment?"

Adela nodded, her eyes still bright with tears.

"Your uncle is stupid. But all men are stupid, so why complain?" The singer lighted a cigarette. "And yet that was a dangerously cruel thing to do. You know, I had to hold back that big giant of yours, or he might have made Paco Morales kill you very sorry for himself. But you don't need me to tell you who that grinning giant of yours really loves, do you? Of course you don't. You only came to me to make sure. It was a courageous thing. I wonder if any man is worth it?"

Then slowly, dispassionately, but with relentless accuracy, Ann Reed told of Morales's earlier visit and of the offer he had made.

"Nor he knew that Radcliffe was in my room last night, I can't say," she finished.

"But why was he here?"

Ann smiled understandingly. "He came up to get a note for Don Bob. That's all."

The frank friendship in her eyes won Adela. "Until I was in bed and began thinking, I think I hated you both, and I had no right to hate, for—I have no claim on him."

"I know. I know terribly well of love that has no claim. But after you thought about it you realized—"

"I only knew that there was some mistake—that there had to be a mistake, and I had to come to you right away. I thought—how much I cared."

Again the singer smiled. "That was worth something, wasn't it? If you had been less straightforward, Morales might have done the harm he'd hoped to do. You know, the greatest favor I could do you would be to tell you not to trust your uncle if you love this American boy—and I think you do—watch. Paco Morales. I don't think he would stop at anything to keep you two apart."

Ann rose, and, walking to where the girl sat, laid a white hand on her shoulder. "You're young, and you have courage, my dear, and many people will love you. The world for you should be a glorious place to live in. Don't ever spit it. Don't let doubts and suspicions come between you and that big gringo of yours. And if you both love, then give yourselves utterly to love. Don't let uncles or differences of race or anything in this world keep you apart. That's all the wisdom I can give you." The calm eyes that were neither sad nor gay looked down almost wistfully at the face where the miracle and radiance of love had come.

She may have sighed. "You were made for happiness. Go and claim it. Danger lies ahead for both of you. Your lover has two of the most powerful enemies in the border. Watch them both. And trust."

Impulsively Adela kissed her. "You've helped me more than you know," she whispered, and ran down the hall.

For a long time the singer sat watching the thin ribbon of smoke as it spiraled upward from a broken cigarette. Then, very quietly, she laid her head among the pillows and covered her face.

Straight from Mendoza's Adela drove to the house of Don Bob, and as the rancher ran down the steps she laid both hands on his arm.

"You heard what my uncle did?" He nodded.

"It was unworthy of a caballero. I am ashamed for him and for me. But what shall I say to Ted?"

He patted her hand. "Better say nothing at all, dear. It's over, and besides Ted had quite a busy evening after that."

"How is he? And where is he?"

Bob nodded toward the house. "Inside, trying to shave with his left hand. He's just a little awkward this morning, for some reason." Then his eyes were fired with the memory of that struggle, and he shook the girl gently by the shoulders. "Our Ted made immortal border history last night, Adela. Jito's defeat will mean more for the peon than a dozen of El Coyote's raids. But when did you hear of it?"

"By dawn this morning the vaqueros brought the news to the ranch, and an hour later Jito rode in. He was terribly battered. Uncle and I put him to bed, and later he and Jito had a long talk together, but they told me nothing."

A door closed above them, and they looked up to see Ted. His right hand was bandaged and above his forehead stretched an angry bruise. As he saw Adela his face lightened. Running quickly down the steps he took her hand and raised it to his lips.

"I'm sorry to be worried since I heard," she said simply, and even then there was a little tremor in her voice. "You're not hurt?"

Ted shook his head. He tried to speak casually. "I'm as sore as the very devil, but not hurt. Your little uncle has left his mark on every square inch of me, but in six months or a year I'll be fit as ever."

Together they sought the shadow of the porch, and as Don Bob lighted the girl's cigarette she looked swiftly up at Ted. "I'm not going to talk about last night—not ever. It was a cruel stupid act of my uncle's, and I shan't forgive him for that. You see, my friend, I have known many American evil—and so my uncle is bitterly afraid I may fall in love with you." She smiled. "Is not a compliment, big Americano?" Then, suddenly serious again, she added: "Don't think this means you are in danger—very real danger. Jito will not let many days pass before he wipes out the memory of last night. And it may be my uncle will help him. You must not come into Mexico again, Ted. Even here you are not safe."

"Safe from what?"

"From Jito, and from something—I don't know what. There's a shadow I can't explain but that frightens me. Don't you feel it, Bob?"

Bob smiled slowly. He looked out over the desert. "Danger here as everywhere. Always the bright face of danger. What can Ted do about it?"

"He can keep out of Mexico."

"Would you?" Ted's eyes were on her.

Ted himself answered. "That's just what I can't do, Adela. I'm running Bob's cattle over in Mexico, and I'll be riding into the Mexican ranges as a regular part of the work. It will be better if I just ignore last night and let Jito see what he wants. In any event, I'd hate to have him think that I'm running scared. I believe Jito and I can afford to call it quits."

He looked down unsmilingly at his bandaged hand.

Bob nodded to Adela. "This belligerent foreman of mine isn't going to be worth a centavo as a cowpuncher today. If you're driving to Colorado Springs, take him from under my feet."

"Sold!" Eagerly Ted reached for his hat. "It's the first holiday I've ever been offered—let's go before this one has a chance to repent."

And together they ran down the steps to the girl's car.

"You're going to meet Father Adela told him as they sped along. "He fled over here to the little Mexican chapel in Ysrel when the churches were closed by the government in Mexico. He'll be good for that wicked soul of yours. Have you met him?"

Ted shook his head. "I don't even know where the church is. I've never had a real distrust for churches. They seem to keep out God."

"What an odd thought!"

"Not to me. Always to me God has meant sunshine and open sky. It's as if there is a great deal of room in the world and in the silence of the stars. More than in church. Is that a foolish thought?"

"Who can tell? You might ask the padre."

O. E. S. BAZAAR

Wednesday afternoon in the V.M.C.A., Belleville Chapter No. 55, Order of the Eastern Star, had their annual bazaar for the sale of fancy work, homemade cooking, candy, etc., and it was a real success in spite of the threatening weather.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with flowers, ferns and floor lamps which seemed to add just the right finishing touch. In this setting, Sister Naylor, Worthy Matron, received the guests, assisted by Sister Embury, Associate Matron, and Sister Cornish, Past Matron, as Convener and Co-Convener.

The fancy work table was in charge of Sisters Chesher and Lewis, Past Matrons, assisted by Sisters Adams, Darrah and Shorey.

The candy table was in charge of Sister Wessel as convener, assisted by Sisters Wannacott, Austin and Scott.

The home cooking table was in charge of Sister Smith as convener assisted by Sisters Green, Hallam and Murphy.

The tea room was in charge of Sisters Moon and Tice as conveners, with Sister Reid, Past Matron, pouring tea, while Sisters Griffin, Holst, Law, Orne and Williamson served the guests.

The guessing contest with the bean jar was in charge of Sisters Liddle and Hibbard, but I would not care to pass any remarks about the ability of the guests to guess the number of beans in the jar. It is enough to say that the nearest guess was that of Mrs. Samuel Hibbard.

Sister Clare was in charge of the fortune telling booth and set a prognosticator of destinies she is in a class by herself, if one may judge from the faces of those leaving the booth.

Sisters Redfern and Rothwell had their usual place looking after the loose change at the door.

In our opinion the most important spot for the afternoon was the kitchen presided over by Sister Sullivan, assisted by Sister Brown, McEwen and Hogle. They must be magicians considering the good things which came from their department.

A special cake donated by Sister Morgan, Past Matron, was raffled and was won by Mrs. Pyne. She will have sunshine in her home for a little while.

Looking at the matter from any angle, the afternoon was a success.

Mankind are divided into two classes: those who, being artificial praise nature, and those who, being natural, prize art.—Bertrand Russell.

Battling Crowd Hears Einstein

Vienna, Oct. 15.—A huge crowd battled with police yesterday to hear Prof. Albert Einstein, father of relativity, outline a new scientific theory, even though the theory concerned such a highly technical subject as the use of vectors in three dimensional space, something understandable only to a few competent mathematicians.

The scientist was unable to begin his address until the police had weeded out the disinterested listeners. A photographer who exploded a flashlight while Professor Einstein was in the midst of his formulae was ejected from the room.

RICKET—In loving memory of our dear father who died October, who passed away Oct. 13, 1928.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought the end was near
And only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting without farewell.
More each day we miss you, father,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That is within our hearts concealed.

COUNTRY CLUB HELD CLOSING SOCIAL NIGHT

Prizes Won By Members During Year Were Presented

DANCE ENJOYED

Season One of the Most Successful in History of Country Club

Summer is gone — autumn is almost past and with it departs the opportunity for regular participation in many sports and pastimes peculiar to the open seasons — one of the most popular of which is golf. Golf, however, is not a mere pastime — it is a game, a sport which beloves many benefits upon its thousands of ardent devotees. It is a builder of men and women — it helps them mentally and physically — it frees their minds of all worry for a time at least, excepting possibly the worry over "their game". The commendably of the links and club house is a wonderful impetus to a brighter outlook upon life and fits them to more successfully cope with the daily round — not only of nine or eighteen holes — but with the problems of life — it teaches them to play the game in friendly rivalry. The joy of being in the open—tramping with energetic, carefree strides upon the soft surface of mother earth, breathing deeply the pure invigorating air — viewing the great satisfying beauty of the countryside and the beautiful waters and picturesque shore lines of the beautiful Bay of Quinte — surely all this is sufficient to entice them to seek the great freedom afforded by playing golf at the Bay of Quinte Country Club.

Last Ball Teed

The last ball has been teed — the last stroke has been swung — the last putt has been holed. Insofar as competitive events are concerned at this popular club, as Wednesday evening the golfing season was closed officially and a large number of the members gathered at the club house for the annual dinner, dance and distribution of prizes. The attractive lounge, decorated and furnished, as it is, in most excellent taste and harmony — its own cheerfulness enhanced by the blazing fire upon the large hearth — presented a happy and merry scene as the members availed the season's close to dinner, which was served in the ball room, gay with flags and lanterns. The long tables were attractively arranged — the dinner was excellent — the spirit of the party was merry with interesting talk and repartee — all were happy and congenial.

Splendid Programme

Hearty singing of favorite songs in chorus was an enjoyable diversion at the close of dinner. A highly pleasing piano duet was rendered by Miss Leona Riggs and Mr. Leo Riggs. Mr. Riggs also gave several piano selections in his usual admirable and pleasing manner. Mr. James Bankier delighted all with his singing — especially pleasing was his rendition, by request, of "When You and I Were Young, Maggie". Mrs. Leo Riggs delighted everyone with her beautiful voice in the solo given by her and Mr. E. V. Illsley's excellent voice was heard with great pleasure in several songs.

Mr. C. A. C. Weir, the president of the club, addressed the members regarding club matters and referred especially to the generous and highly efficient service given to the club this season by the professional instructor, Mr. W. G. Little.

The prize winners in all competitions were announced by Mr. Weir and the prizes were presented by him to the victors — none of whom, however, were not present to receive their trophies, being absent from the city.

Men's Events

The prize winners were as follows:

Senior match play—Club championship for the Graham Cup won by Mr. George Faulkner.

Handicap championship for Ponton shield, won by Mr. E. V. Illsley.

Junior match play, golf club, won by Mr. Don Carman.

Junior handicap championship, golf club, won by Mr. Albert Faulkner.

Ladies' Club championship for the Coats' Cup—Won by Miss M. Roberts.

Handicap championship for Lazier cup to be played at some convenient time by Mrs. Stobie and Mrs. Stewart Roberson.

Graham cup, won by Miss M. Roberts.

Ringer competition, Miss M. Roberts, score 36; Mrs. Stobie, score 37.

Prizes in this event are donated by Mrs. Bromley of Windsor and are to be selected by her upon being advised of the winners.

Reduction in handicaps—Mrs. McElhiney was the winner with 47 per cent and Mrs. Freeland, second with 45 per cent.

Prizes in this event were donated by Mrs. Stobie, being a handsome Wedgwood bowl, for the first prize and a golf ball for the second prize.

Medal rounds competitions (best net score), prize of a golf ball awarded weekly: Mrs. Stobie, 2; Mrs. McElhiney, 3; Mrs. Ryan, 1; Mrs. Freeland, 1; Miss L. Stafford, 1; Mrs. Lyall, 1; Miss M. Roberts, 1; Mrs. Porter, 1; Mrs. Robb, 1; Miss Chant 1.

Tennis

Men's tennis championship for the cup donated by Mrs. H. Corby was won by Mr. Twomey Black.

Ladies' championship in singles for the cup donated by Mrs. C. A. Cameron was won by Mrs. D. M. Hannah.

The raffle for three golf clubs was won by Mr. W. Rankin.

In the tennis section, Mr. F. G. Cushing is president, Miss Leona Riggs, captain of ladies' section; Mr. C. Bryant is captain of the men's section.

In golf, Mrs. Stobie is captain of the ladies' club and Mr. E. V. Illsey is captain of the men's club.

Dance Followed

On completion of this interesting part of the evening's events, the Commodore six-piece orchestra commenced to play most delightfully — golf was forgotten for the time and dancing was enjoyed for the balance of the evening.

The shareholders of the club during the evening went into conference in the dining room and elected the following directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. G. A. C. Weir, E. V. Illsey, F. B. Smith, C. A. Cameron, J. Ryan, R. C. Stafford, J. Bone, Dr. Stobie and Dr. Blaiklee.

At a later date the president and other active officers of the club will be selected by the directors.

The last hope of those who had visions of making a hole in one' during the club's official competition season, is gone for this year — but this is only hope deferred — possibly the much sought distinction will be won by them next season.

It has been a most enjoyable year to the members of the Bay of Quinte Country Club and undoubtedly all those present at the official closing of the season's play Wednesday evening, are looking forward to the time next year, when the links will again be green and they can shoulder their bag of clubs and resume keeping their 'eye on the ball'.

OWEN YOUNG ASKS HELP OF GRID TEAMS

Propose the Teams Play Football-Games For Unemployed

COLLEGE APPROVES

Practically Every University Gives Proposition Consideration

New York, (N.Y.) Oct. 15.—A trumpet call to college football to hit the line for the unemployed was sounded today by Owen D. Young.

The Chairman of President Hoover's committee on mobilization of relief resources appealed to every college in the land to play at least one game for the jobless.

Rallying college officials, players and students to the cause, the electrical magnate disclosed that the nation-wide drive to have college elevens roll up a golden barrage against want is already undergay.

He hinted that the decision of the Big Ten of the Western Conference to play post season benefit games and to the recently scheduled armynavy game as cases in point. These decisions were made after Mr. Young had sought the opinion of college presidents on the feasibility of benefit games not all gave their approval, but so many did as to be satisfied the plan is practicable.

He emphasized a hope, that the games may be made student activities throughout. He urged that "with the approval of the administrative officers, the Senior class in each college arrange benefit contests for attendance at the game and give the widest possible publicity to the contributions of the students to unemployment relief funds.

Quick Response

A quick response to Owen D. Young's call for football to help the unemployed has brought the prospect that probably will turn out to be the greatest gridiron carnival the United States ever has seen in the first two weeks of December.

Today, less than 24 hours after the chairman of President Hoover's committee on the mobilization of relief resources made his request for football's aid, games have been arranged involving ten of the East's outstanding football schools. The Western Conference has laid the groundwork for more battles and various other colleges and even professional teams are falling in line.

The Army-Navy game at New York, Dec. 12, originally the one big charity clash, now ranks as the climax of a great football festival, while two gridiron tournaments involving Yale, Dartmouth, Holy Cross and Brown on the one hand, and Princeton, Pennsylvania, Cornell and Columbia on the other have been arranged for the week preceding the service clash.

NEW COACH FOR HAWKS

Godfrey Matheson of Winnipeg to Take Over Duties

Chicago, Ills., Oct. 15.—Godfrey A. Matheson, of Winnipeg, Man., former hockey coach at St. John's College and the University of Manitoba has been appointed coach of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

The Hawks will do their training in Pittsburgh, and the first squad of thirteen men left Chicago last night for Detroit to be new coach. In the squad were the veterans Vic Ripley, Marcelin Wentworth, Taffy Abel, Mush March, Frank Ingram, Virgil Eastern Jenkins and Miller, and the newcomers Paul Thompson, obtained from the New York Yankees for Art Rooney, Jerry Lowrey, who was with Philadelphia, and Pal O'Shea, Frank Donals and Louis Holmes.

19 Burmese Sail For London Parley

Rangoon, Burma, Oct. 15.—Nineteen Burmese sailed today for London to take part in a round table conference in November which will decide whether Burma shall be converted into an independent state or an autonomous province within an Indian federation of states.

Mahatma Gandhi and his Indian nationalists, have expressed fears that if Burma is separated from India the British would continue to dominate it and might convert it into a great naval base like Singapore. Most of the delegates are understood to favor dominion status for their country.

Burma has enormously rich resources of minerals, petroleum, timber, rubies and sapphires.

Nobody with character is vulgar. —A. A. Milne.

BANK COUNSEL IS OUTSPOKEN

His Appeal to Court in Montreal Bank Case

Toronto, Oct. 15 (CP).—A wholesale fraud was being attempted on the Bank of Montreal, W. N. Tilley K.C., alleged yesterday in argument before special non-jury court in Osgoode Hall. The allegation was made in opposing the action of W. R. Bonter for recovery of $300,000 from the bank. Bonter claims this sum was deposited in the bank as security for a $1,000,000 loan.

"Most of these documents brought in by Bonter as evidence are fakes brought in for the purpose of deceiving the court," counsel for the bank said. "This is a shooting charge to make. But if a case like this can be built up and brought before a court, I suggest it is a danger to the whole commercial life of the community, and if I am right in my suggestion it is a case which should not and cannot be treated lightly. I ask for the dismissal of the case with costs."

COUNCIL FACES ESPLANADE PROJECT

Estimated Cost of New Street $122,000 Says Report by Committee

City Council Holds Adjourned Meeting On Problem

FIGURES

Discussion at Monday's Night's Meeting Short

Whether the city council will accept the comprehensive report presented by J. O. Herity, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce and secretary of the special citizens' committee on the esplanade proposition and vote to build this river drive will not be decided until tonight, when the adjourned meeting of the city council will be held. On Wednesday night, when the regular meeting of the Citizens' Committee sponsored by Mayor Reid of which W. B. Deacon was chairman and J. O. Herity secretary, appointed by the special council and read the report of their findings and the reasons why this river drive should be built. There was little discussion on the question as it was decided at one sitting. There were other business to be transacted and council decided to hold an adjournment session on Thursday night in question being the only one to come before the meeting.

Opportunity to Consider

The report as submitted to the city council by the citizens' committee after a full opportunity to read the report at leisure at the meeting of council here before the vote is taken. As soon as the meeting was called to order by Deacon, the chairman of the committee said words of explanation were given in the report and prepared by the city engineer and a few questions were asked by Deacon. Then Woodley asked Mr. Deacon if he thought the property on the north side of Front street were willing to pay the increased taxation for the esplanade and sidewalk and the chairman stated that he believed they would. The chairman told the council that it was intimated if the proposition went through the underwriters of fire insurance would decrease the tariff the area benefited and also that Marshall asked if they had been guaranteed that statement and the underwriters will guarantee action," said the mayor.

$50,000 For City

Alderman Tice calculated the committee on the excellent report brought down for the consideration of the council and it was his understood that the whole proposition will be financed by the city.

only cost $67,000.00 and approximately $53,000.00 would be assessed that are to be purchased making a total of about $120,000.00 for the city, the chairman," he asked, and Mr. Deacon answered in the affirmative.

"There is some talk on the street," said Alderman McMillan, "that the figures in the report are not correct." Mr. Archie B. Ponton, who was the consulting engineer on the bridges, will be in the city today and by order to give the council a clear idea of the cost. In the interim he have Mr. Crealock check the figures and also give a short report. This report be available at the adjourned meeting.

Alderman Tice wished to know if of the amount in the report how much was to be paid for material and how much for labor and the chairman said the chairman he could figure that out from the report given. Alderman Tice then asked if anything was done to get the merchants on the west side of Front street as to their assessment and the chairman replied, "nothing". Alderman Anderson asked if the estimation was made of the cost of the fill on the west side of the driveway and the city engineer indicated there would be no need for fill on that side. Alderman Walker stated there would be need for such back of the Walker Hardware Company and with this statement the city engineer did not agree. "I have worked in that section for twenty-five years without any fill being put in the river. There will have to be a fill especially at the Walker Hardware building," said Alderman Walker.

Question As to Labor

Alderman Looker again came back to the question as to the amount to be spent for labor. He stated that the city had to be sure and not for the buying materials and Alderman Kinnear interjected that the main idea is he understood it was to put in the new street and relieve some of the congestion of traffic on Front street Alderman Looker said "that's enlightening." Alderman Woodley stated that the same proposition to build a street along the river from had been before the citizens on many occasions and the report should be given the earnest consideration by every alderman. The question, that is to be decided is what is the best way to give the working man an opportunity to work through the winter.

Alderman Hill was agreeably surprised at the report as it had been rumored on the street that the cost would be, close to the half million mark and if the figures are correct in the report it is a real proposition to take hold of, he said.

Taxes Too High

Alderman Sprackett was of the opinion that there was something better to spend the money on than building a driveway. There are a number of streets in the city that should have sewers and sidewalks and the alderman mentioned the street from the overhead bridge on North Front street to King George school on the west side. There should be a sidewalk for the children on the north side. "The alderman thought the city was paying high enough and that the poorer citizens were not in favor of building a concrete at $12 yd. 30,000.00

Estimated cost of real estate after making allowances for anticipated reduction, $3,000,000.

The cost of the Committee at $5 per cent of the inner sidewalk would be assessed against the adjacent property upon the usual terms. The city's share main would also be installed upon the usual terms but it is believed that the cost of this will be taken-main as of sewer and other utilities could be secured from the unemployment grant by the government.

It is the opinion of the Committee that the construction of the retaining wall be inaugurated at once, thus affording immediate relief to many necessitous cases of unemployment, and the encouragement of buildings, clearing the right of way, installing sewer, watermains, gas mains and putting in the required fill could follow in due course. Such features as sidewalks, curb and surfacing could be left over until such time as desirable.

Recommendation

The committee having in view the present extremely serious unemployment situation in our city, the unexpectedly moderate cost of the proposed improvement and the tremendous importance of such a development in anticipation of future civic needs, most heartily and unanimously recommends the City Council to pass the required bylaw and begin the actual work as soon as may be.

Advantages

The advantages are so numerous and apparent as scarcely, to require enumeration but for the purpose of record and to present them more forcibly to the public may again be briefly summarized in part as follows:

1.—The establishment of a new business thoroughfare for Belleville, wide, commodious and beautiful.

2.—The elimination of an area that has for the most part been a collection ground for rubbish and a menace to health and generally unsightly appearance of our city.

3.—Relief of the intolerable traffic congestion upon Front St.

4.—Provision of parking accommodation for many hundreds of cars.

5.—Provision for the loading and unloading of merchandise at the stores and places of business along the route.

6.—Reduction of the fire hazard.

7.—Reduction of fire insurance rates.

8.—An attractive river front that would be a permanent source of pleasure and visitors to our city.

9.—Employment to merchants and other business men to establishments and other places of business of the Fraser Type [illegible]

10.—A tremendous stimulus to the building and all supply trades.

11.—An enormous increase of the taxable wealth of Belleville.

12.—An immediate and adequate relief to unemployment upon work of the most constructive, permanent and permanently valuable character.

A Revenue Producer

There are many who say that when taxes are so high and our debenture debt is so great, it would be unwise to undertake new obligations. In fact, they assert that Belleville cannot afford this improvement, or anything else as it may appear.

To this unfounded and unanimous opinion of the Committee that is far from Belleville not being able to afford this work, Belleville cannot afford to leave this work undone. It will most certainly pay for the effect of raising taxes just as surely as it will relieve many important municipal revenues.

Belleville must have the vision and sense of future values to realize the importance and progressive thoroughfare, immediately adjacent to the heart of the retail business section, where people will come in large and going and passing in great numbers. There is no doubt but that demand for building sites and for other business blocks that will be vastly more desirable and in every way more modern than those which front on Front and North Street. The experience of other cities with similar situations is ample confirmation for such an opinion.

It is only necessary to mention that along the new riverside drive there will be many sites for the erection or extension of sixty business blocks. There are more than seventy along the parallel distance on Front street. Placing upon these the moderate assessment valuation of $300.00 per frontage foot and the total of $300,000 for purposes of taxation which at a tax-rate of 40 mills would give an annual civic income of $12,000. That is but one prospective source of revenue, from the new development but would be less than one month's rental per cent. in excess of any possible increase because of the initial cost.

To those who habitually adopt the "Little Belleville" viewpoint and the weapons of the knocker, the forecasting predictions will afford nothing but opportunity for mirth and derision. There was [illegible] and succeed who [illegible] a group of progressive citizens made [illegible] and finally successful effort to have the railway track moved from the side to the centre of Pinnacle Street thereby transforming what was a menace and dangerous lane to a broad, clean thoroughfare. None of those who consistently opposed the Pinnacle Street improvement are now out in full support of the change. This is because they have realized the previous error and have witnessed the actual demonstration of the benefits occasioned by the removal of the handicaps from a particular area.

Other features of public work have been suggested for immediate attention as a means of unemployment relief, but it is the settled conviction of the Committee that there has been no other proposed improvement that is worthy of such consideration of the future potentiality and prospective benefit to the city that would be derived from the construction of this new thoroughfare. Street lights are to be provided for the future of a city's life. They are rarely changed but they do not immediately detract from business convenience by any such arrangement. Here is an opportunity to look to the future and meet the requirements of a growing city.

The growth of population in recent years has been largely in the professor's census and showing a total of but 1,000 in the past five years the establishment here of branches of [illegible] the world's greatest basic industries give promise of encouragement to all forward-looking citizens that a greater growth is to be hope that our past achievements, [illegible] but the interest that is to be won members of the losing club [illegible] and a place in the Chamber's Church Club accepted, and as their representative. A statement that has been [illegible] sets), nearly 30 members attended the service. Mr. Eagles preached on "How to Keep Sunday." In addition to the Church Committee, there were quite a lot of fresh faces there. "I am quite willing to play a member of the other side if I get the same terms," Mr. Eagles said afterwards.

Operator of Gaming House Denies Capone Directed

State Witness, Uncalled, Goes On Stand For Capone

"FIN" PROTECTION

(By Victor Hackler)

Federal Building, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 15—A witness the government failed to call in the Capone trial yesterday on Al Capone's behalf and who was to be here for a "fully prepared" gambling house but not under Capone's direction.

Peter P. Penovich, Jr., told the jury hearing Capone's tax evasion case that he had been under subpoena as a witness in the Federal Building every day for 16 months with the exception of the months of January and February.

He testified before the Grand Jury investigating the big gangsters themselves, he said, and was subpoenaed as a witness in the present trial.

He was the Penovich who managed a downtown gambling house, referred to by the government as the "Four Deuces."

The defense, apparently wanting only to show that the government failed to have Penovich testify, refused him over for cross-examination.

Fred Ries, former cashier of the gambling house testified yesterday that the profits in 1927 were $177,500 and in 1928 more than $24,000.

Another former employee, who said he did not know for sure who the boss was but that Capone talked to him about handling the cash testified that the profits in 1929 were $197,000, $172,460 and in 1930, $170,000.

Penovich denied that he quit his place because he was forced by a "syndicate which controlled the western suburbs."

Ralph Capone told him he could get "protection" with the authorities so that the place could run continuously. Asked what he meant by "authorities," Penovich replied, "oh police, state's attorney, bailiffs, sheriffs — gambling is against the law in the State, you know."

Cancer Research Institute is Advocated by Academy

Toronto, Oct. 15 (C.P.) — Recommendation of representatives of the Canadian Academy of Medicine that an institute for cancer research, diagnosis, a treatment and distribution of radium be set up with the provincial government was presented to Premier Henry today by committee in cancer sitting at the parliament buildings.

Yesterday's sitting which followed the committee's tour of Europe and this continent, was the first to be held in Toronto at which the medical profession and the public have been invited to make suggestions to the committee. Dr. George Wilson and Dr. George Young, all of Toronto, composed the committee which presented the suggestions of the Academy of Medicine.

Each of the three doctors held varying opinions as to the details of organizing the suggested institute though all agreed on the necessity of such a foundation which would work in co-operation with all existing units.

Dr. Klotz, pointing out there was no research foundation of a comprehensive character anywhere in Canada at the present time, suggested a department of medicine with the most competent men to do research work in connection with the university. The work of the University of Toronto, Dr. Klotz pointed out, in connection should be the forerunner of state medicine. Dr. Wilson said a cancer institute should be in connection with clinic attracting people from all over the province, preferably one with a full-time staff of trained men. He thought they were the public under direct government control though in connection with the university. He thought the director of the institute should be a physician in preference to either a radiologist or a surgeon.

Agreeing with his colleagues generally, Dr. Young maintained however that the diagnostic department of the institute should be emphasized [illegible] such a foundation [illegible] clans should make the treatment under the direction of the institute.

Older Residents Recall Happy Days on Steamer

Memories Cling About "Old Brockville" Trips

SAGE OF THE BAY

Remember—of course you remember the happy, merry excursions and floating concerts of years ago—when a steamer was the popular excursion boat, when the picnic grounds Early in the morning, supplied with well filled baskets, the family went to get the family to the wharf in time to catch the 8 o'clock boat. Twelve o'clock Point, Gleaura or some other picnic spot was the goal. The sail on the water was delightful and the popular boat chartered many times each year was the old the Steamer Brockville. It was a favorite with the excursionists for safe boat and had the statment [illegible] many years hence, she would be put up at auction and the highest bid of $40.00 received, the idea would have been ridiculed. Such, however, was the demand on the old boat on board by which many residents of Belleville spent many numerous pleasant outings. On Tuesday, September 29th was offered for sale at Hamilton and the only bid received was $40 stated, and being it is said was the popular old boat of years.

What changes against the boat owned by the Kingston Navigation company, amounting to $1,000 led to the order of the Admiralty directing the sale of the steamer and her sada for sale of the vessel by auction. The court had a reserve bid of $1,000 on the popular old boat of years.

RAN AWAY TO SEA AT AGE OF 13 YEARS

Capt. John Dowdy Lost Famous Tea Clipper Races

40 CENTS A DAY

Punctuality His One Great Asset, He Declares

London, (By The Canadian Press — How he ran away to sea at the age of 13, later commanded the Kaisow, a fine racing clipper sailing the new seaports from Foochow to London, and finished in command of a Union-Castle liner is the romantic story of the life of Captain John Dowdy, of Hunstanton, Norfolk, who claims to be the last of the skippers engaged in the tea clipper trade 70 years ago. He has just celebrated his 83rd birthday.

During his many years on the seas he has encountered many hardships and dangers, one of which stands out as a most heroic effort. He was first officer of the "Seagull," when she struck a reef in the Maldive Group of Islands in the Indian Ocean and was wrecked. The crew reached an island, but were soon threatened with whole ship's company and Dowdy volunteered to go in the dinghy to Galle (Ceylon), some 400 miles distant, in an open boat. He made it. It took him four days to complete the journey in a heavy sea but he returned with a steamer and rescued his shipmates.

Later when he was commanding the "Ada," he narrowly escaped being captured by pirates when his ship struck a reef. Sixteen boats of hostile savages set out from an island and were about to board his ship, when the vessel was refloated and steamed off.

At the time he started his seafaring life, a master mariner was paid $12.2 a month or 40c a day. Many of his greatest thrills were experienced in the ocean tea races. Among his brothers Joseph and Samuel, each commanded racing clippers, and bonuses were awarded for the first ship reaching London with the new season's tea. They made quite a reputation for themselves, and the then Prince of Wales invited them to dinner at the Fishmonger's Hall.

His one great asset is punctuality, he declares. He was when at Cape Town, three foreign diplomats, who had visited Government House, stayed talking on the quay until mid night and he was requested. Orders were given to without the gangway. The diplomats tried to [illegible] but were refused and were seen struggling in the water.

When queried by Sir Donald Currie as to the reason he meant by nearly drowning three important foreigners, replied: "Sir, you said the mails were not to be delayed on any account, and the ship does not wait for debates to end."

Purchase of Load Potatoes Urged Upon Towns, Cities

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 13.—(By The Canadian Press)—Ontario municipalities are being asked to purchase Ontario grown potatoes and to store them for relief purposes during the winter in a letter being sent out by the Ontario Department of Agriculture to mayors of all towns and cities in the province.

Such a step would be of considerable assistance to potato growers of the province, according to W. R. Somerset, Chairman of the Board.

"In urging the municipalities to consider the advantage and economy of buying potatoes at the present prices now for relief work this winter we are only taking a first step towards not only helping a local crop and trade generally to co-operate in using the surplus crop before importing this year," said Mr. Somerset.

Gives Home Brew To Boarders, Fined

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 15.—(By The Canadian Press)—Home brew must no longer be served to boarders by the manufacturer. It was laid down in a court case here yesterday.

"Home brew may now be given boarders, servants and all relatives living under the roof with the home brew owner under wider interpretation of the Ontario Temperance Act. The statement was made at the trial of Frank Lodo on a charge of breach of the Excise Act.

Lodo, who admitted he had given his brew to his assistant persons, was fined $50 or one month.

CROSS ISSUES PUZZLE VOTES

British Situation of New Alignments and Affiliatons

(By George Hamblelon, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 15 (CP cable)—The bewildered British elector is weekly ploughing through seas of election literature. He finds it very hard to understand. It is sweeping over him from parties, groups and numberless sections in an endless tide. The more he reads the more he's puzzled.

In this election campaign, with the voting only 13 days away—October 27—the voter sees Conservative and Liberal alike, joining the attack on Socialism. "The vital issue in this election," exclaims the Liberal Evening News, "is capitalism against Socialism." One of the pamphlets issued from Liberal headquarters is the text of a speech by Sir John Simon, now leading a band of Liberal protectionist supporters of the National government in which Sir John replied to a Socialist resolution moved in the House of Commons eight years ago by Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden.

MacDonald and Labor

At the same time the elector learns that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, repudiated by the Labor party, still declares himself a Labor man.

The Labor opposition headquarters not without a touch of irony is again issuing during the present campaign "Labor and the Nation," that famous summary of Labor aims to which Prime Minister MacDonald himself wrote the foreword. In the present edition of "Labor and the Nation," the foreword appears textually over Mr. MacDonald's signature. It contains this declaration:

"The Labor party, unlike other parties, is not concerned with patching rents in a rotten system but with transforming capitalism into socialism. The party is essentially one of action and it asks for power both in order to lay the foundations of a new social order and to relieve immediate distress."

All Conservative literature urges tariffs. There is a poster depicting protection as the dawn of better days. But a Liberal leaflet, similarly urging the return of the National Government, roundly declares in black, underlined type: "We are convinced that protective tariffs would be futile and stupid, doing far more harm than good."

And to complete the circle of confusion the Laborites are issuing the text of a free-trade address by Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, retiring Chancellor of the Exchequer, made in 1930.

Foxboro United Church Fowl Supper

Although the attendance was not as large as usual at the chicken fowl supper given by the congregation of the United Church, Foxboro, Tuesday night, those who were present had a most enjoyable time. The supper was sumptuous and abundant, the tables being nicely and attractively arranged. After the supper a concert was held in the church which was greatly enjoyed. Rev. H. R. Mutton, the pastor of the church presided. Rev. Mr. Doggett, Frankford; Rev. Mr. Sexsmith, Sidney circuit and Rev. Mr. Parkyn, who is visiting in Foxboro, gave short and interesting talks during the programme. A quartette from a tweed composed of Dr. and Mrs. Dale and Mr. and Mrs. Connor, delighted the audience with several numbers. Mrs. Dale and Mrs. Connor rendered a pleasing duet and Mrs. Connor also gave a solo in a delightful manner. The readings of Miss Kathleen Smith of Belleville, were greatly enjoyed and appreciated. Mrs. (Rev.) Patterson, who has been living in Western Canada for some time and who is now visiting her family in Foxboro, gave two delightful solos in a very pleasing manner.

The Anniversary services which were held on Sunday were well attended. Rev. Mr. Sexsmith of Sidney Circuit was the special preacher. Rev. Mr. Patterson, visitor in Foxboro, assisted in the services. The anniversary throughout was a very enjoyable one and the proceeds realized are said to be highly gratifying.

Always thinking of the future instead of the present is apt to become a habit with many people and it does not conduce to happiness. —Sir Arthur Thomson.

Ontario Jail Report

Toronto, Oct. 15—The Ontario Prohibition Union has issued the following anlyses of a report on the jail populations of Ontario:

"The Liquor Control Act was written and passed in the Spring of 1927. In the Spring of 1930, an amendment to the Probation Act introduced by Hon. Mr. Price was passed. It enacted as follows:

"When a person is brought before a Court charged with an offence against any Statute of Ontario, the Justice, Police Magistrate or Court concerned may make such enquiry as he deems proper as to the character and reputation of the person charged, and as to whether or not he has been previously convicted of any offence under the criminal code or against the Statutes of Ontario, and if it appears that, regard being had to the age, character and antecedents of such person, it is expedient that such person be released on probation of good conduct, such Justice, Police Magistrate or Court may release the person charged, under certain conditions." The amendment even provides for release, despite a previous conviction, if the Crown Attorney concurs.

"The effect of this amendment is in practice, though not in letter, to annuls certain clauses in the Liquor Control Act dealing with penalties. Why this surprising change in two years? With the passage of the Liquor Control Act the jails of Ontario became crowded. Prisoners were sleeping in the corridors and on the floors. The overflow was due largely to liquor. While numberless arguments were urged for the amendment, it was obvious that Mr. Price had his eye also on the overcrowded conditions in the jails. Many of the victims brought before the Courts after their bout had not a sicked bit. The penalty under the Liquor Control Act for a first offence was $10 or 20 days. There was no alternative. They went to jail.

"Under Mr. Price's probation amendment, in Toronto at least, and presumably elsewhere, they are dismissed with a warning. They go free or at least to the care of the Salvation Army.

"The report of the Prisons and Reformatories of Ontario for the year ending the 31st of October, 1930, has recently appeared. It is the first full year in which the effects of Mr. Price's amendment is registered. Under circumstances cited above, one would expect declining figures. What is the result?

"Our prison population increased from 25,500 in 1929 to 29,128 in 1930, an increase of 12.1 per cent. and 61.5 per cent. above that of 1926. The cost of our jails and our several reformatories continued to rise. It went from $409,896 in 1926 to $438,596 in 1930, an increase of over 6 per cent. and of 42.5 per cent. above 1926. Conviction with imprisonments for drunkenness increased from 5,722 in 1929 to 7,775 in 1930, an increase of 28.8 per cent. and 60.7 per cent. above 1926.

"Imprisonments for breaches of the Liquor Control Act which were 1,597 in 1929 rose to 2,717 in 1930. Imprisonments for violations of the O.T.A. in 1926, were 1,158. The increase is 290 per cent.

"The following comparison of commitments furnishes food for thought:

"Murder, 1926, 15; 1929, 27; 1930, 28.

"Manslaughter, 1926, 37; 1929, 51; 1930, 54.

"Attempted suicide, 1926, 4; 1929, 25; 1930, 29.

"Crime against the person, 1926, 681; 1929, 903; 1930, 1138.

"Crime against property, 1926, 3944; 1929, 5529; 1930, 7168.

"Common assaults felonious assaults and cutting, wounding, stabbing or shooting with intent totalled in 1926, 315; in 1929, 430 and in 1930, 522. The increase about 1926 is 65.7 per cent. Rape and assault with intent show an increase of 73.9 per cent. over 1926, and other acts of social immorality pretty well keep step."

LONDON SEASON BEGINS WELL

Colourful Theatrical Programme Is Offered

London, Oct. 13 —London's organized pleasures this summer seem to be consisting largely of changing the guard at Buckingham Palace, which, while theatre in its own be-bustled fashion, is not completely satisfying. But if nothing highly sensational has been going on in the theatre, 30 shows running testify that the machinery is in working order and the aisles are full of autumnal signs and portents.

Gilbert Miller is leading off the more important doings "Grand Hotel," for which London has been waiting since early ...ber. Charles B. Cochran, among his 8 dozen other activities, is producing a new play by Noel Coward, called "Cavalcade." It's musical like "Bitter-sweet" but not an operetta. Some of the music is Coward's. "Waltzes from Vienna," which Oscard Short is directing, will be going strong. "Fifty Million Frenchmen", with Hal Skelley and "Victoria and Her Russe," a German musical play with action in Japan, Russia and Hungary, also are on the list, Elizabeth of England," is still another German play, a great success in Berlin, which is to be shown in a month or so. Phyllis Neilson-Terry likely will play the title role. Lilac Night the revival of Noel Coward's early play, "The Young Idea."

Raoul Labitsch and Maurice Chevalier director and star of "The Smiling Lieutenant," the tuneful and gorgeous musical romance, featuring Claudette Colbert, Charlie Ruggles and Miriam Hopkins, commencing at the Belle, Tomorrow

Up in Edinburgh another young Englishman, Beverley Nichols, has been trying out heavier guns than is his wont with "Avalanche," it is a play against war which the authorities refused to let him ca "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Shakespeare has retired to his birthplace for the summer, where the Stratford-on-Avon season runs until in September. The Malvern festival, which honors Shaw, is doing without a new drama from his pen, and is featuring "The Switchback" by Dr. James Bridie.

Final," the London translation of "Five Star Final," undoubtedly has been the smith of the summer season. The play hit London with terrific impact and the discussion it created is still going on.

CROP CONDITIONS

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the head office of the Bank of Montreal from its branches. The branch managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

General

In all southern areas of the Prairie Provinces threshing is practically completed, but in the northern districts it has been delayed by rain and grain there in consequence will suffer depreciation in grade. In the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec harvesting of late grains has been well advanced under exceptionally favorable conditions, and the promise of heavy yields of roots and fruits is being realized. In the Maritime Provinces, where harvesting was affected by prolonged wet weather, crops as a whole are below average, while in British Columbia damage from continuous rain has considerably affected the yield of grain. Other crops suffer from good to fair. Details follow:

Prairie Provinces

Alberta—The estimated average yield of wheat is 16 bushels and that of oats 25 to 30 bushels. Alberta Northeastern area—Threshing is now fairly general with about 13% completed. Alberta Southeastern Area —50% of threshing is completed. The average yield of wheat is 7 bushels mostly number 1. Alberta Western Area—Threshing is almost completed in the southern section, where the estimated wheat yield is 10 bushels of good grade. In the northern section 80% of the crop is unthreshed and wheat is averaging 25 bushels per acre, largely grading Dough. Rust at brets are moring rapidly to factory, yields are estimated at 8 bushels per acre. Saskatchewan Northern Area—Threshing is being retarded, but 40 to 50% of the wheat crop is still unthreshed and this is not likely to grade better than number 3 and 4. No serious damage is reported from frost. Late feed crops have made good progress. Saskatchewan Southern Area—Harvesting operations are completed with the exception of a small quantity of late sown coarse grains. Recent rains have improved fodder conditions in the drought area, where some districts now have 25 to 50 per cent of their requirements. Manitoba — Threshing is practically completed, except for small areas in the northern district. It is estimated that 60 per cent. of the wheat will be delivered to elevators by December 1. Grades generally good. The earlier crop estimate of 50 per cent of normal, with an average wheat yield of 11 bushels holds good. Most of the coarse grains will be used for feed. There will be a shortage of feed and seed in the southern and western areas.

Province of Quebec

Potato digging is in progress and while rot is reported in certain sections it is anticipated the crop will be a fair average. Pastures continue in good condition. Apples are plentiful. The tobacco crop was above average and of good quality. Fall ploughing has commenced in most districts.

Province of Ontario

Late potatoes are a heavy crop of good quality. Mangels, turnips and sugar beets are above average. Grass pasture has shown marked improvement and is now in a fairly good condition. A good peach crop has been marketed and the harvesting of a very heavy grape crop of high quality is nearing completion. Late apples are more than bearing out previous high estimates of yield and quality.

Maritime Provinces

Potato digging in general, but excessive rainfall has caused a marked degree of rot and the yield generally is reported below average. Apple picking is proceeding, and while the crop is reported good, wind storms have reduced the quantity of marketable fruit. Pastures are in a satisfactory condition.

FALSE HEROES

No decent and law-abiding woman thinks a criminal is a person to be set upon a pedestal and awarded a halo. But there has been a decided tendency, in recent years particularly, to regard the criminal as somebody who is being hounded. If he escapes, there is to be heard an undercurrent of subdued applause from those misguided folk who like to see the police baffled in their work, in stead of helping them in every possible way. This of course is utterly wrong, and the press has it well within its power to aid in correcting such a perverted viewpoint. President Hoover is undoubtedly right when he says that a change in public sentiment which will shift the role of popular hero from the criminal to the policeman is one definite means of stamping out excessive crime. All right-thinking citizens will agree with him. If they also give practical effect to their accord, that would help much more towards the desired end.—Montreal Star.

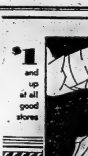
METROPOLITAN CENTRES GROW

Cities of Million People Number Nearly Twenty

New York, N.Y., October 15 — Nearly two score cities of the world now have a population of a million or more, it was revealed with the announcement that Mexico City had gone over the mark in its 1931 census by annexing its suburbs.

Another indication of the great trend of population to the cities and the tremendous rates of growth metropolitan centres have experienced was noted in the recent Moscow census which gave the capital of the Soviet republic 2,745,000 inhabitants, an increase of 35.5 per cent since 1926.



Even Leningrad, one time capital of the Czars, which was understood to be slowly dying as the Soviet state neglected it in favor of the development of Moscow, was revealed as having jumped into the two million class, with a gain of 38 per cent in five years.

Most of the great cities of the earth have been counting heads in the last year and the startling figures have resulted London, above 8,000,000, while New York reached 7,000,000, Chicago jumped into the three million class, Berlin has secured a short 4,000,000, two additional U.S. cities—Detroit and Los Angeles—have passed the million. Seven countries now have cities of more than a million. China leads the list with seven. United States is next with five cities directly credited with one million or more, and six others with a metropolitan population above a million.

England, Germany, Russia, Japan and India have two cities of more than a million, while each is claimed by Argentina, Egypt, Italy, Turkey, Canada, France, Brazil, Poland, Austria and Mexico. The cities are Bombay, Calcutta, Berlin, Hamburg, Buenos Aires, Cairo, London, Glasgow, Istanbul, Leningrad, Moscow, Montreal, Osaka, Tokyo, Paris, Rio, Sydney, Warsaw, Vienna and Mexico City.

Province of British Columbia

The digging of an average crop of potatoes has commenced. A good crop of onions has been pulled. Marketable apples have been picked and Jonathans are now meeting previous estimates of 80 per cent. of average are maintained and the quality of the fruit is very good. Very fair crops of pears, peaches, plums and prunes have been marketed. Pasturage is plentiful.

LIONS MENACE TO VILLAGERS

Missionaries and Doctors Often Called to Help Destroy Beasts

London, Oct. 14 (CP)—The shocking death of a missionary, Rev. Myron Taylor, while gallantly attempting to rid a district in the Zambesi Silver Valley from a marauding lion, drawn attention to the increased difficulty which the natives have had in recent years in protecting themselves from wild beasts, according to a correspondent of The Times, Rev. J. Cooke-Yarborough, formerly of the Universities Mission to Central Africa. Lions, he says have become more numerous since the War in those districts where cattle-raising has increased; and since it is still unnecessary, in order to put an end to the tribal wars which formerly devastated the country, to restrict the possession of firearms by the natives, their only resource, in unsettled districts, is to secure the help of some missionary or government official. But there are other ways of meeting the difficulty. Quite recently one of the nurses of the medical staff of the Universities Mission, while proceeding on her monthly round of visits to a chain of villages in Nyasaland, found one of them in great distress, and already killed two or three people. The nurse was appealed to for help, and produced a quantity of morphia from her medical stores, suggesting to the natives that they should try to administer it to the lion. An ox was killed, and, with the morphia inserted, was placed in the path of the lion. The dose did not kill the lion but made him so sleepy that the natives dispatched him with spears.

Canada grows this Tobacco for You

From a photograph of one of Canada's vast tobacco plantations in Southern Ontario, where Picobac is grown, ripened and cured.

Picobac's the name. It comes to you from southern Ontario—the land of plump, tasty peaches and melons—and unexcelled Burley tobacco. It's a gift from Canada's tobacco plantations to Canada's pipe smokers, and all who smoke it acknowledge its goodness. Picobac is grown only from the finest Burley seed. It's always mild, mellow and long-burning, with a rich flavour that's easier to experience than describe.

—and don't forget, you get more tobacco for your money.

$100 MILLIONS IS POOL COST

Asher Howard Says Farmers Pay Heavily For Organization

Houston, Tex., Oct. 15 —Asher Howard, Winnipeg grain man, declared the Canadian Wheat Pool had cost farmers of Western Canada no less than $100,000,000.

He predicted that the "Farm Board experiment will cost taxpayers of the United States no less than $300,000,000."

Asher addressed the annual convention of the National Grain and Feed Dealers' Association.

"The Wheat Pool operated in Canada eight years and is not a single year did the pool farmer receive as much for his wheat as the non-pool farmer," Howard declared.

"Not only that, but the pool farm is only receiving about two-thirds of the value of his wheat when he marketed it, and 140,000 farmers in Western Canada are still waiting for the other one-third of the 1928 crop and all the crops they have marketed since.

"The Canadian pool used printer's ink, the radio and the platform for eight years to encourage the system in which they have now returned.

"The Farm Board in this country undertook to eliminate speculation and they became the greatest speculative force that ever operated in grain and cotton. They undertook to stabilize the ocean waves. They prevented surpluses by increasing surpluses. They made country marketing disorderly."

At the final session tomorrow new officers will be elected. Memphis is making a vigorous fight for the convention in 1933.

MANITOBA TO FACE ELECTION

Six Weeks Ahead Looms Possibility of Vote

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 15 (CP)—Within six weeks the west is to see its first 1931 provincial election, according to authoritative reports in Manitoba government circles. The Progressive government of Manitoba will go to the country in the latter part of November, it is forecast, and Premier John Bracken is expected to announce the autumn ballot on Friday.

The announcement, it is stated, will come at the close of an all-day government caucus and writs will be issued promptly, paving the way for an election within thirty-five days. Premier Bracken has refused to outline the nature of the Friday caucus or of the statement he has promised for Friday.

The Bracken group, holding a bare majority in the 55-seat legislature, recently sought to arrange for a coalition with opposition groups. The suggestion was favored, after some consideration, by the Liberals, but has been rejected by Conservatives and Laborites, who, together hold twenty seats. The government's term does not expire until next year.

BAKERY DESTROYED

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 15—One of the most up-to-date baking establishments in the district was totally destroyed today when fire wiped out the new plant of the Dominion Bakery in Thorold owned by Mike Mazucy. The directshed and wagons were also consumed. The loss is placed at $45,000 partly covered by insurance. The flames completely enveloped the main portion of the building when firemen arrived at 3 o'clock.

Bruening Has One-Vote Margin of Safety

Berlin, Oct 15 (A.P.) — Chancellor Bruening had in prospect a one vote margin with which to save his internationally-minded government from defeat at the hands of the Nationalist opposition and to push his legislative program thru the Reichstag.

Political observers predicted he would be able to control 289 deputies or one more than a majority. The social Democrats, Centrist and Bavarian parties would give him 243 votes, it was believed and he would be able to pick up at least 46 more from three other parties commanding 47 votes.

The major opposition numbers 107 National Socialists, 40 Nationalists and 78 Communists, the latter remaining silent as to their course. Even if the Communists range their power against him it was held that he would be able to corral enough strength to win by a close margin.

SPANISH CABINET STEPS OUT IN RELIGIOUS PROTEST

Madrid, Oct. 15 (A.P.)—Niceto Alcala Zamora, for six months president of the Spanish republic, resigned yesterday afternoon and his whole cabinet resigned can also in protest against passage by the Chamber of Deputies of radical anti-Catholic legislation which the cabinet had disapproved.

Alejandro Lerroux, the Foreign Minister, broke the news to the Chamber. In the midst of his announcement he interrupted himself to call for three cheers for the Republic.

The cheers answer was a rousing demonstration with the Deputies and the spectators joining in.

"Viva la Republic" they cried, and some of them shouted "Viva Lerroux" hailing the speaker as "President of the Republic".

The Chamber president urged upon the deputies the importance of "preserving the republic as all can with the exercise of reason in this crisis."

There was wide speculation regarding the choice of a man to form a new government, but the general expectation was that Manuel Azana, retiring minister of war, would be chosen. Senor Lerroux also was mentioned as a possibility.

These developments came on the heels of approval by the national assembly of a constitutional provision separating the church and state. The new cabinet and the cabinet split over measures by which the government would control the activities of Catholic orders, Alcala Zamora and his supporters contending these regulations should not be too severe.

Madrid, Oct. 15 (AP) — The repudiation of Catholicism as the state religion of Spain was followed by the incorporation of an article in the new constitution which threatens Church orders with extinction.

The National Assembly after a stormy 15-hour session adopted by a vote of 259 to 178 a supplemental amendment to article 24 providing for the dissolution of those orders recognizing a higher authority than the state and those considered dangerous to the state. It also stipulates that property may be nationalized where it is deemed beneficial.

Article 24 providing for the immediate dissolution of all Church orders and the nationalization of property was originally rejected by a vote of 164 to 39. It was sponsored by the Radical Socialists, who were ultimately victorious on the amendment.

Canada To Lead Way To Prosperity

Montreal, Que., Oct. 15 (By Thos. Green, Canadian Press Staff correspondent)—With every word, every syllable, echoing unbounding confidence in Canada—"more powerful today than ever before"—Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett in an inspirational address here today, declared some nation must lead the way back to better economic condition. "Why should it not be Canada?" the Prime Minister exclaimed amid great applause and he sounded this note: "The world's troubles may not be over, but ours will be the sooner over the sooner we march fearlessly to meet them."

"Canada is more powerful today than ever before," the Prime Minister declared, "with greater accelerated resources and with an economic structure which has been tested by hard times and has triumphantly stood the test, with a people whose wisdom has increased with experience and whose resolution has been strengthened by trial. Why then cannot we go forward once again?"

"The world's troubles may not be over, he continued, but Canada's trouble would be the sooner over the sooner Canadians march fearlessly on to meet them."

"36 FATHOMS DEEP"

From lofty heights to murky depths—from cruising the skies in a giant dirigible to searching the ocean bottom as a deep sea diver—such has been the diverse experience of Jack Holt in his last two pictures.

When Jack Holt appeared as the commander of the airship in Columbia's giant spectacle of the air, "Dirigible," he little realized that his next call would take him fifty fathoms below the surface. His new vehicle is "Fifty Fathoms Deep," which comes to Capitol on Saturday.

Jack, however, is no new hand to watery depths for it was in "Submarine" that he established some of his greatest successes.

In addition to providing him with a variety in locale, "Fifty Fathoms Deep" allows Jack a latitude of mood. He is a roistering blade with a keen sense of humor, appearing to be hard as nails but really possessing a heart of gold; a man of unquestioned courage and an insatiable desire to capture the fancy of the fair sex.

Others appearing with Jack in this deep sea drama are Loretta Sayers, Richard Cromwell and Mary Doran.

IS TRIED FOR MANSLAUGHTER

London, Ont., Oct. 15 — Darcey A. Flanigan, Detroit bookkeeper, went on trial at the court house before Mr. Justice Darrow and a petit jury on a charge of manslaughter, arising from the highway killing of 35 year old Gordon Blackman, Lambeth district farmer.

Two Crown witnesses gave evidence that they smelled liquor on the breath of Flanigan and his companion, John A. McIntosh, also of Detroit, immediately following the accident. Another feature of the Crown's case, was evidence of a Windsor liquor vendor that Flanigan had purchased two bottles of Scotch whiskey on July 3, the day the fatality occurred.

Flanigan, a widower with two small children, was almost instantly killed in the crash. Flanigan has been held on $10,000 bail since July 13, with McIntosh he had been on his way to St. Thomas from London when the accident happened. He had come here to spend the 4th of July holiday.

Another United States citizen, Darrell Taylor, of Kent, Ohio, faces a manslaughter charge at the present Assize sittings.

JAPANESE TROOP TRAINS ARRIVE

Peiping, China, Oct. 15 (A.P.) — A telegram to Manchurian headquarters from Hsinmintun, about 85 miles south of Mukden on the Peiping-Mukden railroad, said that five Japanese troop trains carrying cavalry and infantry, arrived there Wednesday.

Military operations against Chinchow, temporary headquarters of the Mukden provincial government, were foreshadowed tonight in Japanese dispatches from Mukden reporting increased bandit activity in that region.

Manchurian headquarters here, however, denied that any military movement was in progress or contemplated.

RARE GEMS DO NOT ATTRACT

Bandits Don't Know Value of Black Diamonds

New York, Oct. 14 — In the heart of Times Square, with robberies to the right of him and holdups to the left, the world's king of black diamonds scoffs at the idea of police protection for his priceless stock in trade. He is Arthur S. Bandler, owner of probably the only large black diamond concession ever established. He spent seven years in the wilds of Brazil developing the unique business and in the last 20 years has handled about $30,000,000 in the rare gems.

"Bandits won't bother us," he declared. "No burglar would believe these stones worth anything. If they did they couldn't do anything with them. Black diamonds can be sold only to mining camps and engineers. There are only a handful of them in the world that would handle them. Robbers wouldn't stand a chance of disposing of their booty."

The rusty looking rocks are unimpressive enough on first acquaintance. Just ugly, darkish stuff, which Bandler, in shirt sleeves, crushes in special machinery that occupies space in a two-room office.

"You wouldn't pick it up in the street, would you?" he grinned. "Well, it's worth more per carat than a white diamond. A woman takes a great fancy to them, takes small units, worth about $100,000 all told, and visits mining camps all over the world. Sometimes she has to ride horseback into far-off regions, far from rail lines, to her customers. But she goes into the same and presently, on the biting end of a drill one of these stones will go down 6,000 feet into the earth and bring up ore for analysis."

The jet stuff comes from the interior of Brazil where 1400 natives hired at 20 cents a day each, do the mining and transporting. Bandler has built a colony around his concession with schools and a hospital and his doctors have reduced malaria almost to nil among them.

STRANGE RITES MARK BURIAL

Cannibalistic Unfriendly People in Kiapou Valley, Papua

Canberra, Australia, Oct. 13 (CP) —A most unfriendly people, living in scattered villages in the wildest part of the country, practise strange rites, particularly in regard to the disposal of their dead, and cannibalistic by nature." This description of a fierce people discovered in Kiapou Valley, in the rugged heart of Papua, is contained in the official report received by the Prime Minister's Department from the Administrator thereof of Papua, Sir Hubert Murray.

Containing an account of a notable expedition recently carried out by Patrol Officer Hides, the report provides additional evidence that the Commonwealth is rapidly building its British New Guinea a force which for daring and self-reliance is rivalling the Royal North West Mounted. Hides is the first white man to have explored the inhospitable valley of the Kiapou, which is a river running south from the Mandated Territory to the west of the Tvrri, an offiuence of the Lake Kamu. The Kiapou presumably joins the Tauri, and so flows into the Gulf of Papua.

"It was a plucky effort," says Sir Hubert, "calling for personal courage and skill in bushcraft." One native passage describes trouble with the hostile natives. The party had camped for the night on a hill overlooking a village. "The attack came at dusk," says Hides. "Standing near the flap of my tent with a carrier outside a few feet away from me, I heard a rattle of arrows on the ground and on the woodwork of the camp.

"I saw the carrier fall, with two arrows in his body. I hurried to the native's assistance, and after withdrawing the arrows helped him to cover. By that time the arrows had ceased. There was no further attack that night."

Though severely wounded the carrier continued the journey and displayed great fortitude.

The Territory of Papua, which was placed under the authority of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1906, comprises part of the New Guinea mainland. In 1929 the white population was 1,325 and the native population 275,000.

Sunquick and gloom,
The engine's windy wake,
Hillsweep unfrecked as a frosty peach,
Rock-torrid ploughland, river's lace,

Like many things pass by—
All in kindergarten painting on a white

RATIONING OF COTTON MILLS

57,000,000 Specially To To Be Provided With Quota

Manchester, England, Oct. 14 — The sugar and tin industries have pointed a moral for Britain's unhealthy cotton industry, in the opinion of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinner's Association.

In a plan for reorganizing the industry the federation proposes to ration out the actual production, as the demand occurs, among the 57,000,000 spindles according to definitely allotted quotas. These quotas would be fixed by a governing council.

Registered mill owners spinning more than their allotted amount would be required to pay fines of a shilling (24 cents) per 1,000 spindle hours in excess. Owners spinning less than quota would be paid seven pence (14 cents) per 1,000 spindle hours under quota.

The committee which proposed the plan found that "there is abundant evidence all over the world that producers are being compelled by economic considerations, if for no other reason, to adopt measures, whether by means of legislation or otherwise, for the control of production and competition."

They cited the coal industry, the sugar pact, and the tin agreement, among others.

GOLD FIELDS IN RHODESIA

Promising Conditions Are Found By Rand Engineer

Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, Oct. 14 (CP) — A promise of a considerable extension of the gold mining industry in Southern Rhodesia through the development of gold fields in the dolomite formation in the Lomagundi area, some 90 miles northwest of Salisbury, is revealed by W. L. Williams, a Rand mining engineer, who has been exploring the possibilities of the Lomagundi region for the past few months.

Mr. Williams' attention was drawn to the Lomagundi area by the close geological similarity between the dolomite formation there and that at Pilgrims' Rest and Sabi in the North-Eastern Transvaal.

"The extensive ancient workings in the Lomagundi area indicate that there has been considerable activity in the past, and if the series expend to thorough and intelligent exploitation as those of the Union have done, there is no reasonable prospect of further activity in the future," Mr. Williams told the Salisbury correspondent of the Cape Argus, Cape Town, South Africa.

"In Rhodesia everybody's attention has been directed to blanket reefs to the practical exclusion of the dolomite," he said. "Features similar to those of the dolomite reefs in the Transvaal have been disclosed in the past two years during work at the Level Mine, some 12 miles southwest of Sinoia. At this mine the ancient had worked down to about 30 feet level on presumably low values, but on continuing to the 147 feet level showed improving values throughout. At that depth boulders of dolomite and reefs were encountered, and nuggets up to three ounces in weight were found."

"Seeing that the Southern Rhodesian great dyke may have the same origin as the Bushveld complex, it is conceivable that the dykes and sills of the Lomagundi series may sooner or later prove of importance."

Mr. Williams is completing financial arrangements for mining in the new area, and has been assured of sufficient capital in both Johannesburg and London to start operations.

MEMORIAL TO MELBA

Melbourne, Australia (By The Canadian Press)—One of the first permanent memorials to Dame Nellie Melba to be provided in Victoria was established at Mooroolbark recently when residents of the township and district assembled at the railway station and planted the first section of a memorial avenue of silver birch trees. The avenue of trees has been planted in Taylor road, and at present it is about 500 feet long, forming the main approach to the centre of the Mooroolbark railway station. As more land is available later it is proposed to extend the avenue up to the Mooroolbark Hall.

DENIES SLAP AT BRITAIN IN GOLD POLICY

No Recriminations at London Gov't Intended, Says Cahan

DUMPING DUTY

Criticized Tariff May Be Somewhat Modified, Ottawa Hears

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—No recriminations against the British Government for abandoning the gold standard were contained in his recent statement, declared Hon. C. H. Cahan, Acting Minister of National Revenue, dealing with an editorial in the London Times in which exception had been taken to his reference to this action by the British Government as being arbitrary, Mr. Cahan, in a statement last night said he had used the word in a legal sense and without sinister meaning. (He used "arbitrary" as meaning "in the sole discretion of.")

In his former statement, Mr. Cahan had given the reasons that prompted the Canadian government to pass orders-in-council considered necessary to safeguard Canadian industry as a result of the depreciation in the value of sterling. While these orders-in-council applied dumping measures against British goods coming into this country, it was contended that one result had been to increase the British preference as against United States since the premium which the United States dollar at present holds over the Canadian dollar was taken into consideration in appraising the value of the United States goods coming into Canada.

Text of Statement

Replying to the Times' editorial, which was entitled "A Misleading Statement," Mr. Cahan's statement follows:—

"My statement contained no recriminations against and no adverse criticism of the action of the British government or parliament in suspending the right to purchase gold bullion from the Bank of England under the act of 1925, or the confirmation of that action by the recent Gold Standard Amendment Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom. In incidentally referring to the action as arbitrary, I used the word in its strict legal sense and without any sinister meaning, nor did I make the silly suggestion that such action was designed to increase unemployment in Canada.

"The results of that action were widespread, and Canada was thereby involved in conditions of financial stress and strain such as we have not experienced in recent years, and the Canadian government was compelled to adopt forthwith remedial measures to safeguard the stability of our financial and industrial institutions, and to maintain the revenues and credit of this Dominion.

"If the Times were disposed to discuss this matter in that spirit of co-operation and mutual understanding which is editorial so strongly commends, it might have reported my statement in the same interview to the effect that the premium now paid in Canadian currency for New York funds, and the appropriate action which has been taken by the Canadian government in respect thereto, have given British products in the Canadian markets a tariff preference over United States products which the British manufacturer has never hitherto enjoyed in this country.

Difficult to Understand

"It is difficult to understand at this distance why action to maintain and to extend the British preference should have produced a disagreeable impression in the minds of those resident in Great Britain who entertain hopes of closer economic relations with Canada."

In its review of Mr. Cahan's earlier statement, the Times editorial referred to the claim that it action had not been taken by the Canadian Government, thousands of Canadian workmen and workwomen would have been thrown out of employment.

"To call the abandonment of the gold standard an arbitrary action is to play with words and to imply that it was designed to deprive Canadian workmen of employment is the merest nonsense," declared the editorial.

"The British government, as the world knows, did not deliberately abandon the gold standard except in the sense that it took deliberately and without panic a step which circumstances forced it to take."

The editorial stated there was difference of opinion in Canada as to the action of the Canadian Government and concludes: "But the, important fact is that these questions should be discussed between composed states in a spirit of co-operation rather than recrimination and mutual understanding shown for each other's difficulties."

BONZO — By STUDDY

EVERY 9TH MAN GETS HIS MOOSE

Halifax, N. S.—(By The Canadian Press)—Every ninth hunter who goes into the woods with a rifle in the fall gets his moose. Incidence of success among the forest enthusiasts has been pretty well established by the Department of Lands and forests figures showing that in 1930, 1,342 moose were brought down, while 12,000 big game licenses were taken out. They show, also, that the number of Nova Scotians entering the woods has doubled in the last five years. During 1925 the department issued 5,513 resident big game licenses. In that year 931 moose were killed every sixth hunter bagging his quarry.

The importance of every safeguard against accidents has been brought to the attention of hunters once more by Otto Schierbecks, Chief Forester, who points to the fact that last year from the opening of the rabbit season, November 24, not less than eighteen accidents occurred, four of them resulting in death. One third of the accidents resulted in shooting of hunters mistaken by others for moose. The next greatest cause of injury was the picking up of gun by the muzzle. Several other persons were hurt by the use of old firearms or guns in poor repair.

"I have seen guns on which the lock was so worn that they would go off if you looked at them," the chief forester remarked.

"The coming season," he continued, "is going to be considerably more dangerous than any other hunting season we have ever had.

In the first place, because the number of hunters is rapidly increasing. Secondarily, because it is now permissable to shoot both doe and buck deer on the mainland of the province.

Mr. Schierbecks has issued a programme of safety precautions which includes the keeping of guns in good condition, vigilance in not carrying loaded firearms in car, wagon or canoe, refusal to use old cartridges, care in walking, and in not carrying a cocked gun. The good old rule in regard to never pointing a gun at another person or picking a firearm up by the muzzle, loaded or not, are also included as well as the exhortation to secure a good view of a moose before firing, and to place the bullet in the moose or deer where it will kill and not maim.

FLYER'S WIFE WEATHERMAN

Mrs. Edith Hawks Mexes Weather Her Study

New York, N. Y.—When Captain Frank Hawks who holds more speed records than you could count on the cylinders of an aeroplane engine, wants to know whether the weather is right for flying he doesn't ask the weather bureau—he asks his wife. Mrs. Edith Hawks has made weather her business, part of her routine household duties, and she keeps it ready to serve at a moment's notice.

The speed flyer and his wife live in a skyscraper penthouse on the East Side and while the lofty apartment is everything that a home should be it is also considerably like the laboratory of an aerologist.

The terrace outside, overlooking the East River and Long Island, is equipped with a rustic wooden fence, comfortable chairs and gay awning, but it also has a wind indicator, a windsock to show direction and aerials for the radio sets.

One of these radios is a short wave affair just for weather reports and while Mrs. Hawks busies herself about the kitchen, muttering things like "separate one egg, add a rounded spoonful of something or other and salt to taste" she is also keeping a careful ear on remarks about "deficiency visibility none, ceiling none. Cleveland clear wind south by southwest."

And so as she serves whatever it may be she made out of the separated egg and the rounded spoonful she can say, "I think you'd better not go over the mountains today, Frank. Pittsburgh seems to be indicated." And that day Hawks flies by way of Pittsburgh.

Lantern Slide Pictures Replace Opera Scenery

Cologne, Germany, Oct. 14 (CP)—Projected 'lantern-slide' pictures in place of conventional scenery was the outstanding feature of the new production of Verdi's "Aida," with which the Cologne opera season opened. The producer, Herr Hans Strohbach, is the first to experiment with this method on a large scale. In the temple scene massive pillars were seen supporting tons of masonry, and even in the stalls it was not realized that the scene was nothing more than a picture cleverly projected from a bridge some 40 feet above the stage. Many difficulties were experienced before perfection was attained. Three projectors were used, each so finely adjusted that the thin sections into which the pictures were divided were thrown on to tightened circular screen, or horizon, as it is termed, without any detectable overlapping. Shadows concealed the "slats" between the picture and the stage. The delicate task of transferring the scenes to the "slides" was carried out by Dr. Fritz, one of the Opera's artists. Absolute perfection was necessary, for a microscopic defect in a slide would have been a glaring error on the stage.

The words moose, moccasin and Ojibway have been adopted into English from the language of the Indians. Such cases are extremely rare.

"100 Per Cent" Cooperative Government is Advocated Letter Distributed Widely In Saskatchewan Province

7 FOR CABINET

Regina, Sask., Oct. 15 (C.P. Special) — Creation of an "100 per cent" co-operative government in Saskatchewan is urged in a letter, widely circulated throughout the province by Jacob Benson, Conservative member of the Legislative Assembly for the constituency for Last Mountain.

Mr. Benson suggests inclusion in the cabinet of three Conservatives, three Liberals, one Progressive and one Independent to carry on until the next general elections falls due in 1934.

Known as the Co-operative Government, the present administration in Saskatchewan consists of nine Conservatives and one Progressive, Hon. Reginal Stipe, Minister Without Portfolio. It was formed following the general election of 1929, when 28 Liberals were elected as against a combination of 33 Conservatives, Independents and Progressives. A session of the Legislature was called in which the confidence administration, then in power, was defeated on a vote of want of confidence. Hon. J. G. Gardiner handed in his resignation on September 9, 1930, Hon. Dr. J. T. M. Anderson then forming his co-operative government with the support of the Independents and the Progressives.

GREAT DEMAND FOR BOOKS

Boom in Book Sales Have Been Seen In England

New York, N.Y.—A boom in the sale of books is raging in England at present along similar lines as in Canada, according to Mrs. Elinor Mordaunt, British author, who wrote "Gin and Bitters" and several other books on travel and adventure. Arriving here for a visit she said:

"People are buying books in England and the publishers are eager to get them. There is a great demand in England for popular books of fiction, especially for the old classics like Dickens and Thackeray. Many of these volumes have dropped out and the people are now reading new books. Two of the most popular periodicals deal with women's subjects, including dress, of course."

Mrs. Mordaunt said she is going into the country to write another novel, the scenes of which will be laid chiefly in England. People in England were amazed with J. B. Priestley, another author, she continued, when the criticisms of America and did not excuse it because he said the things in fun. What is humor for one is serious for another, the people of another country the wrong way," she said.

CAT HAS OWN PHONE DEVICE

Scientists Find Such Device In Cat's Brain

New York N. Y. — Existence in a cat's brain of a life-like telephone central operating by minute natural electrical impulses has been found at Harvard Medical school, Dr. Hallowell Davis announced in Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science by H. Davis and L. Saul of the Department of Physiology and Psychiatry.

They confirmed and developed a discovery made abroad by a group of Princeton that by talking into a live cat's ear and connecting it up to a highly sensitive telephone circuit, human speech can be transmitted clearly over the nerves of hearing through the cat's brain, and out through a second telephone circuit to phone ear piece.

They found that in addition to the nerves of hearing operating electrically like a telephone circuit there are also certain areas in the brain close to the auditory nerves which transmit sound. Trained adjacent systems correspond roughly to the side areas of a telephone exchange. They might also be described loosely as city bands of sound sort, in the Harvard experiments these side areas did not transmit as well as the auditory nerve itself.

Practical Television Here, Says Scientist

New York, Oct 15—John L. Baird British scientist and television authority believes that "practical television is here," Baird yesterday said real progress was being made on both sides of the Atlantic" in television development, pointing out that he had been able to broadcast pictures of an eight piece orchestra directly enough to accomplish the movements of the players. The purpose of his visit, he explained, was to inaugurate transmission by his system through a New York station as a medium for what he hoped would be a string of television stations.

THE CROSS, ALL FOR CHRIST

35 Yeomans Street.

12th October, 1931.

The Editor
The Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir—

Someone has said that the six hardest words in the English language are 'I have been in the wrong' and we so called Christians might as well confess that we have rather many mistakes—some of them almost fatal in their consequences. Christianity as Christ taught it was meant to be a possession, we have made it a profession. It was meant to be a new birth, we have made it a new life. It was meant to be a witness. we have made it (in church membership) a high falutin, perfunctory, superficial, more or less a matter of form. The vast open spaces serve as a great, noble, grand and inspiring entire cathedral, where all Christian minded people can assemble to sing praise to God. Christianity is too good to be shut up in Churches. If the people will not come to churches Why don't we go to the people? Our great need is a following of Jesus Christ is sincerity, simplicity, earnestness and self-sacrifice.

Yours truly.

(Sgd.) ARNOLD BROWN.

Much of our Christianity as expressed by church life today is very elaborate, high falutin, perfunctory, superficial, more or less a matter of form. Error of Judgment Causes Four Deaths

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 15.—An error of judgment on the part of J. H. Behren, Omaha, Neb., driver of an automobile, was the cause of an accident in which four people, including himself, were killed on the highway near here last week, a coroner's jury here last night found.

His automobile skidded into a truck after cutting in on another car. David Law, Toronto, driver of the truck, was commended for his effort to avoid the crash. He drove his truck into the ditch. The three victims of the crash were all of Omaha, Neb., were David Slaven, Harold Slaven, Jr., and Mrs. Slaven.

Pound Sterling Is "Pegged" Too High

Quebec, Oct. 15.—The pound sterling had been "pegged" at too high a rate prevously, and he did not think Great Britain would ever return it to a par of $4.87 2-3. Lord Bertenshaw, British newspaper peer, stated in a brief interview yesterday before sailing for home on the Empress of Britain.

"I don't think that Great Britain will ever return the sterling to par of $4.86 2-3. She will come back to a gold standard at par, but the pound was pegged at too high a rate of exchange and was economically unsound," the publisher declared.

City Council Asks Board For Itemized Report

MAYOR'S WORDS

Feels He Has Not Been Fairly Dealt With

A delegation of the Belleville Citizens' Band including Ex-Mayor C. E. Hanna, Walter Aselstine, and H. Deshane, waited on the council on Wednesday night in regard to a grant sent some time ago over a grant to the band by the city council. At the conclusion of the discussion a recommendation "that the chairman of finance request the manager of the Citizens' Band, Charles E. Hanna, to appear before the Argyll Light Infantry Band Board a detailed statement of the amount of the grant $2,500.00, given to the band last year by the city council, and a statement be made before the council, the members will consider the grant asked for by the Citizens' Band. This was the final decision of the committee after discussing the matter for some time in open council.

Mr. Hanna's Statement

Mr. Hanna in addressing the council on the grant, stated that when the band left the Argyll Light Infantry there was a sum of $157.54 on hand and the speaker then gave a detailed statement of the expenditures and receipts since that time. Alderman Hanna believed that the figures given were correct but the council was at a loss to know where the remainder of the fund was given last year and in all fairness to the members of the band a detailed financial statement should be given.

Mayor Meyer said he knew there was a disagreement between the Argyll Light Infantry and the band but as a member of the committee appointed by the council to help in band matters he did not know about the withdrawing of the band from the regiment. "I don't think I have been treated fairly as Mayor of the city in this matter. I have never been consulted on any question nor called to a meeting and I don't like to be treated in that way. This council gave $2,000.00 to the band and the council like an honest, liberal statement. I do not wish too idea to be spread that I do not want a band. No one likes a band better than I and no one in this council is more willing to help the band than I but the business should have been done on a business basis. It was not so far away that I could not have been called in connection as a member of the committee but I was never consulted. Reg. Hinchey has some money owing him and whether he has received it or not I do not know," stated His Worship.

Reply of C. E. Hanna

Mr. Hanna answered the question of the Mayor in stating that the money owed Mr. Hinchey was owed by the Argyll Light Infantry and at the time of his leaving the band, he left of his own accord. Mr. Zealey was appointed and he was an able musician but he was too expensive. After the withdrawal of the band from the regiment, Mr. Hinchey was again engaged as leader at $10.00 a week and the band is going along in good condition but they need money to carry on.

"Again we come back to the $2,000.00 grant, the Mayor stating the public demanded to know where the money went. Walter Aselstine spoke on the matter explaining, that the band had cost the city but little money. For many years the band was under the direction of the Oddfellows and later the regiment. We thought the city received good advertisement from the band and regiment. We have won the Powers' Band made in the whole world. We thought the city council should come to the aid of the organization. This elected the discussion and the above recommendation was brought in.

Salary Cut Denied By Premier Henry

Toronto, Oct. 13.—(By The Canadian Press)—The report of a cut in civil servants' salaries is incorrect, said Hon. George S. Henry, Premier of Ontario, in a statement issued yesterday. "It has never been discussed in Cabinet Council, in fact, there are some members of the Cabinet who did not know anything about the report until they read it in the press yesterday.

"What was discussed in Council some three weeks ago was the advisability of suspending the automatic increases in salaries for the year. No finality was reached. I asked Mr. Price, the Provincial Treasurer, to investigate the possibilities of the salary situation. Suspension of civil servants' salaries would not affect all civil servants as many have reached their maximum salaries.

YEATS' LAST PLAY SLIGHT

Reviewers Says It Is Vague in Meaning and Static

Dublin, Ireland, Oct. 15.—(By The Canadian Press)—"The Cat and the Moon" by W. B. Yeats, author dramatist and Senator of the Irish Free State, is presented at the Abbey Theatre here, has not received a signal success by many means. "The audience received the play with cordiality, but it is unlikely to become a part of the living repertory of the Abbey Theatre," declared the Irish Times representative of The Times, London.

He said:

"It is too slight in texture, too vague in meaning, and too static, with little drive, to be considered as a contribution to the drama. It is not dramatic in the accepted sense of the word, as there is no action or conflict to induce suspense. 'The Cat and the Moon' is one of the Noh plays, modelled on the Japanese, and the atmosphere is remote from the Western theatre; probably many people in the Irish Free State than from any other country in Europe.

"The little piece was acted against a backcloth of silver grey by two typical Japanese peasants, in grey and black. The singer and the three instrumentists were dressed in Eastern robes of dead black, so that the acting area resembled a Japanese print into which two Yeats characters had intruded, and they were also a beautiful setting; but a little imaginary.

"With drum, flute, and zither the audience is prepared for the coming of the two malimed men who give the piece substance and humanity. A blind man carries a lame man on his back, in search of the holy well of Saint Colman. Above the stage they wander for a time, even finding the well because the sacred ash tree that marks the well. They cannot be cured, but when the voice of the saint offers alternatives they are sorely troubled. Would they be blind and cured? The blind man would be cured, because he desires sight to preserve his possessions from the Australian Bolsheviks of Neighbours. His sight is restored, and for very first act of his new life is to kill the lame man with a heavy stick, for having stolen his sheep-skin. The lame man himself, for having assured 'himself that the miracle was recorded by Saint in the Golden Book, under the auspices of Saint Colman, himself, he decides to remain lame, for he finds he can gradually reveals to him that the miracle would be wasted, and the lame man capers from the scene.

"The play needed little or no acting, but Messrs. Michael Dolan, as the blind man, and W. O'Gorman, as the lame man, made the most of it, and did their simple business with distinction. As the blind beggar O'Neill made a fine impression with the verse of Mr. Yeats which were set to music by Dr. J. F. Larcher, the director of the Abbey Theatre orchestra."

Village of Gogama Grows With Gold Rush

Gogama, Ont., Oct. 15— Since word of the gold strike in Swayne Township, six miles west of here, reached the outside world, the small lumbering village of Gogama has become a hive of activity.

Within more than 100 miles of the bush, prospecting and staking in the region of the newest gold fever, strike, and stampedes are now and going daily from the government base on Lake Minisinsakastag. Old-time prospectors in the district are pinning their hopes on the belief that the Swayne township find is only one of several important deve lopments that will shortly occur. It is pointed the find occurs on the north contact of a belt of favorable geological formation.

64 ACCLAMATIONS IN GREAT BRITAIN

64 Acclamations at British Nominations

Tory Leaders Acclaimed

Henderson Has To Fight Communist as Well as Conservative

46 CONSERVATIVES

Labor Has Only 6 Acclamations as Result of Nominations

London, Oct. 16—(CP)—A total of 64 candidates have been elected to the New House of Commons by acclamation. Polling on Oct 27 will be for only 551 seats. The total of acclamations is unusually large, owing to the efforts of the different government parties to avoid conflicts between their respective candidates.

When nominations closed today, including the elections for the Scottish universities, the unopposed elections were as follows:

Conservatives	46
National Liberals	11
Labor Party	7
Total	64

All the political party leaders except Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, have to fight for re-election Mr. Baldwin was returned by acclamation in his old seat, Bewdley, Worcester.

Leaders Fight

London, Oct. 16 (CP)—Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader and a member of the National Cabinet, was the only one of the four outstanding party leaders elected by acclamation when nominations were made today for the general elections, polling taking place Oct. 27.

Mr. Baldwin was elected without opposition for Bewdley, Worcester, the constituency he has represented since 1908. In his last general elections he was reelected with a majority of 6,837 over the combined vote for Liberal and Labor opponents.

Rt. Hon. Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister, faces official labor and communist candidates in Seaham, Durham. He is a Nationalist labor candidate, while the labor party, of which he was formerly parliamentary leader, has nominated William Cowan. In 1929 Mr. MacDonald was re-elected by an overwhelming majority.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, leader of the labor party, chief opposition faction, has a fight against Admiral Campbell, Conservative, and a communist candidate in Burnley, Lancashire. He was elected in Burnley in 1929 in a three cornered contest on a minor ity vote.

Police Told Where To Find Indian

Nelson Jaynes, a young Indian residing on the Mohawk Reserve, was arrested this Friday afternoon by Provincial Constable Hammer, near Chisholm's Mills on the charge of breaking, entering and theft. Jaynes is said to have stolen a suit of clothes and a slim of money from J. Cockins, a farmer in Tyendinaga Township, some three weeks ago. Jaynes frustrated every attempt to capture him. This Friday morning the Belleville city police received a telephone message stating that the Indian sought for was at the Lost Creek Hotel, which is near Chisholm's Mills. The information was passed on to the Provincial Police district office here and Constable Hammer went after him. Jaynes was brought to Belleville about two o'clock and placed in custody.

Council Unable at Present to Decide on Esplanade

AGED MAN IS HIT BY CAR

William Bennett Said To Have Been Walking In Centre of Road

Continuing to walk almost in the centre of the road after having been warned many times of the great risk assumed in so doing by provincial constable Frink, William Bennett, an aged man who lives a short distance west of Bellerville, as a result of being hit by a motor car on Thursday, is now in the General Hospital, Belleville.

The accident occurred Thursday evening about seven fifteen o'clock on the Foxboro highway, a short distance outside the city limits. The old man was walking north and as usual, it is said, was almost in the middle of the road. James B. Hough of Foxboro was driving north also the same direction as the old man was walking. When just over the small bridge Mr. Hough saw immediately outside the city Mr. Hough saw a car approaching and the lights of this car prevented, it is said, him seeing the old man until he was almost upon him. Mr. Hough turned to the left to avoid striking him but owing to the car about to pass he could not turn out sufficiently. The left side of the car struck and brushed the old man knocking him to the ground. Dr. Orrin Ponton summoned to the scene of the accident and the old man was removed to the General Hospital in the city ambulance. Numerous injuries to the body were discovered beyond a scalp wound and a bruise on the forehead. Provincial Constable Frink investigated the accident.

Mayor Walker's Name Mentioned in Probe

New York, Oct. 16—Fifteen brokerage and bank executives today left the office of Samuel Seabury, counsel for the Hofstadter committee, investigating legislative corruption revealed Thursday.

Whether any testimony from the committee has been missing since August 1, when it became known that Samuel Seabury's investigators wanted to question him on his own and the mayor's personal finances.

Officials of the Hofstadter committee also made it known that they intended to request that Walker had telephoned from Miami Beach to Atlantic City, where Sherwood is known to have had a brief residence, at a time when subpoenas servers were attempting to trace the missing secretary.

Seabury has openly charged that Walker has knowledge of where Sherwood out of the committee's reach.

Esplanade and Auxiliary Pipe Line Plans Hang In Balance For Time

Projects Depend Upon Amount of Government Aid

CALL ENGINEERS

Consulting Engineers May Be Called On For Reports

Unemployment relief plans are not quite dead in Belleville as yet owing to the difference of opinion as to the amount of aid to be received from the federal and provincial governments. This decision was made at the council meeting last evening. Under today's plan, instead of the council, was held at the city hall.

As a result no decision has been made on the esplanade project, on the sidewalk question and the laying of an auxiliary pipe line from the city pumping station to the lower bridge.

Two members of the Chamber of Commerce directors were received by the committee and passed on to the council. They delivered and referred to the committee. These were:

"Resolved that the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce themselves on record as strongly favoring a deferment election, if possible, of laying a second water main from the pump house to the power bridge until independent expert engineering opinion has been obtained as to the ultimate finished cost.

"The Directors will undoubtedly be behind this scheme if and when it has been shown that the cost will not exceed approximately $80,000.

"Resolved that the directors of the Chamber of Commerce place themselves on record as strongly favoring a deferment of election on the work to be put in hand for the relief of unemployment during the coming winter until independent expert engineering opinion has been obtained as to the ultimate finished cost of the proposed esplanade scheme for the creation of a new street lying south bank of the river

The directors will undoubtedly be behind this scheme if and when it has been shown that the cost will not exceed approximately $150,000.

A recommendation from the finance committee to the council was adopted to this effect:

"That the firm of Gore, Nasmith and Storrie be engaged to confer with our city engineer and submit plans to the council for the use of a duplicate water main from the pumping station to the city under the unemployment relief and that the engineers submit their plans and city engineer and submit same estimate of cost, also a report on the best possible moment.

Ald. Ponton moved a recommendation that the mayor be given authority to confer with representatives of the federal and provincial aid boards to secure the use of their engineering advice on these projects.

Archie B. Creelock, who was consulting engineer on the two bridges during the city's last term, was in the city on Thursday and Friday and went over with several of the plans of the esplanade as submitted to the city engineer. However the report did not come before the council last evening. The clerk is in the city in connection with putting a black top on the lower bridge and this work will be commenced the middle of next week at the latest.

Producers of Empire See Impetus to Empire Trade

Quota Scheme Endorsed In Report Issued at London

PRICE GUARANTEE

London, Oct. 16 (CP)—Great impetus to the movement for guaranteeing the empire producer a greater share of the British market against foreign competition is given in an authoritative report issued today. It comes from a joint committee of the central chamber of commerce and the Empire economic union. The report is an instrument of the Federation of British Industries.

The main conclusion is the British government should not wait for another Imperial conference nor complete negotiations with other Dominions before going ahead with some sort of a quota scheme guaranteeing a fixed price to the domestic producer as well as giving the British consumer a fixed share of the British market.

Protection

"Regarding products we can produce in Britain but not enough to meet our whole demands," the report says, "it must be left to the government to decide how far we should act on our own initiative without waiting for agreement with the Dominions, and how far assistance to our agriculture can be held up pending a Dominion conference.

"But in many instances the advantages given in return might justify a more vigorous measure in any section against the foreigner and a greater measure of protection to the Empire producer than would otherwise be contemplated.

"The question of wheat can only be adequately dealt with by a system combining a quota with a guaranteed price." The report suggests the minimum quantity of home grown wheat of milling quality to be purchased annually in the United Kingdom should be fixed annually by the President of the Board of Trade, acting in cooperation with a wheat advisory council.

Guaranteed Price

The guaranteed price to be paid by the millers for home grown wheat of milling quality would be similarly prescribed. The millers would receive a refund from the treasury based on the difference between the guaranteed price and the average price of the ruling world price, calculated on the basis of prices of each of the British wheat and foreign wheat commercially used over a period of five years.

It is contemplated that a reasonably high duty of foreign flour, with a rebate for the use of home grown, with free Empire entry up to a maximum totals to be agreed, occasionally would be necessary to prevent the scheme from being interfered with by the excessive importation of flour," the report declares.

"The machinery set up for the administration of the two systems for home grown wheat might also lend itself to the adoption of a quota system though without some guarantee of price for Empire wheat," the report concludes.

Bear Eat Bear in N. B. But Hunters Miss Out

Fredericton, Oct. 16.—The heart of the Tobique River country, famed for its big game, has contributed as a variation of the season's heavy crop of bear stories an account of cannibalism among bears of that district.

A party of New Jersey hunters had been making their headquarters at a cabin at Trousers Lake, about 20 miles from Oxbow, and on returning to the camp one evening recently found that a bear had broken in through the door and taken half of the provisions, including cans of condensed milk.

The animal was trapped about 100 feet from the cabin on the following night and shot. The trap was sprung with a vengeance and the carcass of the trapped bear, and on the following night a bear was partly eaten and the trap sprung by a second bear, which, however, made escape.

James G. Shepard Sent to Trial on Prospectus Charge

Evidence Taken in Hearing Ever Alleged False Prospectus

BAIL OF $10,000

James O. Shepard was committed for trial by Magistrate Mikel on Friday in police court, when he appeared on a charge of issuing a false prospectus in an inducement to secure shareholders in the Wellington Marbellite Brick Company. He was defended by William Proctor of Picton, while Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan conducted the prosecution. Mr. Shepard did not elect, when the charge was read to him nor did he say anything before Magistrate Mikel committed for trial. The accused was taken before the County Judge in fix a bail, but as the hearing December 4th Bail was applied for and granted in the sum of $10,000.

Edwin T. Cherry, job printer in this city, was the first witness untied by the prosecution, the witness stating that the prospectus as exhibited in court was printed at the Cherry Press in March, 1930, the instructions being given by Mr. Sherard and the material also given by him. Asked as to when the printed forms were delivered to the witness was unable to state.

Hugh Crowe, insurance agent of Trenton, who is listed on the prospectus as the secretary treasurer, stated he had knowledge of the company being incorporated as the Wellington Marbellite Brick Company but no knowledge of the prospectus exhibited in court being in existence. He did however, remember signing the prospectus and an early date but not the same 23 as one exhibited. A photograph on the prospectus was identified as being nearly the same as the plant now under the process acquired for the ledger of the company was also produced by Mr. Sherard and was shown to own $2,000 worth of stock in the new company.

"Where did the name 'Marbellite' originate?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"I don't know," stated the witness.

"When was the first Marbellite brick made by the new company?"

"Last year."

"How many were made?"

"About 100,000 brick."

The Crown Attorney read certain extracts from the prospectus and asked the witness if the statements were correct. The witness was that Wellington Marbellite Brick Company has had its shut down orders for as high as 300,000."

"I never saw any orders for that amount," the said Mr. Crowe.

Another statement "Millions of Marbellite brick have been sold" was in the prospectus and the witness stated that inquiries had been made to apply to the old company of James O. Shepard and Co., as that firm had supplied considerable of the bricks for buildings in Trenton. Mr. Donnan then read a number of testimonials from contracting firms, that were issued in the first prospectus issued by the James O. Shepard Company and afterwards incorporated with a prospectus of the Wellington Marbellite Brick Company to which the witness testified were correct. In cross examination by Mr. Proctor the witness admitted that his association with the company was only casual and that anything stated in the witness box was not personal knowledge but had been told to him.

George D. Bell, salesman, stated he had sold stock in the company for the past three years and admitted seeing a prospectus such as was exhibited in court. He also admitted that the prospectus had been used to sell stock through the country. William McCreary, farmer, resident in Tyendinaga Township, stated that he had bought 50 shares at $10.00 each after he had read over to him the prospectus exhibited in court. Mrs. Margaret Moult, also of Tyendinaga had bought 20 shares at the same price. This concluded the evidence and Mr. Shepard was committed for trial.

Toronto, Oct., Oct. 16.—Wilbur M. Bunker was incapable of appreciating the act. when he allegedly drowned his two-and-half year old daughter, in the bath tub at his home here April 23, according to evidence given by Robert Orrenor, defence alienist, at the trial of Bunker on a charge of murder yesterday.

Comrades of Bunker during the Great War testified to his military qualities and kindness. Russell F. Hopkins, Pugard and Stanley Harphan said he had resented slay insinuations of horses.

Describing Bunker's actions in the bathroom on the morning of the child's death, Armour said: "He took some carbolic acid and lysol to dull the pain and make it easier. Bunker was playing around the floor of the bathroom. He was not at all conscious of the world. I had better take him with me. It would spare him a disgrace." Bunker said he: "If the boy had not been in the room, he would have killed himself. He occurred to him," said the alienist.

DR. G. FIELD FACES COURT

Cobourg Man Accused of Possession of Weapon

Cobourg, Oct. 16.—Dr. George Field appeared in police court before Magistrate Col. Floyd Thursday afternoon charged with unlawfully having an offensive weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. The charge arose out of an alleged assault between Dr. Field and Douglas MacDonald of Cobourg on Margaret Street, both men said both men had gone in different parties to duck-hunt.

Mrs. Field made many appeals to the police officers, reporters, court officials and the public previous to the hearing, on behalf of her husband, declaring he was innocent.

"For once," she said to E. Oullet, court clerk, "he is innocent," and asked looking at the crowd, "are all these men here?" Mr. Oullet then told they were present to hear the case, she made an appeal to them all to leave the room. "Will all of those men who are friends of Dr. Field leave the room," she asked. No one moved. Dr. Field was then brought in, she embraced him and sat by his side for the rest of the hearing.

"I have tried to send them away," she said.

"Oh, they like to hear," the accused answered.

Dr. Field stated that he had two fractured ribs.

Colonel Boggs couldn't see his way to granting bail but suggested the jail governor attend to Dr. Field. It was suggested that Dr. Field be remanded to Cobourg hospital for treatment.

Col. Boggs: "The jail surgeon will not be in a position to attend to the hospital. I cannot consent to bail."

The matter of transferring the accused to the hospital was a matter to be dealt with by the sheriff.

Mrs. Field: "Dr. Field is ill. He is innocent. You can't scamp a man like that."

Provincial Constable Carey called in order. Mrs. Field made efforts to hurry the sheriff in getting arrangements made for her husband's transfer to hospital.

The sheriff was to be notified. Constable Carey again ordered her to be quiet.

"I won't! He is my husband," she cried.

Magistrate Floyd: "I'll have you locked up, too, if you don't.

Mrs. Field: "I wish I were."

New Element is Found 85th Alone Undiscovered

Ithica, N. Y., Oct. 16.—The discovery of the eighty-fifth element in atomic chain—by a professor at Cornell University—was announced.

Dr. Jacob Papish, professor of spectroscopy, has discovered the element in samarskite, a lustrous, velvet - black mineral. It is an insoluble solid, highly inflammable and does not be isolated from other known elements.

The atomic chain, composed of 92 elements, needs but one more element—No. 85—to be completed. Professor Papish's discovery being credited with the radio-active elements. Thus far the new discovery has displayed no radio-activity, accounting for Professor Papish's difficulty in locating it.

The almost infinitesimal amount of the element—as yet without a name—contained by Professor Papish is regarded as priceless.

Cancellation Opposed

Insurance Companies Urged To Refrain

Toronto, Oct. 16.—Fire insurance companies were urged to refrain from cancelling policies on tobacco crops in Norfolk and Elgin Counties, in a statement issued yesterday by Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario. Several companies cancelled policies following fires in which buildings and crops were completely wiped out last week.

Tobacco growers of those counties faced heavy losses due to prevailing low prices for their product, the Attorney-General said. Some companies can see their way clear to maintain the present insurance on a favorable basis, they would be co-operating in a very great extent in alleviating the unfortunate situation," said Col. Price.

INVENTOR IS NEAR DEATH

Can Hold Out Only Few Hours, Says Doctor

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 16—The peaceful oblivion of coma folded about the inspired mind of Thomas Edison today, but the sturdy, 84-year old heart pumped steadily on.

Death, his physician said, was near; perhaps a matter of hours. It has been ten days since the inventor has taken any liquid, and six days since he took a meagre meal of stewed pears. Despite the ruggedness of his constitution, he can carry on but a little longer against the complications of diseases, Dr. Hubert S. Howe declared.

The stupor in which Edison has been for several days turned late yesterday to coma. That, Dr. Howe stated, marks the approaching end.

"Mr. Edison," said Dr. Howe, "continues to fail. His sleep is gradually becoming more profound."

The final bulletin last night, issued by the inventor's son, Charles Edison, told "only a slight change in the heart action," and said the inventor was "sleeping quietly."

Believe Social Functions Downfall

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 16—Social functions played an important part in the depredations of Fred Beckham, Hamilton, local letter carrier, arrested here yesterday on a theft charge, police believe, when bundle of miscellaneous goods was removed last night from his house. It included eight automobile rugs, several pairs of silk stockings, and several furs. Complaint was laid against Beckman by William Ashfield following a church social at Ancaster. Ashfield said his car rug was stolen. Police say they found a notebook in possession of Beckman, bearing dates of county social functions.

DISAPPEARANCE BAFFLING

Toronto, Oct. 15—Mysterious disappearance of Robert Beattie, 36, Toronto, driver for a local bread company, has so far baffled Scarboro police. An all day search yesterday failed to reveal any trace of him. His abandoned wagon was found early yesterday on a street corner in the township of Scarboro. The theory of robbery is discounted as Beattie had little money with him.

CHEAPEST TO GO TO JAIL

Goderich, Oct. 16—Dan Swant, Colborne township farmer, has found the easiest way to make money is to go to jail. He was recently convicted of cruelty to a horse and fined $50 and costs, totalling $72.50. In default of a month's imprisonment. Yesterday he told friends he could not raise the money in a month on his farm and went to jail instead of paying the fine. He said he could not make $72.50 so easily or so quickly in any other way.

Curtail Production of Lawyers in State, Plan

Examiner Favors Tests Of Fitness For Profession

"DUMPING"

Boston, Mass., Oct. 16.—Because of over-production of lawyers in the State of Massachusetts, the poorer grades should be "dumped overboard," is the opinion of Hollis R. Bailey, who retired recently from the State Board of Bar Examiners after twenty-seven years as its chairman.

He advocated a check to the lawyer output by requiring candidates to procure permits and furnish evidence of their fitness before they even be allowed to begin the study of law.

The Massachusetts standard for admitting candidates to the study of law is very low, amounting to little better than a grammar school education, Mr. Bailey said, and efforts to have the Legislature raise the standard have failed repeatedly.

And as rejections of candidates trying to pass the State bar examinations have recently ranged to as high as 75 per cent., those applying, he declared it would be much fairer and satisfactory all round to take steps which would discourage the unfit before they are allowed students had spent much money and three or four years' time in preparing for a calling for which they patiently were unfitted.

The former chairman of the bar examiners declared that the most hopeful and practical way of limiting the candidates for the bar in this country, is the method which has been in vogue in Pennsylvania for the past year or so. This, he said, is to have the candidates submit upon application to study law. The application must show that the candidate has had the required general education, which in Pennsylvania is a college degree or its equivalent in study, and he must file a certificate of his moral fitness and answer a questionnaire.

During the candidate's three years' study in a regular law school, he must be under the supervision of a member of the bar.

The point of all this, Mr. Bailey said, is that the candidates can be handled more strictly at the outset, before they begin study, and before they have spent time and money preparing themselves for it, as it is apparent that they are not cut out for the bar.

He advocated something like the Pennsylvania system for Massachusetts, but pointed out that in anything of that nature, the Bay State's old-timers form as the great stumbling block.

There should also be a limit on the number of times any one man can take the examinations, he added. One man has taken them 25 times, and has not passed them yet. Another man passed them on his 13th attempt.

FREIGHTER IS IN DISTRESS

Japanese Ship is Sinking 500 Miles West of Aleutian Is.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 15—A wireless message intercepted by the MacKay radio station here today said the Japanese freighter Yonan Maru, in distress, about 500 miles west of Dutch Harbor, Aleutian Islands, was in a sinking condition.

"The message, sent by the steamer President Jefferson, said water was pouring into the Japanese freighter's hold in great quantities but did not explain how the stricken vessel had been damaged. The President Jefferson was about 30 miles from the Yonan Maru and proceeding to the scene with all possible speed.

The Yonan Maru left Portland, Ore., for Japan on September 30. She is a vessel of 8,000 tons and measures 483 feet in length. She carries a crew of about 40.

The position given by the Yonan Maru would place it approximately 500 miles west of Dutch Harbor in the Aleutian Islands. The radio station was unable to learn what trouble had befallen the freighter, but later a message was intercepted from an unidentified vessel which stated it was rushing to the Yonan Maru's aid.

DROWNS IN TANK

Toronto, Oct. 16—Manuel L. Green, 688 Crawford Street, 16 year old Jewish boy student at Harbord Collegiate, was drowned yesterday afternoon at his first swim in the new tank of the remodelled school. He had gone to the swim with the lazy air at the bottom of the deep end of the tank until found by members of the rugby team of the school, who came in for a final plunge after football practice.

As a mark of sorrow felt thru' the whole school, Principal D. A. Clausey cancelled all evening classes in the school for this night.

W. Murray Graham, 353 Lauder Avenue, swim master who was in charge of the tank while Green was taking his last swim, collapsed at the school this evening and had to be moved home under medical attention.

DENIES GOVERNORSHIP RUMOR

Galt, Oct. 16—D. O. McCulloch, prominent manufacturer and resident of this city, who it was rumored was to be appointed Lieutenant Governor of Ontario to succeed Hon. W. D. Ross, stated he had not been offered the appointment. He declined to comment further on the subject.

The term of Lieutenant Governor Ross expires next January.

Labor unions of the Irish Free State have petitioned the Government to establish National Housing Council to arrange, among other things, plans for subsidizing slums.

Embarrassing Moments

Recovers His Speech After Year's Muteness

Milk Peddler Suddenly Talks After War Injury

Fredericton, N. B., Oct. 16.—Albert William King was a route milk peddler of Fredericton Junction until last year. Then the other day his wife brought him a cup of tea while he was working, and received the shock of her life. King, although dumb, could hear.

"Here's your tea," his wife said. He reached for it.

"Let it hot?" he asked.

Tea cup and saucer clattered to the ground and broke as Mrs. King screamed: "Billy, you spoke! You spoke! You can talk again, thank God!"

"Bejoh," cried King. "I-I did! I can!"

The silence that had lasted for a year was broken.

But the miracle lay more in the natural return of the voice. King lost that sense through wounds received in France. He was gassed on the second day of war as a private in the 5th Royal Sussex at the age of seventeen. He won the Military Medal for valor in the field, and was wounded and gassed. Thus, in effect, reads the military record of Albert William King.

A gas bomb—stretcher bearers—a field hospital in France—then to England and a larger hospital, following. Vague from the gas bomb had seeped into his lungs and throat, choking him and taking his voice.

The doctors in the English hospital were interested in his case. They experimented and operated, and slowly King's vocal cords were restored, marred a school-day sweetheart whose family lived near his in Hemmingford Bassett, and although King still suffered from his wounds, they came to Canada to start life anew on a soldiers' settlement farm here.

A year ago his voice left him completely,—he couldn't even whistle,—and he remained a mute as he returned,—without warning.

Despite the affliction, he continued to work the farm, and his milk business flourished. He taught his horses to respond to a mere touch of the reins, and he shrilled a pad and pencil wherever he went. King had been trying to speak a day or so before the tea episode.

"And now, would you believe it," he said, "my youngest, the King's have four children — "couldn't remember her daddy when he spoke, and when I said 'hello' to her she was that surprised!"

A fortnight ago, when King was given a connection on his car he received a telephone call. He believes that had something to do with his getting his speech back.

LLOYD GEORGE RAPS STATES

High Tariffs He Says Have Not Caused Prosperity

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George points to the United States as a country in which high tariffs have not spelled prosperity.

The veteran Liberal leader, advising his followers to vote for Free Trade Conservative candidates in reference to "loud tasting" Conservatives if there was no alternative, said in a radio address last night.

"To insure that their natural and accumulated wealth should be employed by their own citizens alone they [United States] have set up the highest tariff wall in the world.

"Yet, there is more actual privation in one United States city than in the whole of Great Britain.

"The spectre of bankruptcy is stalking through that rich country whose streets two years ago seemed paved with gold. This year there will be a deficit of £300,000,000 in the Federal budget."

Mr. Lloyd George declared tariff barriers constituted one of the main causes of the slump in world trade. Despite tariffs Germany, for instance, was experiencing the worst trade depression in that ever known.

In the choice between a "food taxing Tory" and a Free Trade Labor man Mr. Lloyd George said he would vote for the latter, because he would vote to avert the calamity of protection.

Colloidal Treatment Success in Cancer

Toronto, Oct. 16.—Progress made in treatment of cancer by colloidal solution was described yesterday to the Ontario Cancer Commission by Dr. A. C. Hendrick of Toronto. The treatment was devised by Dr. Hendrick and Professor K. F. Burton of the Department of Physics and the University of Toronto. At the request of Dr. Cooper of the British Cancer Research Fund, supplies of the colloidal solution are being forwarded regularly to the Dean of the Medical Department of the Middlesex Hospital, London, England, he told the commission.

Dew ponds, such as Neolithic man constructed, to conserve water from the air, are considered feasible in certain dry areas in Canada.

1200 Families Are Destitute

Quebec, Oct. 16—Unless prompt assistance is forthcoming, 1,200 families face starvation next winter in the Mutton Bay district of Labrador, according to a statement reportedly presented the Quebec government by Rev. J. D. Lessenger, protestant school inspector and Anglican missionary to the stricken district. This condition was brought about by the failure of the cod fishing industry this year.

The report was considered by a cabinet meeting yesterday at the conclusion of which Premier L. A. Taschereau declared:

"My government will certainly do something as soon as possible to alleviate the deplorable conditions of Labrador. I am waiting until we receive the signed agreement from the Federal government relative to our unemployment relief program, which should be any time now, as we would like to be able to go fifty-fifty with us in providing this relief."

OUT OF THE DEPTHS

Comparisons with the past are not always odious. In this age of clouds and depression, especially misery likes company and looks for analogies in history. The Mail and Empire finds that at other times in history Britain has faced great odds and emerged victorious. The Mail says:

"Though Great Britain is now facing a severe economic crisis, due in large measure to world conditions, we have already called attention to the fact that in times past she has faced more unequal odds and always emerged triumphant. On October 1st the London Times printed a letter from a correspondent recording a statement issued by Sir William Petty, English statistician in 1691. He recorded an alleged scarcity of gold, complaints of taxes—many and great—and of the race between naval powers. He recited the slaughter and destruction of men in the late wars and pointed out that 'too many matters are regulated by laws.' Lastly, 'the non-conformists increase.'

"But, over and against these dire developments, he reminded his readers that the buildings of London 'grow great and glorious.' We have likewise grown in Toronto. He commented upon the number of coaches and their splendid appointments exceeding a hundred. For coaches we may write motor cars in this day and city. The public theatres were magnificent and crowded—as are picture houses today. The price of food was down. So it is with us now.

"Finally, Sir William wrote: 'These general observations, and that men eat and drink and live as they used to do, have encouraged me to try if I could also comfort others, being satisfied myself that the interests and affairs of England are in no deplorable condition.'

"In other words, the mental attitude of the people had a great deal to do with business conditions in 1691 as it has in 1931. So we may still learn a lesson from the cheerful gospel preached by the English knight 240 years ago?"

DRAMA AS MOULDER

Whatever be the reason, more British companies are visiting Canada this year than ever before, bringing dramas of surpassing merit in equally satisfactory productions. Sir Barry Jackson, director of the Birmingham Repertory Theatre, is in Canada at the invitation of the National Council of Education and has brought with him a number of high-class productions. He sees the need of a national theatre in Britain and doubtless sees the advantage of some such theatre in the Dominions.

The stage has always, even with all its faults, been the voice of the age and also the voice of progress. No agency can do more for progress than a national theatre backed up by the people and taken seriously. The plays the British companies are bringing to Canada are of this high class and cannot fail to leave an indelible mark upon the country.

England has never fortunately bowed to the movies as North America has done. It can also be said that the movie has never been, and probably never will be, the agency of betterment that the stage has been. Not can it be the same great agency of culture.

These are healthy signs of a revival in the theatre. Though in many places there are no houses for legitimate drama yet the drama is able to produce houses and if there is the demand for the drama the houses will appear in due course.

The day which is to come when motorists will drive on "air" instead of gas, is not the today when the motorist travels on air in his tires and on gasoline in his engine, clarifying the motorcar throughout from tire to fuel tank, will be a happy event.

The delights of fishing include the surprise for no one knows what is in the finny depths beneath the water's surface. The young man who captured a twenty-six and a half pound lunge the other day was doubtless more than pleased with himself for he could hardly have expected such a strike. There is, however, a real certainty about fishing for most people who might almost be said to know before they start that they won't land a single scaly thing.

Additional eight days' drill for the A. L. I. is the welcome information which has reached the officer commanding the Regt., Lt.-Col. Keeler, M.C., The O.C. and officers and men of this unit look for a full complement of 225 men to carry out the training for the next two months in the armouries here.

Transients are getting good warm soup and gifts to the police larder are pouring in. This is proof of the interest of Belleville people in the less fortunate.

OTOBER SONG

By Aline Michaelis

With drifting leaves
From each tossed bough,
With rain that shines
But palely now
October comes
In cloths of gold,
As fair as spring
Her charms unfold.

A coronet
Of scarlet leaves
About her brow
She gaily weaves,
And gladly, proudly
She puts on
A purple mist
At dusk and dawn.
New loveliness
The fields unfold.
October comes
In cloth of gold!

GAR WOOD has been called all kinds of names because he lost the speed boat race to the British challenger Kaye Don, by starting too quick, but there is this to be said in his favor, he never blamed it on the reporter, nor claimed that he was wrongfully reported when in the heat of the moment, in all the excitement of being disqualified and seeing his rival's boat shoot to the bottom of the Detroit river he said some things which sounded bad and were quickly turned into copy by the reporters to whom they were said. Under the flood of popular indignation which flowed over Gar Wood for what he said that his remarks did not reflect his real meaning, but that he was reported exactly by the newspaper staff. Very often men in the public eye who say something that does not look well in print claim to have been misreported. Trained newspaper men bend all their energies to get things exactly right and instances of mistakes in reporting are very rare. Rather it is the platform man who says things in the heat of the moment which on cool reflection he wishes he hadn't and convinces himself that he never said them. Newspapermen ignore many things said by public men rather than have the statements rise up in cold print to confound and embarrass the said public man, but they seldom get credit for such generosity. Let them make a little mistake, however, real or fancied, and there is an uproar and threat of a libel suit and what not, from some quarters, not all thank goodness. There are public men big enough to acknowledge error on their own part and to overlook mistakes on the part of others.

Other Papers' Opinions

WHERE TOURIST DOLLARS GO

A statement that "urban centres benefit far more from highways than the rural districts" was dealt with in time columns the other day in connection with the apportionment of highway gas and the sources of provincial revenue. Another angle is suggested on perusal of a tabulation prepared by the London Chamber of Commerce and said to be based upon statistics gathered by the provincial government. The figures cover Ontario for a year and provide an estimate as to the volume of farm products sold to the tourists. This newspaper has never viewed such statistics as very reliable, being of opinion that they are largely guesswork, but for whatever they are worth, here they are:

"Bread, loaves, 2,783,073; milk gallons, 1,376,033; vegetables, bags, 186,668; eggs, gross, 76,264; butter, tons, 618; hogs, 1,201,000; lambs, 1,758; calves, 4,102; cattle, 4,924 and lambs, 19,233. The aggregate of these sales in dollars and cents is not given, but is estimated, but it is pointed out that it is certain to run into millions of dollars."

The obvious comment is that dairy herds are not kept in urban centres, nor are hogs, cattle, calves and sheep raised. It is the rural districts which furnish the potatoes, eggs, the bacon and the hams, poultry and the wheat from which the bread is made. Gar Wood declared that his remarks did not reflect his real meaning, but that he was reported exactly by the newspaper staff. Very often men in the public eye who say something that does not look well in print claim to have been misreported. Trained newspaper men bend all their energies to get things exactly right and instances of mistakes in reporting are very rare. ESKIMOS

Canada bears a heavy responsibility because its development has unavoidably interfered with the established methods of life of the Eskimos. Fortunately, those adverse effects to modern civilization be better than many other races have been found to do, and thus the problems that arise are more easily solved. The attempt to replace the caribou with the semi-domesticated reindeer for instance, means to make the Eskimo less a hunter and more a herdsman, but there is every prospect that the change will come about in a short time.

The Eskimo of the passing generation hunted wild animals only to provide sustenance and comfort for himself and his family, but his son now hunts to supply a world demand for furs. This involves much closer contact with the whites and other changes in the Eskimo's method of life. But, even to the motor boat, the rifle, the aeroplane and other newest wonders of applied science, the quaky intelligence of Eskimo still himself with little difficulty.

A government bulletin sums up the reports concerning these Eskimo people. They have had good hunting seasons, the general health conditions among them are favorable, and they are contented. This means that the plans of Canadian authorities for the good of the Eskimo are apparently working out well and that if this is so all concerned are to be congratulated.—Ottawa Citizen.

SNOW AFFLE MTTH

In time the Globe may discover that when Bleeding referred to Canada as "Our Lady of the Snows" he was not talking about the climate. We checked apple the delicious memory of which runs back to the boyhood of our oldest inhabitants. At present, however, it has only recently passed away at the age of 69 years, and from the general ignorance of this fact deduces the moral that many public benefactors are forgotten even before their death.

"Most people," remarks the Globe, "are astonished to learn that the man who developed the delightful and universally popular snow apple has just passed away at Ottawa." The astonishment will undoubtless be greatest among those who recall the delicious Snow apples of fifty or more years ago. Memory may have added to the flavor of those apples of the eastern hillside, but there are substantial doubts that it could be possible to improve it in any way, unless, perhaps, to make it twice the size it was.

It is recorded that Mr. Grow was interested in the production of apples, and that he gave special attention to the variety the name of which was identical with his own. But that this identity was more than a coincidence is no more to be assumed than that Cardinal Wolsey was the inventor of underwear.—Toronto Telegram.

AUTUMN MADNESS

I want to walk the streets tonight
And smell the rain on my coat.
I want to walk the river front
And taste the fog in my throat.

I want to hear the river boat
As it cuts the water in twain
And sends across the sharpless muck
Two weird gulping diminuendi.

I must walk long and far tonight
Alone with this strange sadness
To mind when in the long ago
I was a normal autumn madness.

FORMER PRESIDENT DIES

Saint John, N.B., Oct. 16.—W. Shires Fisher, former president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, died at his home here today.

FOR REMEMBRANCE

There will be Dominion-wide approval of the suggestion made by Major Roper, President of the Canadian Legion, that the Dominion government should place a poppy wreath upon all war memorials within the province on November 11, which has now been separated from Thanksgiving and is known as National Remembrance Day.

The wreaths are now most appropriately—made by disabled soldiers in Veterans' shops, under the direction of the Department of Pensions and Health. Already the Provinces of Nova Scotia has adopted the idea and it goes without saying that every other province in the Dominion will follow suit.

There is no need of poppies to re-

LITTLE BENNY
By LEE PAPE

Pop got another letter from ma today her still being away at the seacoast for visit, and Sister Ann in it. Dearest Willyum, Well im still here, but nuthing iasts forever, in fact some things dont last even as long as you expected them to, so I am forming a presentiment that this visit fits into that classificaion like a hand in a glove.

Little Herbit is the fly that is spoiling the taist of the ointmeut. According to Funny he is model of a paragon and everything he does ony makes him seem the more so throughout her roots covered letter but I will give you a specimen of an example of what an average day here is like and you can judge from your own conclusions.

Well, this morning for instants I was awakened at the gassly hour of half pass 5 by a dreem that a giant blacksmith was using my defenseless body as an anvil.to ply his trade on, and low and behold little Herbit was under my bed with an axual real life hammer battering away in a perfect frenzy at the slats and springs. The dreem changed then to Pop on the scene and she immediately took Herbits side, explaining that he has a naturel inborn genius for engineering and it would be wonderful for him to be up giving free vent to his grate gift at a time when common ungified children would still be immersed in a dreem sleep?

And so it went on, history repeeting itself to the verge of nobotony. When I complained to Fanny about finding my shoelaces tied into an insoluble maze of knotts, she said it was just another problem that Herbit had set himself to keep his idle hands out of mischiff, and when I discovered several loose bills in my handbag cut up into ribbins, Fanny exclaimed in a gush of rapture how wonderful it was for a child to start life without an exaggerated notion of the value of meer money.

So perhaps you can expect me sooner than you expected, Willyum. Lovingly Pawleen.

"50 FATHOMS DEEP" AT THE CAPITOL

On Saturday and Monday there is a surprise sensation of the year, "Fifty Fathoms Deep", will be shown at the Capitol.

Here is a picture that has human and exciting moments. Under the direction of R. William Neill, the production leaves nothing to be desired in the way of realism and the deep sea shots are not only thrilling but decidedly interesting. The sound effects under water are marvelous. The plot is well developed dramatically.

Briefly, this is what happens. Two deep sea divers, Jim Burke and Pinky Caldwell, are staunch friends in spite of their great difference in age and character. The younger one, Pinky Caldwell, marries a deceitful, gold-digging blonde believing her to be the model for pure womanhood. She causes a rift between the two pals, making them bitter enemies. They are forced to work together again on a wreck—a yacht which is buried in fifty fathoms of water. Tim descends to the wreck in the midst of a raging storm and discovers the bodies of Pinky's wife and a well-known man about town. In his attempt to hide the evidence and spare his pal he is caught in the wreckage and is unable to free himself. Pinky goes down, not so much to help Tim, as to finish their fight. The sight that greets him when he reaches bottom convinces him that his wife had framed him, and that Tim was a greater friend than he deserved.

The important part of this film is the underwater stuff. It keeps the audience in a perpetual state of excitement and wonder. It is a startling and fascinating revelation of the perilous but adventurous existence of deep sea divers.

Again Jack Holt comes through with one of his vibrant performances. What a man he makes of Tim Burke—loitering, bolstering, but grim a heart of gold, brawny but brainy too! Loretta Sayers is thoroughly baleful as Pinky Caldwell's deceitful wife. Although new to the screen, she plays an unpromising character with conviction. Richard Cromwell is splendid as Pinky Caldwell. Don't miss this picture. It packs a real wallop!

CHEVALIER A DELIGHT IN NEW GORGEOUS MUSICAL ROMANCE

Claudette Colbert Featured

A tremendous combination of acting talent, directorial genius, writing wisdom and music-making magic have been woven into a third and joyous motion picture entertainment, "The Smiling Lieutenant."

Bringing Maurice Chevalier back to the screen after his European tour in another rollicking romance which combines all the attractive qualities which he recently gives in operas. "The Smiling Lieutenant" comes to the Belle Today for two days, matinee daily.

Two gorgeous leading ladies, the brunette Claudette Colbert, the blonde Miriam Hopkins, bring things lively for the smiling French man, whose voice recently gives in thrilling radio audiences, and have full opportunity to express his personality in song in "The Smiling Lieutenant." Charlie Ruggles, the joyous inebriate of a score of films, gives of his laugh-making talents to this new picture.

The story deals with a sprightly lieutenant of the guards, madly in love with a charming cabaret entertainer, for whom he is willing to sacrifice the joys of bachelorhood. Before he can accomplish his purpose, however, he is snatched up by a princess who mistakes his smile for a proposal, and forces him into unwelcome matrimony. After marriage he focuses his dowdy wife for neighbors with the girl of his choice. But his wife, determined to win his regard, learns the secrets of charm from his vaudeville, and lears his heart between love with duty or without.

Into this humorous, yet sincere, love story, Chevalier has woven his inimitable personality, emphasizing his joy in the romance in song. The songs, five of these, were written especially for the French favorite by none other than the famous Oscar Straus, Vienna's own waltz king, and by lyricist Clifford Grey. The music is lovely, lilting; the lyrics...witty; Chevalier's singing, as always, delightful.

"The Smiling Lieutenant" was directed by that genius of music and humor Ernst Lubitsch, whose delicious touches enlivened "The Love Parade" and even Emil Jannings' tremendous tragedy, "The Patriot". The story is projected against the colorful background of post war Vienna and picturesque middle Europe.

"HIGH STAKES" PLAYS "HOUSE OF HORRORS"

Last night large audiences witnessed the remarkable performance of Lowell Sherman in "High Stakes" at the Capitol.

The moral of this sophisticated comedy drama is "Too much money is a fool!" and as the fool, Lowell Sherman is perfect, proving that it takes a wise man to make an idiot. As the fool, married to a fool's brother, (and a supreme adventuress), Miss Murray gives a delightfully convincing performance.

Edward Marlindel is pathetically under his wife's thumb until the denouncement, and then——!

"High Stakes" shows for the last time tonight.

Moderator Condemns Church Union Law

Montreal, Oct. 16.—"No more iniquitous law against the liberty of any group of citizens was ever placed on the statute books of any legislature in the British Empire than the Church Union Law," declared the Rt. Rev. W. G. Brown, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, when addressing the Italian congregation of that denomination here.

Introduced by the pastor of that religious community, the Rev. A. De Pierro, who told of the struggle the people had had during the past few years, the Moderator made a rousing appeal for the members of the Italian Church to emulate the example of their ancestors the Waldenses, who, as far as he knew form of their worship was concern were the first to break away from the Presbyterians of Italy two hundred years before Luther was born.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

At the entrance to the little sun-baked church they found the man of God seated in the shade of a willow. Many years had passed over Padre Compos, and some sorrows. He had seen the growth of that country from a little prairie village to the paved and bustling town of Verdi. He had seen swift killings, and many of those baptized by his own hands he had lived to see die in violent and sudden passions. An all this had left him with eyes that were a little weary, and the lips that were always ready to smile. It was something the years had never dimmed, the sweetness and sympathy of that smile.

He spoke without the least accent as he took Ted's hand.

"I had heard of you, my son, when first you came. Today I hear of your great strength and of the use you put it to last night. Would it be presumptuous to tell you that a man of strength has God gave you should be turned to the pain of another man?"

"I had no choice, father."

"I know, I know. Also is it violent child. He has never learned that until one is master of one's own passion. he is only an animal."

Still smiling, the old padre turned to the girl. You would make even the great anti-Christ, Nietzsche, Leuave in angels, with that face of yours. But let us go inside, where it is cool."

Adela smiled up at Ted. "I wonder if we dare? You see, padre, this young man believes—how did he say your enemies cannot hurt you. Only yourself can do that sad—when you love."

"Those I love!"

"Why, certainly. The ones we love have to them the greatest power to hurt us, and yet without love we could not be happy either. It is one of the paradoxes of the dear God."

Adela laid a folded bill in the old priest's hand. "Use it as seems best to you, father."

He smiled. "Those generous gifts of yours, Adela, have made the way easier for many of my parish. Like children they believe quite literally that God will provide, and usually He does provide, although it keeps His humble representatives busy. That reminds me of one I promised to see at noon. Wait for me here and rest. I will not be more than a half-hour." And, turning, he hurried out.

Adela seated herself on the narrow wooden bench beside the door. "If all men were like Padre Campos there would be no need of carnality or bandits or"—she smiled up at him—"of young men plighted to each other's rifle coil. She looked about her. "Almost my first memories are of this church; when I was so small the pews looked mountain high and the golden sunlight up there seemed to come straight from God."

Ted did not answer. Instead his eyes rose to where the colored panes of glass in the Virgin filtered soft ribbons of light down upon the floor. At the far end a little cluster of candles twinkled, and from somewhere came the drowsy chirping of birds. The spell, the peace of it, filled and held him, and when he spoke it was with a kind of half-regret.

"All my life I had hoped for peace like this, to make it a part of me, and wherever the need comes I have failed."

"And have you never found peace, Ted Radcliffe?" The girl controlled very calm and close beside him in the cool gloom.

He gave a short laugh. "You see how I have found peace for a few months here in Verdi I have brushed and bettered a man, made an enemy of your uncle, and almost all this I may yet lose something I value more than anything in the world."

"And that?"

"You!"

The word seemed to hesitate upon the air, as if reluctant to flit. It charged the little church with a new tension. He had spoken a word and suddenly everything was changed. Adela waited, fearful, yet exalted.

In the dimness he loved never the shadowy girl. His face was softer than she had ever heard. "Listen to what I am about to say, and make no answer until I am done. Last night, when your uncle brought you to that room, I saw your eyes. But before you turned away, There was no anger there—only a kind of pity and sorrow. I have lived apart that I have ever known anything in the world that I might far better lose everything in life than lose you. The rest of that night didn't matter. I would rather that Jilo had beaten me a hundred times than lose the right to look into your eyes or hear the sound of your voice—or to hope."

"Hope?" The look in the silence of the little church was like a sigh. The merest ghost of a voice.

"The hope of your love. Is it contemptible to say that to you? I have been alone, but now I can't feel it contemptible that a man should hope that you will put he love you. For to me this love takes so much higher than all the rest of life. And because, too, there was something in me better than I myself am—and I tells me that I care for you as others love life and freedom—this padre cares for God. You must already know how much he has changed me since I raised the far-off day I first saw you. I wish—with very deeply I could say that a better man speaks to you now, but I can only say that, good or bad, I have loved you. I love you."

Outside the world was hushed with the heat of midday. A vagrant cloud floated slowly before the sun, deepened the dusk within the church, where those two stood rapt and silent before the eternal mystery of love. He looked up toward the bowed head of the Virgin, then, bending low over, had raised the girl's hand to his lips.

In the pink breath his fingers he felt the blood throb, and soft fingers touched his hair. And a voice, soft still, whispered through the church's gloom. "Whether we should love one another—whether we have the right to love one another, only the dear God knows. I only know, Ted Rad-liff—all my heart I do love you—I always have."

Then again those eager, caressing fingers journeyed a hair, passing softly, lingeringly across his cheek, and at last came to rest upon his lips. So for a time they stood, silent, radiantly glad in the presence of his imperishable, aged-old wonder that had come upon them.

"We are of different races, you and I," the girl's voice whispered in the gloom, "and our ways have been different ways. It may be that love will bring more of pain than of joy. Yet even if I knew, oh, if I knew beyond all doubt, that only sorrow and pain awaited. I would not change in any smallest way that love to have for you."

Again silence. Her hands still lay against his cheek. Her eyes, like stars in the gathering dusk, looked up at him. He kissed her lips.

CHAPTER XXIX

And it was so the padre found them. The little priest's kindly cough came as from another world.

Adela turned. She looked into his understanding eyes. "We love each other, father," she said simply, and her voice quivered now and exultant through the dimness of the quiet chapel. It was given into your care here in your church, padre mio. Have I done wrong?"

The wrinkled hands touched the rosary. "Wrong? What can there be of wrong when it is the greatest of children of God? That is the highest of His favors—love. Only because I know you, Adela, I know you to be worthy of all the happiness this world can give."

He looked searchingly into the young man's face. "And you, my son, is the greatest of life's gifts. It comes not lightly and without purpose. It gives, but it also demands. It must find one worthy or it goes and comes in vain. And this is a testing of all that is most worthy in a man. I have read, I think, are more unhappy on earth than those love has come and gone and found unworthy. Better never to have known its sweetness than, knowing it, to have it lost forever. The wisdom of love is a very old wisdom. It is seen and felt even in you, striving to perpetuate the best in those others that love has put into being. Many who have grown impatient for love and have been weary of waiting take poor substitutes and then lament because their lives are aimless and their hearts lack content."

Again the priest looked earnestly into the younger man's eyes, as if striving to read the man. He could see to the riddle the future where those two love-enmeshed children who stood and confidently before him. He shook his head. "To me you are the symbol of youth—youth that seeks out love in spite of all the world. We may not know what tomorrow brings. Jilo, your uncle, Adela, will not be overpleased to hear that you love, and your plans. And I think that Jilo, who has always had you, may go mad with jealousy and perhaps seek to harm you both. So I can only say to you, since you love each other—go forward clearly and trustingly into the future and let love, and not be afraid." He traced a shadowy sign of the cross. "May the peace of God and the love of men go with you both, my children."

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

"THE FLEET'S IN!"

by Jasper B. Sinclair

"The fleet's in!"

Mighty battle-wagons, swift cruisers, sleek destroyers, a supply ship or two, all converge in Man O' War.

Under the shadow of San Francisco's many hills.

A week of shore liberty in the port of ports. Launches loaded to the gunwhales, coming ashore. The groups of sailors filtering uptown.

San Francisco opening wide the doors from the Embarcadero to Powell street; out to Twin Peaks and up on Nob Hill.

"Some class, boy!" and Dave Wellon rescued Bert Young from his reverie with a hearty slap on the back. "Some class!" he repeated loudly, gesturing to the room filled with dancing sailors and brightly dressed girls.

"Yeah . . . some class!" assented Bert Young slowly, his gaze centered not on the room's many occupants, but on one girl in particular. She had just danced past, flashing a swift greeting into her deep blue eyes.

She had danced three times this evening with Laura Wentworth. After that she had not cared to dance with any other girl, being content to stand in the doorway watching the little newcomer.

In the afternoon she had been his companion on a sight-seeing tour of the city. Out through Golden Gate Park, around the cliffs above the Presidio and Lincoln Park, overlooking the Golden Gate Bridge, its purple hills . . . he had scarcely noted these, so engrossed had he been with the dainty figure at his side.

The day had been climaxed with a supper and dance in the Westworth Room atop Nob Hill. In the morning he'd be back on the ship; back aboard the battleship after a glorious seventy-two hours' leave.

In those three days . . . Bert smiled, and deep in his thoughts, despite Dave Watson's continued persiflage. In those three days he knew he had fallen hard for Laura. At the same time he was thoroughly of the futility of hoping to aspire to the affections of one of San Francisco's biggest shipping owners.

And yet, there was something in the lingering speech when they were together, that raised his hopes to dizzy heights.

Chances are when we weigh anything small in the scale, it tips the balance.

Later, while the orchestra was still playing, Bert came together again. Without a spoken word they had disappeared.

It was one of those rare July nights in San Francisco, warm and balmy. At their feet a thousand electric lights twinkled and glittered downtown. The lights of a score of ferry boats sparkled against the darkness of the bay. A night made for youth . . . and love.

Bert's arm found his arms. "I'm sorry, Bert, but you should know it's impossible . . . you don't think I'm a cad—"

"I'm sorry!" Bert said shortly, "I thought perhaps you might care for me just a little."

"Might, Bert," she said softly, repressing a sigh, "if things were different . . . But under the circumstances . . . well, you can understand . . . can't you."

And Bert did understand. Regretfully he led her back into the room filled with its dancing sailors and brightly garbed girls.

It was the last afternoon the Colorado was open to visitors. The decks of the squadron had already slipped out of the bay bound for the Panama Canal, but across the Colorado would weigh anchor, headed for the Golden Gate.

Bert Young stood watching a launch bearing down upon the battleship. He had not seen Laura since that night. He had tried to banish all thought of her from his mind. But that was not so easy.

A vision of her dark hair and deep blue eyes and smiling mouth had persistently intruded itself upon him; along with her cheery laughter and gay chatter.

Without warning his musings were interrupted by the sound of her voice. He had not realized, in his reverie, that the launch had come alongside, or that the occupants were now wandering along the Colorado's deck.

"You don't seem very pleased to see me again," Laura said poutingly. "I didn't know you were coming aboard," he responded, wondering why she had come. In her arms was a furry black mass that resolved itself into a half-grown Skye terrier.

"I wasn't my idea," Laura explained. "Some of the girls brought them'd like to come out and so — so I came along."

She stooped and put the puppy down. Welcoming its freedom the animal scampered along the deck.

"Not too far, MacTavish," she call ed chidingly. "That's really not his name," she informed Bert, "but Dad will permit in calling it that has to tease me!"

He laughed, and would have moved away when some other girls joined Laura, except for a sudden commotion aft of where they stood.

Visitors and sailors rushed across the deck, following a squeal of terror. There was a faint splash overside. Running to the rail Bert saw a struggling black haired terrier bearing the green waters of the bay.

"Oh, Bert, it's MacTavish!"

"I didn't need Laura's agonized exclamation to tell him it was her little Skye terrier. He had vaulted the rail before Laura offered his intention. She grasped his arm, but he shook her loose.

"Bert, don't, please!"

But he had already let go the rail, hitting the water a scant fifty yards from the struggling terrier.

In that brief moment he had seen that the launch was already a quarter of a mile away, steaming out to shore. There were none of the ferry boats near. He decided he'd reach the dog — but he would not fail, warned by the pleading tone of Laura's admonition and the sudden fear that had seized his heart.

With long, powerful strokes he quickly narrowed the distance, while Laura stood with clenched hands at the rail until the knuckles of both hands were white.

When he stood before her again and held out the struggling terrier, she grasped both Bert's shoulders in her excitement and joy.

"Oh, Bert, you shouldn't have done that," she reproached gently. "But I love you for it!" she added quickly.

He smiled uncomfortably at her praise, but couldn't accept the tribute and—

"I'm all right, really. "I couldn't expect you to do anything else but what you did, Bert," she added, the grinning group that surrounded them, she pulled his head down and kissed him.

Howled Down Premier Undaunted at Seaham

Seaham Harbor, Eng. Oct. 16—Premier Ramsay MacDonald was unable to obtain a hearing when he attempted to deliver a campaign speech at the Seaham Colliery here Thursday and abandoned the idea after he was hooted down.

For fifteen minutes he made an effort to address a meeting in his campaign for re-election to the House of Commons from the Seaham Harbor constituency, but his brief speech was continuously interrupted by boos and cat calls.

His voice rapidly weakening, the Prime Minister ceased talking and offered to answer questions, but even his answers were greeted with shouts.

"Howls have never cowed me and never will," Mr. MacDonald said as he left the meeting.

WELTER DUEL LOOKS GOOD

Billy Townsend and Paulis Walker Meet In Madison Square

New York, N.Y., Oct. 16.—A welterweight duel between Billy Townsend, Vancouver, and Paulis Walker, Trenton, N.J., Madison Square Garden's weekly boxing card tonight.

Townsend, hard-pressed to win over Billy Rea, Polish welter, in his eastern debut last week perhaps will find Walker a handful. The New Jersey boy, a puncher who can take it, fights as though he likes it.

Townsend had to get off the floor to beat Rea on a decision that failed to meet with unanimous approval from the fans and he may find himself floored again if Walker should connect squarely.

Originally Walker was to have met Jimmy Leonard but Leonard had to finish the garden by the New York State Athletic Commission after his unsatisfactory fight with Pal Silvera.

The semi-final of tonight's show will find Vince Dundee, crack Italian welterweight, meeting Joe Scalzo, ranger of New York. Tony Herrera of El Paso, Texas, will mix matters with Harry Carlton, Jersey City lightweight in the opening ten.

Intra-Empire Plan Of Preference

Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions and Colonies.

Mr. Thomas, a former Labor Cabinet Minister, declared that he himself had not ruled out support for tariffs, if the country decided on such again a minister, which I suppose is not unlikely Mr. Thomas continued, "I should invite the Dominions and Colonies to work out a scheme advantageous to one another."

Vigorous Attack Upon Socialism

Hamilton, Oct. 16—Vigorous denunciation of Socialism and legislation of the taxation structure of Canada should be made with a view to changes, marked an address by Rt. Hon. Sir Henry Drayton, K.C., M.P., for St. David's, Toronto, addressed the Hamilton Women's Conservative Association here yesterday.

"Socialism is not a solution of the world's troubles today," he said, "it is cause of them," he declared. "We have suffered as Canadians as we want everyone to know that we have worked and fought for this country and come good-fortune or ill, we mean to keep it for ourselves —and keep it British."

Discussing present conditions, he called for patriotic unity of Federal and Provincial governments in Canada. They had a huge task in guiding affairs of the country at this time.

FUMES MAKE FAMILY ILL

Soot in Chimney Teld To Blame For Occurrence

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Clarke, and Miss Campbell, Wrenna Road, will be very glad to learn that, although they had an experience with furnace gas escaping into their home during Wednesday night, no serious results are anticipated. Mrs. Clarke and Miss Campbell are still feeling the effects to a certain extent, but Mr. Clarke is at business today. About two o'clock Thursday morning, Miss Campbell felt ill and called to her sister, Mrs. Clarke. When Mrs. Clarke arose in answer to the summons, she also fell ill. Mr. Clarke seemed to be in normal condition and the cause of the sudden illness could not be accounted for. Dr. R. W. Tennent was summoned and the illness was pronounced to be poisoning from gas. Constable Bruce Cronk was immediately sent for and nothing but soot was coughed up, about nine o'clock Thursday morning, when Miss Clarke was seriously seized with illness. She managed to telephone to Dr. Tennent to come at once, and he arrived in time to find Miss Cronk at once to the hospital for treatment. Upon investigation Miss Cronk is said to be quite ill today. Miss Clarke also perceived a slight odor of gas in the house and plumbers were sent for. They found that the fumes in the house in first-class condition and that the soot in the chimney had not cleaned thoroughly but that where the gas pipe enters the chimney, the cleaners had neglected to remove considerable soot; this was the cause of the trouble, a small amount of gas to enter the house which accumulated was the cause of the sudden illness of Mrs. Clarke and Miss Campbell. The trouble was soon rectified.

Bombs Hurled Near Theatre

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 16.—Bombs were hurled at two more theatres early today.

The fifteenth in almost two months was exploded at the Byrd Theatre on the West Side, and at the greater Chicago Theatre Corporation.

The fifteenth was tossed at the Lindy Theatre on the North side and caused $1,000 damage to the auditorium.

Neither motion picture house is involved in the dispute between independent theatres and the motion picture operators' union, their owners said.

Thirteen other theatres, all owned by independent owners, have been bombed since September 1, the latest August 10, over the number of persons to be employed in each theatre.

Second Charge Laid Against Picto nMan

Leonard Van Horn, aged 33, who lives near Frankford, was this week out on a bail of $3,000 awaiting trial on a charge of arson in connection with the burning of his barn and contents owned jointly by himself and his father, Jacob Van Horn, was rearrested Wednesday on a charge of making threatening letters. Further bail of $3,000 was accepted, and accused will appear for trial when the Grand Jury is ready to proceed with the case.

Previous to the burning of the Van Horn barn on Nov. 27, anonymous threatening letters addressed to Van Horn and the neighbors were received demanding that $200 be left in a certain place for the writers behalf them. The first letter, received eight days before the fire, demanded that $200 be placed in a specified place, and warning was added that if the police were told the barn would be burned. In spite of the warning, Van Horn called the police at once. The police left a trap for the incendiary, but this failed. Another letter was received stating that the writer had watched them endeavoring to trap him. Efforts to secure his fingerprints would fail, he said, as he wore rubber gloves.

One letter threatened "to get" the younger Van Horn's wife, who was ill in bed, if the arson was not forthcoming. Investigation by the police resulted in the surprise arrest of Van Horn on a charge of arson. He was released on bail, and his case remanded. Police refuse to disclose the contents of the letter, on which handwriting experts are working. The Van Horn fire was the third barn in the Pleb Line Methodist Lodges, Monday night, Oct. 19th, at 8 p.m. Full attendance is requested. 016-2t

(By Thomas T. Champion)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Rome, Oct. 16.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Francis, Cardinal Bourne, has issued a message calling out that in the present election in Great Britain the issues challenge the attention of his fellow-catholics to the inequitable conditions affecting education in the schools. The cause opinion has in any way affected the position of catholic schools have in any degree lessened, the cardinal says, but conviction that nothing should be done to distract the electors from the grave responsibilities which rest upon them.

"For this reason," the Cardinal's message continued, "we address today to all our Catholic people of England and Wales United, with earnest appeal that they give themselves with renewed fervour and confidence to the Divine Assistance for public needs in this anxious time."

GRID TEAMS LEAVE TODAY FOR GAMES

All Teams in League Excepting Balby Beach Will See Action

BELL OUT

Former Backfield Star of Varsity Joins Argo Squad

Toronto, Oct. 16 (CP)—With Toronto Varsity pushing off for Montreal, Hamilton Tigers moving to Ottawa, Montreal Winged Wheelers journeying to Toronto and Western leaving for Kingston for tomorrow's games, tonight is considered an off night in eastern Canadian football circles. With the exception of Balmy Beach, Dominion champions, all squads will see action tomorrow.

A strong feeling of confidence pervaded throughout the University of Toronto camp last night after the players had completed their final effort in preparation for the week-end game with McGill. The husky squad have concentrated considerably on the forward pass throughout the week's drills and coach Harry Stobbs now place the use the new aerial heave to advantage in tomorrow's encounter.

The "Varsity mentor has pulled a surprise on the holiday and handed the Dominion champions a setback. In a league fixture are confident of making it a straight victory, even when they engage the Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers on Thanksgiving. The second team will send its strongest line-up into action as they vie with all comers for honors in the league leadership.

McDermott, the hard tackling snap of the University of Western Ontario, will be lost to the team when the Londoners engage Queen's in Kingston tomorrow. The snapback has been a deadly uncerated tooth and was sent to the hospital yesterday. Otherwise the squad-men are in excellent condition and will take a lot of beating from the league champions. Bill Breen's crew have hopes of winning tomorrow's fixture and resting at the top of the intercollegiate heap for the first time since their entrance to the union three seasons ago.

Ball Out of Retirement

When another football player came out of retirement last night it was a break for coach Buck McKenna and his Toronto Argonauts. Billy Bell, who played excellent football last season for Varsity seniors, put in his initial appearance of the season and drilled with the scullers last night. While he will not see action tomorrow he is expected to be an ideal addition to the centre men's backfield. He will in all probabilities team up with Frank Turville on the Argos backfield when the Toronto crew meet Ottawa a week from tomorrow.

The big four champion Hamilton Tigers will journey to Ottawa tonight for their important fixture in the capital tomorrow with the Rough Riders. Ray Boadway, secondary defenceman, is likely to be the only regular not to make the trip. The Tigers have drilled considerably throughout the week on the use of the forward pass and Billy Hughes' charges are expected to use the pass extensively against the Ottawa aggregation.

THE "RODDEN-SHAG" OF THE

The East may have Mr. Mike Rodden's and her Frank Shaughnessy and sundry other football coaches of more or less merit, but in the west there is only one Al Ritchie. Not even the great Michael or the Irrepressible Shag can boast the record that Al keeps pinned up over the fire place. For proof see the team in the whole province of Saskatchewan has been successful in copping the rough-tiding broncha from the prairie city of Regina. All the Rough Riders have been champions of western Canada more times than Winnipeg will tell. (Winnipeg have a great desire to win a western championship again sometime). Al's feat in raising championship aggregations is a miracle, since he has a limited field, and mostly green as grass from, where as in the East, the boys are coached in rugby from the start-up. This year, the Riders are stronger than ever, and when they meet Regent last year's performance—up to the East-west play-off, there will be a triumph there, the aspirations for the West? "Not I," said the manager as he tossed a crumb for a forward pass gain of six inches. "But I'll say this much, the west will have the advantage in the use of P.P.'s (forward pass, not free) by having used it for a few years back.

Stray Shots From Alleys

The Proterns having withdrawn from the Ladies' Afternoon League, we are losing schedule as it is, and can see no merging them in schedule will be given a prize to roll for, on those days, the Mayflowers played yesterday for the prize and Mrs. Hall won.

In the Industrial League Supersons took three points to Hoganson's corner, in a game, that was very even until the last few frames. Supersons bowlers were Lynch for Supersons 758 and Hollins for Hoganson's 776.

The real feature of the night was the opening games of the "Wall" Street Bowling League. This league which is composed of players whose occupation is on Campbell "Wall" Street, promises some real sport before the schedule is finished.

CANADA SENDS OLYMPIC TEAM

Decision Was Reached at Meeting Behind Closed Doors

Toronto, Oct. 16.—Canada will be represented at the Olympic Games of 1932, if the necessary funds to equip and transport a Canadian team are forthcoming. This was the decision yesterday of the Canadian Olympic Committee, which met behind closed doors to discuss the question of whether Canada would participate in the Olympics. The latest games are to be held at Lake Placid, N. Y., and Los Angeles, Calif.

German, French, South African, New Zealand, Australian and other British athletes will be invited to attend a giant athletic meet in Canada following the Olympics, the committee decided.

Doubt has existed for some time as to whether or not Canada would participate in the Olympics of next year. Due to economic depression, several countries had declared their inability to take part, and since the long trip to the coast will be an expensive proposition, every effort will be made to raise funds to transport the Canadian squads.

ATHLETES IN MONTREAL

Mr. Ralph (Chick) Champaign and a number of the Queen's Field and Track team left for Montreal yesterday in the intercollegiate athletic meet being held there.

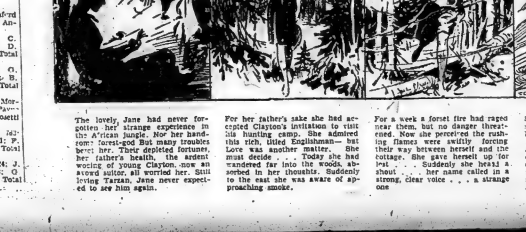
RACING BOATS READY FOR GUN

Bluenose and Thebaud Have Had Finals Over Hauling For Race

BY TOM HORGAN

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 16.—A day of inactivity faced the crews of the Canadian defender Bluenose and the United States challenger for the International Fisherman's Trophy, the schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud of Gloucester, Mass., today.

Captain Angus Walters, Bluenose fiery little skipper decided he would not haul out again before going to the starting line. A slight leak that had worried Captain Angus did not develop to serious proportions during the defender's workout yesterday and Captain Angus said he would take his chances as Bluenose now laid in the dock.



Captain Ben Pine of Gloucester, who will command the Thebaud in the title contest, said he would not take her out on a marine railway unless asked to do so by the race committee for new measurements.

He said the Gloucester schooner was in excellent condition and required no further attention, before facing the starting gun. Dirty weather, rain and high winds also threatened to prevent any other practice trials for the two Maritime Queens.

Captain Pine's physician, Dr. Geo Tobey of Boston, who has been treating him for sinus trouble would not let the skipper risk his' health unnecessarily regardless of Captain Pine's wishes.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 57. (Metropolitan Newspap er Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The lovely Jane had never forgotten her strange experience in the African jungle. Nor her handsome forest-god. But many troubles beset her. Their depleted fortunes, her father's health, the ardent wooing of young Clayton, one an avowed suitor, all worried her. Still loving Tarzan, Jane never expected to see him again.

For her father's sake she had accepted Clayton's invitation to visit his hunting camp. She admired this rich, lithe Englishman— but Love was another matter. She must decide . . . Today she had wandered far into the woods, absorbed in her thoughts. Suddenly to the east she was aware of approaching smoke.

For a week a forest fire had raged near them, but no danger threatened. Now she perceived the rushing flames were swiftly forcing their way between herself and the cottage. She gave herself up for lost . . . Suddenly she heard A shout . . . her name called in a strong, clear voice . . . a strange one

She answered . . . saw a figure racing through the smoke. Suddenly she felt a great arm about her . . . felt herself lifted and borne aloft. Jane thought she was lowering over in a dream the experiences of the far African jungle. Would it were be of that other day again with Tarzan? But this was impossible.

Yet who else in all the world was there with the strength and agility to do what this man was now doing? She took a sudden glance at the face close to hers and then she gave a little frightened gasp. It was he—her man—TARZAN OF THE APES.

TWELVE YEAR LIFE INCREASE

Prediction of Lengthening Of Span is Made

New York, Oct. 16.—The average span of life in the United States, now estimated by statisticians at 56 years, will be increased by 12 years within the next quarter century, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, one of the Mayo brothers whose names rank high in American surgery, said in an interview.

Dr. Mayo is attending the American College of Surgeons' annual convention at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

"In the next 25 years," he said, "man may expect to live to an average age of 70 years instead of 58 as at present.

"Preventive science has combined with education to produce a healthier race."

But Dr. Mayo cannot see that science will solve the riddle of life.

"All living things must die," he said, with a slight wave of the hand. "Neither health, education, nor science, will enable a race to live forever."

The breaking point, he feels, is at the age of 38. From then on, if not before, people must exert every care. The human body must be treated for the intricate machine it is. If a man wants to live to be 70, let him take care of himself after 38. "The natural breakdown of the organism," said the famous surgeon, "begins at that age."

Explaining the prevalence of medicines will be the important factor in advancing the span of life during the next 25 years, Dr. Mayo said. Medical men of the present are working determinedly to discover means of prevention, rather than cure.

One speaker saw fit to criticize the slouch position of the present-day "apper" as a deleterious influence. Young women of today, he said, will find that their abnormal postures will "lead to serious and permanent deformity."

Dr. Kretscher, speaking on the subject of "posture and good health" said that "improper shoes and inclination" will lead to curvature of the spine.

EARLY STAGES CANCER CURED

Success in Many Cases is Reported to U. S. College of Surgeons

New York, Oct. 16.—Success in curing many forms of cancer, including some of the stomach, was reported to the American College of Surgeons Thursday.

Messages of both hope and specific warning were delivered in an all day symposium, all emphasizing how the public's co-operation is saving lives.

New half million volt X-rays surgery, radium and particularly the seemingly innocent and frequently easily beginnings of cancer were stressed.

"The fact that cancer, of the stomach is curable," said Donald C. Balfour, M.D., of the Mayo clinic of Rochester, Minnesota, "is often obscured by the prevailing attitude of physicians and of lay-men toward the disease. I am prescuing an analysis of the histories of 123 patients for whom partial gastrectomy for cancer of the stomach was done in the clinic between 1910 and 1920, and who lived 10 years or more following the operation.

"Careful study of these patients emphasized the great variability of the disease. This study served to emphasize that in a disease in which cure is possible, not even an attempt at cure can be made in 75 per cent of the cases when the patients are first seen. There are two major reasons for this; nature of the disease and delay in diagnosis."

Experiments With 250,000 X-ray Tube.

The results of the first experiments with the giant 250,000 X-ray tube at the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena were reported by Seeley G. Mudd, M.D., and Charles C. Lauritsen, Ph.D., the latter builder of the tube.

These rays penetrate more deeply than lower voltage, being equivalent of giving physicians a longer knife. Nothing in their nature yet has been found essentially different from other X-rays. During the nine months, the report stated, 85 persons showing evidence of inoperable cancerous growths have been treated.

"No alarming systematic reactions have been observed," the report continues. "Obviously, sufficient time has not elapsed to permit discussion of results. It is contemplated to restrict the groups of patients treated and study more intensively malignant tumors of the rectum, larynx, esophagus and breast."

Says Cancer Curable

"Cancer", said Burton J. Lee, M.D., of New York, "is a curable disease—this is a true statement if the disease is discovered in its early stages."

The beginners of cancer may last for 10 or 15 years before cancer finally develops, according to Robert B. Greenough, M.D., of Boston.

"Such conditions can be cured," he said, "before they become cancerous, and it is in this way that we can truthfully speak of the prevention of cancer."

In the preventable class Dr. Greenough listed almost all forms of external cancer, and some internal forms.

POST OFFICE REVENUES UP

Every Prospect of Last Year's Deficit Being Overtaken

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—Substantial recovery in postal revenues with every prospect of last year's deficit being overtaken is indicated in reports of postal business presented to Hon. Arthur Sauve, Postmaster-General. Since assuming that portfolio, Mr. Sauve has applied himself industriously to the task of converting a heavy deficit into a surplus and yesterday expressed satisfaction with the result which promises well for the future. One feature of the increased postal business is the marked advance in third-class matter. In the Toronto office alone, one which is regarded by officials here as a good barometer for all Canada, the increase in this type of postage, during September was 100 per cent. over Sept., 1930.

"If this conveys anything at all," declared one official today, "it suggests that business houses and industrial concerns have greatly widened their advertising campaigns. Third-class mail embraces printed matter — circulars and such like. The doubling of this business in September indicates a pronounced confidence on the part of merchandising houses in the gradual betterment of conditions generally."

More Registered Mail

Lending support to this is the 13 per cent. increase in registered mail during September. This increase has been accompanied by a 14 per cent. decrease in C.O.D. matter, a fact that is interpreted to mean that people are sending "cash with order," whereas last year they seemed to be taking the chance on having the money between the dispatch of the order and the delivery of goods. It is added that the 13 per cent. increase on insured mail is a percentage on a much greater volume of business than the 14 per cent. reduction on C.O.D. matter.

Second class mail matter has retained its position, while a slight drop in letter mail is more than offset by increases in other directions. For the first three months of the fiscal year the department was $800,000 in "the red" from last year; but the months of July and August overtook $800,000 of that, and from now on officials look for a steady upswing.

All In A Name

by N. Florence Lee:h

Edna Nugent read the morning paper idly, noting that the Kermesse air flight was postponed; that all undistinguished Lenten parties reduced fig clearance; that dresses would be longer this fall. Then from an inconspicuous corner of an inside page a name flashed up at her—Jim Black. With startled eyes and pounding heart she read the brief item. An unusual large lipped cache had been unearthed, the paper detailed, and the article ended: "Miss Black, an old offender, was questioned, but produced an air-tight alibi."

Edna pressed shaking fingers over her eyes, while into her mind rushed corroborating bits of evidence: the fact that he had so much "night work" to do on the faint pungent odor which was so often noticeable about him on the terrible cut on his hand which he admitted came from broken glass . . . "Dropped a bottle," he had said, smiling.

She had met dark-haired, gray-eyed Jim when she was at Ocean View last summer, and it was love at first sight. Early one morning she was sitting on the raft which rose and fell gently on the playful waves with little pops and splashings. She was gazing dreamily at the blue sky and bluer ocean when suddenly out of nowhere, a swimmer with brown shoulders and strong, brown arms appeared and lifted himself up beside her.

"Hello," he said, casually. "Does Neptune know you're out?"

Her heart began fluttering; and later, when they sat on the bench getting acquainted, it went flip-flop—flip-flop like a dying fish. She flushed with embarrassment and hoped he would not hear—but that night, when the singing waves gave Jim an excuse to hold her in his arms, she distinctly felt a responsive thump-thump in his breast, and she realized with a joyful thrill that he felt the same way she did.

Winged days of blue and gold passed, and Edna returned home with Jim's ring on her finger and joy and mounting excitement in her heart.

But the magic spell was broken all too soon, for the tasks of the humdrum, workaday world claimed Jim.

"I'm sorry, but I must work tonight," he would say reluctantly, when she suggested this or that. And when he did spend an evening with her, his eyes were tired and puffy from lack of sleep.

"What sort of work do you do?" she asked, curiously.

"I'm a chemist," he informed her, "a commercial chemist."

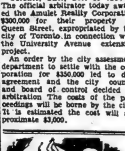
"But why do you have to work at night?" she persisted.

He hesitated. "It's overtime work," he answered, vaguely. "I'll explain more fully later on."

Remembering now her implicitly she had believed him, Edna's cheeks flushed with shame.

"I should have realized from the first that something was wrong," she thought, "but oh, I'm glad I'm so full of laughter—his strong, brown hands—"

Jim telephoned that evening, and asked her to go out to dinner and a show.



"I'm sorry," she answered, coolly "but I have a headache."

The headache was not make-believe, and crying herself to sleep did not cure it; but Edna's rounded wills also was full of determination, so she stifled the pain in her heart.

"He's not worthy," she thought, fiercely. "I never want to see him again."

Endless, dreary days passed. Edna went to teas and parties and dances with Alton Lacy, an old beau, who was pale and insipid compared to Jim, but the lights and the laughter and music made her want to scream. She expostulated by the city of Toronto in connection with the University Avenue extension project.

An order by the city assessment department to settle with the corporation for $350,000 led to disagreements, and the city council and board of control decided on arbitration. The costs of the proceedings will be borne by the city. It is estimated the cost will approximate $3,000.

38.8 MILE COURSE

Bluenose Shows Superiority in Light Weather Conditions

(By Andrew Merkel, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

(Radio from C.G.S. Lady Laurier)

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 17.— Bluenose, Canadian defender of the International Fishermen's trophy, and the Gertrude L. Thebaud, United States challenger, left their docks shortly after eight o'clock, and headed toward the course where they will match tactics for the supremacy of the North Atlantic.

The Bluenose, Captain Angus Walters, veteran salt schooner, defending her thrones as queen of the North Atlantic fishing fleet, and the American challenger, Gertrude L. Thebaud, of Gloucester, lay six minutes at the six-mile mark in their opening race today. The contest was waged over a course of approximately forty miles through lumbling seas and heavy swells.

The next eleven-mile leg gave the schooners their first touch of land in island buoy. Although they sighted and ratched on the horizon as the breeze was not strong enough to put them sails under.

The course is 38.8 miles.

Breeze Is Needed

At 11.15 it was apparent that unless the wind freshened the schooners could not finish it within the six hour time limit. More than a third of the distance had been traversed up and they had negotiated only about one-fifth of the course.

Bluenose came about on the port tack at 11.55 shortly after rounding Shut In Island buoy. She started a nine mile beat to windward on the southeast automatic buoy, 21 miles from the finish line.

Bitter Words Against Former Labor Friends

London, Oct. 17—In a personal letter to candidates of the National Labor Party, Right Hon. Philip Snowden, retiring chancellor of the Exchequer, last night bitterly attacked his former colleagues of the Labor government.

"The issue," Snowden wrote, "is whether the country shall have a strong, stable government in the time of national peril, or whether its destinies shall be handed over to those conduct in a serious National crisis of such grave importance illness to be trusted with responsibility. The choice which the Labor government had to make at the end of a long period of unemployment was whether the welfare of the country or other considerations should take the precedence. The unpleasant measures to protect the financial and economic stability of the nation or whether we would shirk our duty and leave the difficulties of the trade union congress."

TEACHERS ASK SERMONS UPON MONEY CRISIS

Teacher in Chicago is Hungry For First Time

Tax Muddle Blamed For Lack of Funds

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 17.—Chicago's unpaid school teachers had turned to the Ministry for aid.

North side instructors, meeting today, decided to ask the city's ministers to devote a part of their sermons tomorrow to the financial plight of the teachers. They have received no money for their services since last April. Instead they have been paid in scrip, acceptable at certain stores for merchandise only.

Today, however, the teachers, who are fighting for cash, won a temporary injunction from Judge Andrew Philip J. Finnegan restraining the School Board from making further cuts in lieu of pay checks.

W. H. Hamilton, a teacher who acted as temporary chairman of the meeting, said:

"In all our forty-one years of teaching in Chicago this is the first time I have been employed."

A tax muddle is blamed for the School Board's lack of funds to pay the city's 14,000 teachers.

SMALL SHACK PULLED DOWN

Police Issue Order For Removal of Building On Shore

After some deliberation between the city solicitor and the police department, the latter took action on Saturday and ordered destroyed a small shack situated at the south end of George Street, that has been used by the young boys of the neighborhood as a meeting place. Some time ago this shack was built by the younger boys of that section of the city for a place to spend their leisure time. No permit was secured to erect the building and only the necessities of furniture was placed therein. Some complaints have been received by the police but it is understood they considered the matter too trivial for their officials to deal with. An order was made by Sergeant Detective Trualsch and was taken but on Saturday action was taken.

Sergeant Detective Trualsch was ordered to destroy the building and accordingly proceeded to do same. He enquired as to the boys who were responsible for the shack and part ing found them, ordered the boys to destroy the building. The officer stayed on the job until the work was started and it required but little time to demolish the shack. The police carried out this work because it was felt that in the best interests of all concerned for it would only serve as a meeting place where possibly crime would spring.

POPE LAUDS MISSIONARIES

His Holiness is Sorrowful For Hardships Missionaries Endure

Vatican City, Oct. 17 (A.P.) — The Pope's sorrow over the hardships of his far-flung missionaries was described to the world today by Archbishop Carlo Salotti secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, speaking over the Vatican radio.

His address was occasioned by the celebration of Mission Sunday tomorrow. It was delivered first in Italian and was followed by English, French and German translations. It will be repeated tonight with a Spanish translation.

Facing the same microphone used by the Pope, he said: "More than once have I seen the tears of the Holiness bathe the pages scrawled by trembling hands of aged warriors in fields afar who confided to the faith of christendom their trials and anguish.

"Pius Eleventh, who has hymned his finest cantos in exaltation of his mission, has given to the Apostolate an admirable impulse and has directed with wisdom and govern the new organization developing so actively in every field. He lives missionaries interests, aids them, defends them, sorrows with them in their misfortunes.

"Journeyings in strange climates, contentment to which he is not accustomed, evil diseases, difficulties from superstitions and strange ways, political or religious hostility of men, and often lack of means necessary for the most elemental needs of life—here are the sources of his grief.

"But despite this impressive litany of calamities, the missionary holds to his post and remains with his flock as to the duty of a pastor. He does not abandon his formidable enterprise since God has given him the mission and a hundred thousand soldiers of Christ laboring on every continent and preparing a pathway to the triumph of Christ."

Slightly Higher Prices Rule On Local Market

Despite the cold weather the local market was largely attended on Saturday. The feature of the Belleville market was the varied prices that were seen by the shoppers. Potatoes seemed to be on the upward trend as farmers asked slightly higher prices for their produce than have been experienced so far this season. Butter sold from 25c to 30c a pound while eggs went up as high as 40c per dozen. Fine large beets sold as low as 50c per dozen later in the day. Chickens sold from 65c to $1.00 each while small fryers brought $1.00 a pair. A few ducks were offered at $1.25 each. Honey in the comb was quickly bought up at two combs for 25c.

The outside market prices remained about the same as last week. The fruit market was very well represented with all kinds of home grown fruit being offered by the farmers of this district. Fine Mackintosh Red sold for $1.50 a bushel while Snow apples brought $1.60 a bushel. Home grown pears sold at 25c a basket and fine pickling pears brought 50c a bushel.

Discount On Dollar Brings New Avenue Of Trade With Orient

Victoria, B.C. Oct. 17.—Discount on the Canadian dollar, bringing it closer to Oriental purchasing power in relation to other currencies, has opened up new opportunity for development of Canadian trade in China, in which Canada's position should take a leading part it was said here yesterday by Wallace R. Duncan, director of markets for British Columbia.

Favorable trade sentiment already exists for British Columbia goods, due largely to the knowledge of the Orient of this province, he said. While export of canned salmon and flour will remain as a big factor in trade, Mr. Duncan said shipments have been made of other British Columbia goods.

Canned vegetables from this province have been laid down successfully at Shanghai and Hong Kong. Canned corn has proved popular. Canned peas were introduced and will take well, as more color is retained in the product, canned tomatoes and fresh apples, priced to sell at low figures to engage the native trade, are now en route to Chinese ports.

BOAT TRAFFIC HERE WILL NOT BE AFFECTED

Harbor Master Believes Ruling On Draught Will Not Affect

FREIGHT EIGHT

Low Water About Gov't Dock Not Shallow For Large Craft

Kingston, Oct. 17—Lake steamers will be seriously affected by a new order issued by the Department of Marine, at Ottawa, limiting the maximum draught of steamers to 13 feet, two inches, according to local steamship officials. The previous draught was 13 feet 6 inches.

It would mean nine steamers would be required to carry the cargo formerly handled by eight, said T. L. Cross, superintendent of the Canada Steamship Lines here today. One foot of draught meant approximately a reduction of 2,000 bushels of grain in each cargo.

The order was made necessary by low water prevailing at present, it was explained.

Commenting on this matter, Mr. G. Cowdy, Belleville harbor master, said that he did not think that this ruling will affect steamships here, as the freight traffic at this port is not heavy. If the water level decreased, Mr. Cowdy said, if the water were of sufficient depth to allow the larger boats to call. The depth in the channel is all right, but the low water around the government wharf is too low to permit them to stop. Inquiries are often received from shipping companies by Mr. Cowdy asking if the harbor conditions are such that they could safely stop at the government wharf—one such inquiry was recently received from Chicago.

A letter has been forwarded asking Government engineers inspected the Belleville harbor and they readily saw the necessity of dredging not only around the Government wharf but also the harbor around the numerous coal warehouses. As to whether this work will be done by Cowdy, of course, can not say but that it would be if necessary and that it would result in greatly increased business for the Government wharf.

Churches in City May Adopt Congregations on Stricken Provinces

175 Churches Need Aid, Rev. Peter Bryce Shows

DISCUSSED HERE

Belleville Churches Will Likely Take Some Action For Relief

Adoption of smaller Western Canadian churches by congregations in charge of Quinte Conference in a possibility, it was stated by church leaders on Saturday.

The plight of some western churches which have found conditions such that they cannot pay their way has aroused the sympathy of the east churches with the result that in most centres the question of adoption for the time being has been considered and has been entertained with a great deal of interest.

"The question has been discussed in Belleville," said Rev. Dr. Bell of Bridge Street United Church, who was asked what steps had been taken in that regard. He went on to say that it was not certain just what would be done here. Something of course, will be done in the way of relief but whether the churches of Belleville will adopt single ones is doubtful owing to the financial demands upon the churches in carrying on in this city." Whether adoption of any churches will be decided upon I doubt very much. If anything is done it will probably be done as a group of churches."

Local Situation

Rev. Robert Hamilton of Bethel Church, stated that the question had been discussed in Belleville but nothing definite in the way of a decision had been reached. As a church itself cannot adopt a western congregation, it will do the next best thing, work in co-operation with other churches. A plan is on foot, Mr. Hall said, to contribute to a general fund in case of congregations not able themselves to maintain a congregation singly. The monies would be administered from the general fund.

"Ministers are making a voluntary assignment of a portion of their salaries." Mr. Hall remarked "and efforts are being made to have the laymen do likewise in this crisis."

Belleville did not have any representatives at the meeting held in Toronto when this matter was discussed on Friday.

175 Churches Need Aid

Toronto, Oct. 17— Eastern churches should be enabled to "adopt" western churches for the duration of the present need, a representative group of ministers and laymen from the Hamilton and Bay of Quinte Conferences of the United Church of Canada, decided at a meeting here Friday.

Rev. Dr. Peter Bryce, presented a list of 175 churches in Saskatchewan requiring emergency support in some measure for the current year, and it was decided this list should be made available at once to churches or groups of churches willing to "adopt" one or more western fields.

Churches in Oshawa, Belleville and other centres had already offered to take over certain places in the dried out areas it was stated.

Last night the blonde slugger "won" his second start in Madison Square Garden. Officially his bout went into the records as a draw with elusive Paulie Walker, Trenton, N.J., but to 15,000 fans and most of ringside critics, Townsend won a clear cut decision.

Referee Ary Griffon voted for the Vancouver boxer, one of the judges called it a draw while the other voted for Walker.

The crowd, however, gave their opinion by booing the announcer. Joe Humphrey's from the ring when he attempted to announce the decision.

Townsend was given the greatest ovation any newcomer has ever received here as he stepped down from the ring to his dressing room.

PILLS, PESTLES AND MORTARS OF LONG AGO
National Pharmacy Week Brings Back Memories Of Long Ago
This is National Pharmacy Week and in various ways the druggists of the nation through the press and over the radio are drawing attention to the fact that "Your Druggist is More Than a Merchant," also pointing out the great advances made in the past century in the compounding of prescriptions and the druggist profession generally. Belleville druggists are observing National Pharmacy Week with special window displays and digging up old mortars, pestles, etc., from the dust bins of years of disuse, for a brief parade as antiques before various counters. A specialty interesting exhibit which will recall memories of long ago to the minds of old-timers can be seen in the window of Dolan Bros. Drugstore, and includes a herb press in use over fifty years ago. The herbs were placed in this press moistened with alcohol or other liquid, and the juice pressed out for use as needed. The press is a ponderous affair, although not large, and apparently well fitted for the purpose. Close by is a pill machine for druggists in the old days used to make their own pills, before modern machinery began to produce pills at the rate of a million a minute, more or less. Other exhibits include mortars and pestles used more than half a century ago, and the most important exhibit of all to many, a prescription book, dated 1899, in which are copied 36,000 prescriptions, the druggist of that day being Charles Clarke, well remembered by older citizens. Prescriptions are there from Dr. Gibson, Dr. Clifford, Mr. Mitchell, Dr. Connell, of Kingston; Dr. Mathews and others. The exhibit is an eloquent exposition of the great advances made in the profession of pharmacy during the past half century.

All those in costume were made to march around the room and all lady suckers were supplied to each attendant.
Even the refreshments were of the Hallowe'en variety. Ernie's doughnuts to each one's capacity, with cheese and coffee were supplied by Sister Bessie Reid and Brother and Sister R. D. Adams; while apples were supplied by Brother Frank Wessel and pea pudding, cider and nuts supplied by Brother Anderson of Quinte Chapter. There was not much left.

Hepburn Assails Taxes in Ontario, Calls for Agriculture's Revival

Cost of Product Must Go Down, He Tells Rally Here

LEADER WELCOMED

Liberal Policy Retrenchment, Conservative Is Expenditure

With the declaration that the Conservative party was eating out of the public trough and maintaining out of the expenditure of public funds the greatest political machine in Ontario's history, Mitchell Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal leader, addressed a Liberal rally of West Hastings supporters at the city hall, Belleville, on Friday night and predicted that if he should come to power in Queen's Park "there is going to be the greatest housecleaning of those parasites who are eating out of the public trough."

"My heart and soul are sympathetic to the common people," he affirmed amid cheers. Explaining his line of argument, he said, "I believe that if we are going to make any progress we must settle the agricultural situation for the better. We have got to have a right-about-face on the question of expenditure and Premier Henry says his policy is expenditure. Ours is opposite."

Anadia Hydro.

As an example of the manner in which the party in power was carrying on affairs, he cited the deal with the development of the St. Lawrence, which he characterized bound to come, Ontario would be forced to purchase power by backing into the case, which in turn would be about two thirds of the cost of power which the Hydro Commission has bought under contracts for a term of forty years at fifteen dollars per horse power plus the cost of the transmission lines. "We shall have to pay for those in Ontario, including the purchases the Hydro made in half as much again in price as power will be imported from the St. Lawrence. Is that good business," he asked. "No".

Mr. Hepburn contended that the sale of power by Quebec companies to the Ontario Hydro Commission had been a terrible blow that it had been able to set up and sell power cheaper to industrial concerns into Quebec and so act to the detriment of Ontario industrially.

Ontario's Burden

"This is mighty tough on the people of Ontario, but it is going to be the burden for forty years."

Opening his address after a vociferous welcome on the part of the large audience which thronged the city hall's capacity to overflowing, the new Liberal leader in Ontario decided had disappointed in the Premier Bennett. Not long ago he was going up and down the country speaking of "I, I, I" and saying he was going to blast his way into the world's trade. Now he has stepped down and stated recently that "the evidence should be sought in the world. There is an old saying, remarked Mr. Hepburn that Providence helps those who help themselves. Since Mr Bennett has felt his inability to solve the problems, was it not advisable to hold such meetings as were being held at the present time for the discussion not so much of political questions as of economic issues?

The leader called the Hon. W. H. Price's appeal in Elgin County the other night for the protection of everything in the present world crisis except co-operation, "a herring across the trail" to prevent the searchlight of publicity playing upon what Mr. Hepburn designated the maladministration of the Government of which Mr. Price had been a member for many years.

Economic Explosion

"Now I do not see any cause to be pessimistic," remarked the gentleman for Elgin. "It is true we have economic troubles, and that the agricultural situation is serious and may require remedial measures, but above all this, I recall that in the beginning of this century economists were stating that in thirty or forty years the world would not be able to support the population, but just the opposite has happened. Science has come to the rescue in economic means of supply and demand."

President Hoover was held up as a man by Mr. Hepburn who, as all economists knew the world was off its balance promised the basic readjustment of commodities, wheat growers higher prices for their produce by imposition of tariffs and appealed to the selfishness of these classes. They supported him and they failed to give him support by overproduction under the principle of the law of supply that was collapse of values. The same thing, Mr. Hepburn saw in the action of the Canadian Wheat Pool which held wheat off the market.

Appeal To Selfishness

"This is a distinctly Tory policy, the appeal to selfishness in man. Conservatives had blamed the Liberals for what they termed too low prices in dairy products. Mr. Hepburn asked Premier Bennett not to go to the extent of abrogating the law of supply and demand. Any action he argued would throw the world and graded dairy products out.

"We had made a gradual progress from the dairy industry," remember said, "But a peculiar thing had happened. Cheese production was being stimulated, the demand being intensified by the U. S. tariff wall. As Canada is now producing enough she dealt with the matter foolishly. New England, a sure proof that Canada was getting better prices for butter than New Zealand was securing.

The Choice

"We had to choose between importing butter and exporting cheese. Our cheese demanded a two cents premium in the markets of the world and graded ninety-nine per cent No. 1 while butter was only about seventy-five per cent No. 1. It was sound economic policy to continue exporting cheese but the Conservative Government saw otherwise. When the treaty was abrogated Mr. Hepburn said that there would be a stimulation of the better trade for a time and there was and then cutting off of the New Zealand butter led New Zealand to seek a market for her cheese. The result was that cheese fell abroad. Canada was forced from cheesemaking into making of butter which was only 75 per cent No. 1, lost eighteen millions of cash to the benefit of New Zealand for which Canada bought only butter, the cheese producers lost their continuity, and unemployment was aggravated. Those were the results.

"What do you think of a man who leads us into a blind alley like that" asked Mr. Hepburn.

False Economies

The leader replying to the charge that attacking the Government today was not patriotic, said "Any man who dare not face the facts as I am trying to do and to place them before you is a moral coward."

"The only country that hit Britain below the belt when England went off the gold standard was Canada which fixed the pound at $4.86 for duty purposes," he said.

Usurpation of the common heritage of the people was charged by the leader, Canadian coal as a product of the rock to be in the hands of the people. Yet the gasoline taxes and the imposition of the dumping clause on gasoline mean that the people of Ontario are paying practically eighteen million a year taxes on gasoline. Coal was likewise taxed to the limit.

"What we are faced with is the need for reduction in the cost of production or we shall go down. We have either to restore prosperity to the farmer or we shall go down. We have to take world prices and we cannot sell on world markets because of our enormous overhead."

Ontario's Debt

Ontario it was which started the salary increases and the boosting of the salaries of the Hydro Commissioners in the midst of depression. This statement led the leader to refer to the debt of Ontario, which is the highest per head population debt, its own debt of half a billion, and the debts of the municipalities made him suggest that prosperity had been mortgaged and that mortgaged for all they were worth. "The debt of the country is increasing at such a rapid rate that few who calculate realize the extent of the burden that is being laid upon disillusioned into believing," he said, "that we enjoy prosperity. These obligations total nearly two billions while the assessed value of the property in Ontario is only about three billions. And will any one sell for the assessed value? he asked.

"We have seen the governments mortgaging our homes to the extent of even more than their selling value.

"We have in Ottawa a man who has unlimited power than ever given one man since Magna Carta," declared the leader. In last session Mr. Bennett assumed power under a new act which gave him authority to levy any taxation he likes. His power is much like that of a dictator. There is not a new law which may put a man in jail for no offence at all.

"The policy of Mr. King was to lower the tariff. Mr. Bennett has lowered the sales tax. But Mr. Bennett reserves to himself the power to cut into the income tax but when his rural followers revolt he will restore it. Mr. Bennett is a personal attack on him." Mr. Hepburn declared.

Liberal Policy Cure.

A cure for the evils Mr. Hepburn saw in the Liberal policy of relief from the burden of taxation. Though Ontario paid twenty-two millions three years ago for the unemployment and Unemployment's assists. Mr. Hepburn doubted if Premier Bennett would pay out millions of value therefrom. This difference of twenty millions means a difference of $200,000 to Hastings County, the leader said.

Dr. J. J. Wilson occupied the chair as president of the association. He introduced Mr. Hepburn as new leader and said the audience attended under unfavorable financial conditions because of certain principles which they kept undying in their hearts.

Dr. Faulkner felt a feeling growing among the people is not that a change of governments would be welcomed. He pointed to the gasoline tax and the duties on the Ontario Government which used and allows the use of city streets and bridges by the public without cost of any kind. Continuing he

W. Benson of Picton, Liberal candidate in Prince Edward Lennox, pointed to governmental expenditure right and left.

Fred Garbutt of Madoc called Mr. Hepburn the young crusader who talked. Mr. Garbutt principle was the man most likely to lead Ontario out of depression. "The governments are like motorcars; they don't run over you they stop you if they can. Everything is taxed" he declared amid laughter.

W. A. (Billy) Fraser, M.P., Trenton was given an enthusiastic reception, when he was called to address the assembly by the chairman. "A man in the audience wished to know, when he was going to get a job at the airport and the speaker answered him that he would have to interview Mr. Jack Kenny, Mr. Fraser remarked, that the people of Canada were a long way from general election. The present Henry of Ontario and Premier Bennett of Canada had strong Conservative majorities and they would stay in power" so long as it was possible. "If I was a politician and not interested in the welfare of the Dominion of Canada

Asks Removal From Curb

Montreal, Que., Oct. 17—The suspension of the common stock of Montreal Light Heat and Power Consolidated on the Montreal and Winnipeg Water and Power from trading on the New York Curb market was announced at the request officials of the Montreal Stock Exchange, it was learned today.

When England abandoned the gold standard, the bank exchange pegged Montreal Power common at 35 and Shawinigan at 35. Since then trading in both issues has been very light.

STOMACH TROUBLES

HOW frequently we hear people complain of "indigestion". And how seldom there is actually anything wrong with the digestive organs!

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali to neutralize the acids. But don't use any crude helps. Use what most doctors would use when they take your own doctor prescribes in his daily practice for just that condition.

The very best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. You will find nothing else so quick in effect, so harmless, so efficient. One teaspoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Results are immediate, with no harmful after effects to follow.

This pleasant way to alkalinize your system is so much better—so much quicker—than attempting to accomplish the same thing by diet! But you cannot do this with any form of magnesia. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the formula; it is the only genuine. Be sure you buy magnesia in perfect suspension. It is alkaline, its action is thorough, and there is nothing more soothing to an ailing stomach or more helpful to sluggish bowels. Druggists throughout the dominion have Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in 50c bottles.

The best way to whiten teeth is with Phillips' Dental Magnesia — the ideal dentifrice. Try it and see for yourself how white your teeth become. At drug stores everywhere.

CHANGES

The old steamer days on the Quinte and the Murray Canal are recalled by this projected sale of the Brockville which brought a bid of only forty dollars for this steamer.

In the days of the Brockville and its predecessors, the Merritt and the Annie Lake, and of the lake liners, which passed through the bay on their way up and down the lake, water outings were the chief form of amusement, far outstripping the buggy rides of the time in popularity.

But times have changed with the coming of the motor industry and road development. Boating days cannot be recovered as they were once known. The present generation would not care for excursions by the hundreds in fine steamers which once plied the lakes, but prefers the two-to-five parties which make up carloads. The old days were days of social intercourse on a perhaps grander scale than today when the capacity of a motor car is the limit of the capacity for enjoyment and draws lines outside of which the party cannot go.

But steamers are not the only casualties in the wake of the motorcar. Some villages have fallen in population and village customs are becoming so urbanized that they have quite lost their identity.

Now following the transportation development—what is to be?. No one can tell. The trend and the pace are set and there is no looking back to steamers and the isolation of other days. Will the opening up of airways make a great transformation in the habits and manners of the people? Probably not as much as the motorcar did.

Amusements were cheap in the good old heyday time of the bay steamers. Twenty-five cents paid for a ticket then that will not buy a gallon of gas now.

Then it meant a whole holiday for the individual, and a family could with a dollar or two easily have one of the memorable days of the year at the summer resort. Today the dollar won't get one very far on the journey, not to think of the overhead on the car.

But then wages are higher today and the quarter of twenty-five or forty years ago is today represented by a larger amount of money.

Other days, other manners.

TIES

The link between Belleville and places far north in Hastings is one of those intangible things which grow with the years. Belleville is more interested in events which take place in the north of Hastings than almost a personal interest in all the doings of the people of those parts, than it is in the people in Toronto or say Peterboro to the east, or for that matter Cobourg or Kingston or even Napanee.

The link is originally one of family and municipal connection, Belleville being on the front line and being the location of the county seat and as a consequence which was early radiated to build new homes. North Hastings has direct connection with Belleville and Trenton. Descendants of the northerners when they leave home most often come through Belleville or Trenton. On the other hand many Belleville people have farm and sporting interests in various parts of the county—these ties being not the least of all.

Yet even with all these facts does it not seem strange that the people of this town take more interest in a visitor from Bancroft and its district than they do in a big event or a serious accident in Toronto? Or where there is the accidental human interest which a bear or a wolf story arouses in town folk but that does not quite account for the preference of Belleville people or anything that pertains to Hastings or Prince Edward as well.

The social ties are close between Belleville and the adjacent counties for citizens know one another intimately, which is not the case with the people of even nearby towns.

The tie that binds us to the north and the south is this intangible one of sentiment to a very large degree. Belleville feels it is part of Hastings and Hastings feels that it is very closely allied to this town.

The sympathy of the people of Belleville thinks nothing of a jump of eighty to a hundred miles north but it does not jump so readily east or west. The thought of all seems to be along one channel.

Up in Toronto they are having a discussion as to why not frost is responsible for the enriching of the coloring of the leaves on the trees. Down here people know that the frost and rich colorings and falling leaves come in October. One thing is sure, whatever else is argued in Toronto—the reddening of the leaves does not come from frost. It is not a case of the hen or the egg question, "Did the hen produce the egg, or the egg the hen?"

THE WIND-FLOWER OR THE OAK
By Aline Michaelis

The wind-flower or the oak,
Which should life be,
The slow and patient growth
Of a great tree,
Or for a fleeting time
The grace and joy
Which Nature in the flower
Must employ?

The mighty oak sees life's
Bright pageant pass,
Sees man go down to dust
Like withered grass;
But never oak-tree yet
Knew Ecstasy
Like that which thrills your hour,
Anemone!

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN stopped a representative of this gaj paper to say: I want to congratulate The Ontario Intelligencer staff on the fine paper being turned out. There has been a very decided improvement all round in recent months and Belleville citizens have reason to be proud of the newspaper which represents the city, both at home and abroad. The excellence of the present paper fully justifies the consolidation of the two former papers into one." Highly quite a cheery note, eh, what? There is never any lack of critics who will tell you what you ask them, but it is a matter with the paper. It needs improving in every department, according to their generalities, but when you ask them to specify what improvement they fade away into a vague haze. Evidently the paper does not satisfy them, but does anything satisfy them?

GREED, GRAB AND CUT-THROAT COMPETITION are the principle causes of trade stagnation, otherwise known as depression, said a radio reverend, Sunday, who said that the Nazarene carpenter-preacher had denounced the same things in the faraway days when the moneychangers and hucksters had even invaded the temple.

"THE GOOD COMPANIONS", by J. P. Priestley, has been made into a play and shown in New York where it won instant favor and is creating for a long run. Another English play is also drawing crowded houses on Broadway, both plays having come from English actors. Both plays are clean and wholesome and furnish the answer to those theatrical investors of the Great White Way who contend that a play must be filthy to succeed on Broadway.

RIPE OLD AGE is an expression not heard so frequently today or more than the good die young now as is evidenced by every issue of every newspaper. Hence it is interesting to read in The Mail and Empire about a young lady who recalls a spanking administered to her ninety years ago. This incident was recalled on the young lady's ninety-sixth birthday, October 13, in talking to friends who called at her home in Toronto. Local interest is centred in the anniversary on account of the fact that the lady in question is Mrs. Sarah Beckett, a sister of the late Mrs. Thomas Bleasdell of Belleville, nee Louise Southworth, of Brockville), who died in 1917. Another sister, Mrs. James Kincaid, resides in Brockville. Mrs. Beckett has resided in Toronto more than half a century, and has an excellent memory of events of the long ago, including the event mentioned above when as a six-year-old girl, living in Smiths Falls, she was punished for some minor infraction of the family code. She was married in Brockville when twenty-three years old and remembers the building of the Grand Trunk Railway through that town. Mrs. Beckett is bright, active, and in full control of all her faculties. She reads the papers, goes to the movies, and enjoys she says, as happy a time as any in her life. How many of the young folks of today will reach the ninety-sixth milepost? Considering the pace of flaming youth of today as contrasted with the slow pace of their parents' youthful days in nine o'clock towns before the days of the automobile, the movie, the many late dances and all the distractions of modern times—many will start but few will finish beyond the half-century mark.

These are great days for those who have cures for depression. H. G. Wells says the need is for experts. Probably Wells does not mean the same experts as have been giving advice for two years that prosperity is just around the corner.

PREMIER IN NEW YORK

Hamilton, as the birthplace of the Canadian national movement, is particularly interested in the ceremony which takes place in New York, when Premier R. B. Bennett opened "the house of Canada" in that city. It is inspiring to think that this great patriotic movement has grown, serving as a link to bind Canadians wherever they may be in their native land, and to foster sound British ideals and traditions. Premier Bennett took the opportunity of telling an influential audience not only of Canadians who had attained distinction in the professional and business life of the United States, but also of prominent American citizens and representatives of European countries—something of the spirit of Canada in this time of universal depression, of her courage, her faith, her justified confidence in the future. "Our great institutions," he said, "built upon the foundations for long ago firmly mined to be sound, stand unshaken in the economic convulsions that has rocked the world." He referred to the pioneering instincts of the Canadian people, which had implanted into their descendants principles that prove invaluable in times of adversity. The youth of the nation is another thing to which importance in times of crisis, as is the silent natural wealth of the Dominion. But most important of all is the spirit of confidence which exists in herself; her acceptance of good times as a natural due, and of bad times as to be met with fortitude and prosperity."—Hamilton Spectator.

PRESERVES HIS FAITH

When Mr. Bennett is addressing a fitting audience he does not hesitate to Say that what this country must have, if it is to survive and succeed, is "the grace of God." There speaks the true statesman. In his youth. He has seen a great deal of life since he left the quiet fields of a religiously inspired young manhood where it was easy to believe that God always triumphs and Evil always loses in the end. He has seen buffs, been disappointed in men and events and reaped his triumphs—but he still has faith. Without faith we may talk of trade balances and the uncertainties of the future, of over-production and under-consumption, of tariffs and exchange and load railway adventures—all undoubtedly potent forces for good or evil—but the thing that matters in this Dominion still believes that, if our men and women continue to look to God in the fashion of the old-time gospel, the world's ills will be speedily and permanently cured.—Montreal Star.

ENTERTAINER GONE WRONG

These are great days for entertainers. Charlie Chaplin has been honobobing with Gandhi. Winston Churchill and Mussolini exchanged heads of Europe, while George Bernard Shaw has been playing to the high spots of Russia. Of the two, the Russian engagement was the one to stood the strain better. He still wears the smile that won't come off. But Shaw has the unique tendency to take himself and his mission seriously.

The world has travelled past the idea that a man who has made a success as an entertainer necessarily an authority in all other lines. It recognized that a man may be a wonder in some narrow channel of illustrialism and a dub in national or international affairs. In the same way an Irishman who has made his reputation in juggling English in his literary productions has no claim on the attention of the world when he leaves the realm of satire, with which he is familiar, to become a sociology agent for a new brand of economics.

When, in pursuit of his new job, Mr. Shaw applies the term "boobs" to those who do not agree with his views, he has his opponents at a disadvantage. That is a refinement of language in which they cannot meet this master of English. —Toronto Globe.

ARMEN HELP UNEMPLOYED

New York, Oct. 17—Supermen of the airways are pitin gthetr skill against the specter unemployment.

An example of what aviation can do to help this problem was furnished the metropolitan area tonowday and Sunday when a four-field air show will be held. Every cent of the gate receipts goes to the unemployment fund.

Adjusting the work week is one way to help, but it is also one necessary to keep sustained prosperity —William Green, president, American Federation of Labor.

Singing in the Rain

"When the sun shines again
And the clouds go PLOP-
PING by—these were the words sung to a catchy tune in a merry voice, which suddenly caught the attention of several people on Front Street this morning. The singer could not be seen as he was working on a store, which is being remodeled and he was hidden from view, but that he was happy was beyond question. On went the song and great emphasis was made on the words "PLOPPING BY." Suddenly the song stopped in the middle of the line and the unseen singer was heard to yell. Hey, Bill the rain is PLOPPING BY! Suddenly the song stopped in the middle of the line and the unseen singer was heard to yell. Hey, Bill the rain is PLOPPING BY! Suddenly the song stopped in the middle of the line and the unseen singer was heard to yell. Hey, Bill come on over here.' No doubt the song was resumed after he had consulted with Bill. The singer had work to do and was happy in doing it. If he retains this happy spirit and does a good job of the work he gets to do, he will have more than but that the clouds will eventually make way for SUNSHINE and sunshine for him and the Maggie he may have now or hopes to have at some time in the future.

MEMORIAL TO DEFEATED FOE

Yorktown Virginia, Erects Memorial To Lord Cornwallis

Yorktown, Va., Oct. 17—A fourday observance of the battle which made existence of United States possible opened here Friday with dedication of a monument to the defeated British commander, Lord Cornwallis, and the reception of Marshal Henri Petain, of France, as high watermarks in a day of historical events and pageantry.

Lord Cornwallis, descendant of the English lord who surrendered at the battle of Yorktown, responded to Virginia's dedication of a memorial to his ancestor, with the statement that "we, too, behind peace lit in front, we hope, for evermore."

"Friends have sent me press clippings intimating that I might find some delicacy in appearing here today," Lord Cornwallis said. "I assure you that such delicacy never crossed my mind.

"Fifty-eight hours after Yorktown, General Washington entertained Lord Cornwallis and from that moment all animosity was forgotten."

"I feel that it would be agreeable to him as it is delightful to me that a member of the family can be here today."

Dedication of the bust of Lord Cornwallis at York Hall, home of Thomas Nelson, war governor of Virginia and Cornwallis headquarters at Yorktown, officially opened the four-day celebration of the sesqui-centennial of the battle that ended the revolution.

And as the British flag was drawn aside to reveal the bronze bust, Major Rochambeau, great grandson by adoption of the French officer who fought with Washington at Yorktown, whirled and came to a full salute.

Governor Pollard presided at the dedication ceremony, while Ashton Dovell, chairman of the Virginia Yorktown sesqui-centennial commission, gave the adress.

Radio Owners Now Sure of Good Results

The uncertainty as to whether tubes in the home radio set are giving of their best may be quickly ended by the introduction of the "Acremeter" to Belleville by the Bennett-Warner Store, Front Street.

Up to the present time the method of testing tubes has been more or less in the nature of guess work. Now, with the Acremeter, guess work is absolutely eliminated, and the instrument, simple to human in its scope, immediately tells whether a tube is perfect or faulty —and if the latter, it tells just what the fault is.

The tube is placed in position on the instrument and if the filament is intact a lighted neon glows to instantly indicates clear. Should there be other defect in the electrodes of the tube, the nature is immediately indicated by neon lights denoting the exact trouble.

For the right working of a radio it is necessary that all the tubes should not only be perfect themselves, but that they should act in the same manner with the others tubes in the set. This again is clearly indicated in the Acremeter. "We do not have to tell you. The instruments tells you," is the company's terse radio manager in announcing that the instruments is now on display of every radio owner in Belleville, irrespective of where the radio was purchased. Owners are invited to bring their sets to the Bennett-Warner radio store, 211 Front St., and they will be tested free of charge and without any solicitation.

By the use of the Acremeter the tubes of a radio set may be tested on all points affecting their efficiency, and if any of the tubes that obtained may be balanced as a group to give the nearest to perfection possible with any set.

Similar devices have been developed in laboratories but never has one practical for everyday use by persons not technical experts been marketed until the Acremeter appeared.

The principal advantage of the device, according to those who have seen it in operation, is that the owner may watch the testing and see the flaws picked out, thus being able to place the tubes to best advantage in his set.

To aid the safe transportation of the tubes, the Stewart Warner Store have provided padded containers for this purpose and owners who desire to have the tubes of their sets tested are requested to call at the store and secure one of these containers free, before bringing the tubes in.

Suit For $25,000 Taken From Jury Dismissed With Costs

Stratford, Ont., Oct. 17 — The $25,000 damage suit, which George Smith, Kitchener, brought against Alfred Pebble of Kitchener was taken from the jury yesterday by Mr. Justice Kelley, after hearing for five days evidence in the case. Justice Kelley found that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant the case going to the jury and dismissed the action with costs.

The suit against Pebble was the result of certain transactions which Smith and McGarry had in buying cattle to be pastured on McGory's pastures.

Cardiff, Wales, Oct. 17—(AP)—Three thousand jobless men gathered in the public square here today to protest cuts in the Dole and there was hard fighting when police with drawn clubs directed the mob to disperse.

THE NATIONAL HERO OF THE MOMENT OUTSHINES EVEN AN "ALGER" CHARACTER

The almost exclusive topic of conversation in baseball circles is Johnny Martin, the most glamorous world series hero since the classic began 28 years ago. In the dotted years, have flashed brilliantly for one or two games or have placed some spectacular play upon the records so that their memories live for this year or that. But Martin has been the mighty man in every game played. The strangest feature of it all, in the baseball career of Martin, is that he had to "steal" his way into the big league. The cards, who picked him up in 1924, thought so little of him that when they ordered him to report at their 1925 training camp, somebody forgot to send him a ticket or money. Martin was suffering from a bit of depression at the time and so, to get to camp, he had to ride freights or the brake beams of locomotives. His greatest premonition of his future, when arriving wardrobe consisted of the clothes he was wearing. Thus the saga of Johnny Martin not merely rivals but in its eclipses any story ever penned by the immortal Horatio Alger. Connie Mack paid this tribute to the hero of the series after his team had lost the fifth game of the series: "It looks as if we would have to kidnap Pepper Martin. He has hammered out every pitcher. They have tried to fool him with everything they have, but it has made no difference. He has hit everything. I never have seen such a world series player whom you absolutely could not stop."

Surprise Motion Passes Reichstag After Fascist Bolt

BRUENING UPHELD

Berlin, Oct. 17—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening rallied the cabinet's strength in the Reichstag yesterday and smashed a determined attack by Fascist, Nationalists and Communists who are seeking to overthrow the government.

The Communists, however, took advantage of the fact that the Fascist-Nationalist bloc had indignantly stormed out of the chamber to register a vote of confidence in the government, and pushed through a motion interrupting construction work on the second German "pocket battleship." The vote was 315 to 107.

The pocket battleship issue, which has had grave international repercussions in the last year, has been determinedly supported by the Nationalistic parties and the Government has agreed to proceed construction because it desired support of certain "right wing" factions. The struggle over the warships had become a bitter contest between the socialists, who supported the Communist motion, and the Conservatives who had aroused unofficial French protests against increase of German armaments.

By passage of the Communist motion the Reichstag voted to devote approximately 10,800,000 marks (about $2,750,000) which was appropriated for the warship, to feeding children of the poor.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.,) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Tarzan was greatly welcomed when they all assembled at the camp. Overwhelming him with gratitude, they voiced their surprise and pleasure at seeing their jungle friend again. Long into the night they talked, asking questions of Tarzan and relieving those days beside the African wild and what there held them.

Then the conversation turned to the ill-fated pirates' chest. Tarzan, turning to Jane's father, said: "Your treasure has been found, sir." "The," he corrected, "since they had seen it last. Great was their amazement, and greater when Tarzan produced the letter of credit and gave it to Jane.

Tarzan saying good night asked the professor to recite the burial from the African cabin. "Were all three human skeletons?" Jane's father eyed him narrowly. "No," he replied. "The smallest one — that found in the crib—was the skeleton of an anthropoid ape." Thank you," said Tarzan quietly. Dawn was breaking.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

By TOM GILL

They stood outside the church in the blinding sunshine of early afternoon. The quiet, dusty, drowsy hum of bees, the same deep, unbroken peace and the glittering sun on baked adobe walls. The shadows had lengthened a little. The horses still dozed beneath the shadow of a mimosa. Nothing had changed, except for Mary, who had found happiness. They had found each other.

And, hold silent by its wonder, they walked down the worn steps of the church and across to where the girl's car stood.

She seated herself behind the wheel, and again they drove slowly out of Verdi and to the edge of the mesa, where, by some tacit consent, they stopped. At the little rocky turn just where the road begins to wind downward. For a time they looked down across the ranches dotted valley stretching south to where the blue shadows were mingled in the rising heat waves. Far below them, cool and green, lay a tarnished ribbon, and along its banks the little white and green ranches loomed with spots of green the tawny desert sands. As they watched shadows crept over. Again sunlight the same thought came to both, but neither knew. Then, there were homes and children. Men were working at their farms and dreams, sowing and harvesting, loving and begetting, living out their years in him and Mary, and laughter. At last Ted spoke:

"These people are your people and mine, living on both sides of that stream, with their homes and their flocks. I want them to be part of my life too. I want to take my home here in the border country—to help build—to make a home for both of us and to end forever this hate and fear and distrust.

She smiled, but the smile was hardly a happy one.

"I know. And I know what that fight is going to mean for both of us. It is going to mean sorrow and the tearing of souls. And the hurting of people I love. It is going to mean sorrow in my souls and perhaps sorrow for me."

For answer he kissed her and raised his arm across the land that lay like a colored toy map unrolled before them. And his fingers then traced out the small ranches dotted as far as they could see back toward the foothills.

"These were once my father's people, and their enemies are my father's enemies and mine. Long before I was born, they started out to make a home here and the cattle-land was theirs, robbed him, sent him back to Colorado beaten and defeated. I think I must have understood my mother's last days. I haven't real bitterness against your uncle, but realize against the thing he stands for, and that I hate. And you hate it. You must. I have seen how you love these people, and I understand it when you speak of 'your people' and I have seen how they love you. I would not have you changed in any way, Adela, for to me you are flawless and perfect. Neither would I bring any shadow of pain into your eyes. and yet—

"And so if you have your work to do, and that work will be in open conflict with the things my uncle has built up."

He nodded. Then he smiled and looked at the sun, already in the west. "There are some things that must not be delayed," he said, "and we still have time for you to drive back out to the hacienda."

"What for?"

"To tell your uncle that we love each other."

Quickly she shook her head. "But Ted, you've need of telling him that yet. And when the time comes you had better let me tell him."

"The time has already come." Ted's jaw was set, as though it had happened last night. I want Paco Morales to learn from my lips that I love you and that before you leave all Mexico can keep us apart. If it is to be war, let it be war. But I want to offer him peace and friendship for the last time. And Jito as well."

In utter amazement the girl looked up at him. "Do you know what Jito will do when he learns I love you?"

Ted smiled. "He will probably kill me, but that is unimportant. Rodolkin he carries at his waist. That too, will have to be faced. For, Adela, I love you darling. I have got to be gone through and that we had better go and meet it now! After all, what has happened? Two people have met in love on their way glorious day, and have resolved to belong to each other as long as they live, and I want everyone to know it. For I'm proud and very happy and—" Suddenly across the street he heard her—"and utterly unworthy. But first of all I want to tell your uncle myself. So goad on this iron musician."

Doubtfully she shook her head, then in silence released the brake, "You may be right, my lover," she said, as they started, but again she shook her head over a sentence that needed no completion.

Those early days through the April desert sped by all too quickly. They found themselves dreading the morning's end, for in it lay their life-must too soon enter into the common perils, fortunes, world danger, and pride, jealousy and the branch for power, all to engage to take away some of the luster and freshness of this new-found love. And it may have been because of these thoughts that Ted turned just before the car stopped at the last hacienda gate and, taking her face between his hands, kissed her almost hungrily down at her. Then, after a long moment, he spoke.

"Adela, what lies ahead of us from this moment on no one can tell. There may be sorrow and danger and perhaps tragedy itself lurking there. We cannot say. But in this one thing we can be sure—our love. Let nothing come to harm that. Let nothing lessen it or make it doubt. We must always trust, whatever comes. If we hold this love of ours apart from the world, secure in our faith of each other, nothing can harm us."

And the girl, smiling up at him, answered: "Nothing can harm us in the world can touch my love for you. I am yours, Ted, and I will ever go out with you now, this moment into the desert forever. Our lives belong to each other, and all the world cannot change it."

Then he bent and kissed her, and together they went inside.

Ted watched the tall figure of Morales rise from behind his desk, and for the moment forgot Jito in the child that a menacing presence in spite of the Spaniard's cordial smile. Beneath that friendly, suave personality there seemed for an instant to be a cold, hard enmity of a killer. Ted could not describe it and never afterward could be sure that it was more than the tension of high-pitched nerves. But behind the tall figure so inevitably approaching there seemed to lie the waiting beast of prey.

"Any occasion that brings you to us is happy one," the old man was saying, and he offered a chair and cigarettes.

"I hope, after I tell you all you won't think this occasion more unhappy than happy," Ted replied.

A little flicker passed over Morales's eyes. "How should that be?"

Ted plunged. "Senor Morales, we Americans are blunt, and I—I—if no other way to say what I must say except simply and frankly."

"Be as blunt as you please."

"I love Adela. We love each other. I have come to tell you that."

Morales's lips trembled, and the slender hand that held his cigarette closed ever so little. His black eyes swept slowly from Radcliffe's face, and rested on Adela.

"Is it true, chica?" he asked softly.

Coming forward Adela nodded in silence, then, thinking deeply upon him, laid her cheek against the old man's knee and so they sat for a moment.

Presently his hand lightly brushed her hair. "So you love him, chiquita?" he asked in a voice that sounded strangely tender.

The girl laid her lips against his hand. "More than anything in life," she answered.

The old man sighed, then slowly he smiled. "When one loves." he said, "there is little to add, except, that I envy you both. Yet there is much to be said between us." He looked across at Ted. "You senor, I want above all else that this Adela of mine shall be happy. A few years more and I shall be gone the way of my ancestors—wherever old ranchers go after the last rodeo. I will sleep better to know that Adela is in good hands.

"Frankly, for her I would have chosen differently, but no one can direct the course of love. Today I neither consent nor forbid. There is much to think of, much for Adela and myself to talk of. So I say only that no one is to know of this yet. And if you are to see each other, senor, as one does, on promise. Let there be no talk of marriage for a time. I must speak to Don Bob and I must consider many things. We cannot ignore that Adela is one of the wealthiest girls in all Mexico."

Ted's face flushed. "Will you believe me when I say I wish Adela had-not a penny?"

The other man's eyebrows raised a little. "Ah, these mummers! You Americans! And you accuse us Latins of being sentimental. Believe me, my son, that the passion of peon and of fertile acres will be no hindrance to your happiness in the days to come."

"I understand—" Ted hesitated. "There is one thing more to tell you, and at last I am not coming with snitrery empty hands. This morning Bob had a wire from Washington appointing me secretary of the Esperanza property."

Morales smiled. "Esperanza! That is fine."

"My father bought it years ago from Mexico. Before he died it was transferred to me. Bob and Jito will do when he learns I love Adela?"

A tremor shook Morales. Quickly he turned, his eyes toward the window, and in his eyes the fury flamed. Through long minutes he looked out. Then very slowly and with he turned he still wore that courtly, kindly smile. "I will tell Don Carlos" was a man of foresight," he smiled. "And yet there have been happenings properly brings quick misfortune. But we will talk of all these things later."

He rose and, lifting Adela, kissed her on the forehead. "My child!" For a moment he seemed about to say something more, but turned abruptly and left the room.

The army folded about the slender girl, as if some world crisis like this, just like this, forever."

Ted drew her back with a little tremulous laugh. "Lover of mine, don't you worry very much, and the miracle is that uncle is not against us. We'll make Aunt Clara give us dinner."

His lips touched her hair. "Dearest, I'm afraid—I'm almost afraid."

CHEVALIER CAPTIVATES FANS WITH LATEST HIT

You don't know Maurice Chevalier until you've seen "The Smiling Lieutenant."

Especially audience's greeted both performances last night, with Maurice's gay love-making, his delicious comedy singing raising a riot of laughs and tender emotion in the eyes and hearts of his audience.

"The Smiling Lieutenant" has the whole of Maurice Chevalier bound up in a single joyous role. His captivating personality, his sly and wicked love-making, his mischievous grins, are projected at full force from the screen in "The Smiling Lieutenant."

The picture is another of those delicious Ernst Lubitsch productions but, unlike "The Love Parade", it is real, down-to-earth comedy and romance dealing with a smart and carefree soldier whose smile wins him the heart of two women. It has delicious comedy moments interspersed with tense emotional scenes. Claudette Colbert and Miriam Hopkins are the unenviable who turn Chevalier's head and heart.

Charlie Ruggles characterization is an asset to the picture which, in less brilliant circumstances, would make a show all his own.

But, perhaps the outstanding feature of the show are Chevalier's songs, songs which, put across in Chevalier's inimitable style, send the audiences out lilting and humming. Remember "Dear Love," "That's the Army", "Jazz Up Your Lingerie" are tuneful lyrics which are recalled with a smile. And yet, "The Smiling Lieutenant" is not all musical stage scene. The songs are Chevalier's, they fit naturally into the story and help up the action.

An entertaining array of short offerings preceded the feature attraction.

The entire program will be repeated again tonight, and is well worth seeing.

Marion Davies discovered him and assigned a part for him in "Peg o' My Heart." His first picture. He has excellent opportunities in "Devil and the Deep," which is very worthwhile.

Jack Holt's portrait of fighting, loving Tim is one of his greatest Richard Cromwell, with his clear voice, is perfect role of the gold-digger wife. The supporting cast also includes a "Dangerous Trails" an episode of "Adventures in Africa."

Margaret Adams attracted the attention of Paramount officials when she played in a musical comedy entitled "Three Little Girls." This is the first time she has appeared in a picture drama.

National and Provincial Parks in Canada, covering nearly 25,000 square miles, are areas withdrawn from exploitation and settlement to preserve their virgin beauty and wildness for purposes of pleasure and recreation.

"FATIGUE?

I just postpone it!"

"No, I don't have nerves. You can't have them, and hold this sort of position. My head used to throb around three o'clock, and certain days, of course, were worse than others.

"Then I learned to rely on Aspirin."

"The sure cure for any headache is real. But sometimes we must. It is then that's when Aspirin saves the day. Two tablets, and the nagging pain is gone until you are home. And since you are comfortable the pain seldom returns!

"Keep Aspirin handy. Don't put it away, or put off taking it. Fighting a headache to finish the day may be heroic, but it is a little foolish. So is sacrificing a night's sleep because you've an annoying cold, or irritated throat, or grumbling tooth, neuralgia, insistent ache. They always relieve. They don't depress the heart, and may be taken freely. That is medical opinion. It has established by the last twenty years of medical practice.

The only caution to be observed is when you are buying Aspirin. Don't take a substitute because it will not act the same. Aspirin is made in Canada.

Boy's Curiosity Aid to Science

Winnipeg, Man. (C.P.)—How a boy's curiosity led to the discovery of remains of early mammals in the Province of Saskatchewan is described in a special despatch to the Manitoba Free Press from Saskatoon, large fossil bones and bone pieces in about four feet in length. A thigh bone is enormously thick and of inches in length. The rounded knob at the end of it, which fits into the socket, is seven inches in diameter.

"The animal was found in waterdeposited clay, and apparently rested there the glacial period, says Professor F. H. Sutcliffe, of the department of Geology, as the outcrop of the boy's discovery. The boy who has thus come into the spotlight is Harlan Ewing, nine years of age.

"The first indication of this find of the most complete skeleton of an animal of the elephant family that once roamed the plains of Saskatchewan, was due to the curiosity of a small boy, Harlan Ewing, aged nine years, who became interested in what turned out to be a tooth nearly as big as a man's head. He had heard some stories about Indian paintings and cut out a piece large piece uncovered by the grader to find if it was a pemmican. In the last 40 years.

"Broken fragments of the jaw had been carried up on to the grade where the curve at the corner of the new No. 44 highway was made and another boy discovered that what he had taken to be a stone was also a tooth. Farmers of the district have also come to look for the remainder of the animal. The tusks have been found, but few pieces in about four feet in length. A thigh bone is enormously thick and of inches in length. The rounded knob at the end of it, which fits into the socket, is seven inches in diameter.

"The animal was found in waterdeposited clay, and apparently rested there the glacial period, says Professor F. H. Sutcliffe, of the department of Geology, as the outcrop of the boy's discovery. The boy who has thus come into the spotlight is Harlan Ewing, nine years of age.

THE DUMB PRINTER

Fellow Citizens:
They tell about a printer who was so dumb that he had to get someone to help him make a mistake. Had none of the dumbness ever known needed no assistance whatever. It was no trick at all for the printer's fury to leap, the wrong letter to be picked up and put in the wrong street, without any help.

I make no exception of myself. I decided long ago that everything had to be done twice, the first time being merely to work up to the height of pipe the first time. The time who knows better than I how lighter was pretty smart. He fixed it so it would light the second time, not the first.

And so, I say he not discouraged. I never knew a widow who was shy. She just as ready to take a second chance. The very fact that the marriage service says "for better or for worse" proves it is an even proposition. As a matter of fact, the preacher ought to give us odds.

Do not be downhearted. The man who makes too high a bid will lose the first time, but next time he'll bid too low and get the job. Then after awhile, he will bid about right and get the job once and lose all the bad ones. Most of the time we make money, make mistakes first.

When I say only, whenever the farmers needed rain we got up a picnic. If I didn't like the plumbing business so much I'd go back to Wall Street. All I would have to do to make a killing now would be to sell it, and all I wouldn't have to do is notice it. That would be to buy it.

Sometimes I think Chauncey Depew if he had ever made a serious mistake. Well, he said, "I was elected the eighth interest in the American Telegraph and Telephone Co. in 1910." Edison made 999 mistakes on one invention. The 1000th time he was right. When you make mistakes, you're still 999 ahead of Edison.

While we admit having made mistakes they were not charged up to our patrons' account as in our public. The patron pays, may be the policy in some, but not in business done with The Little Plumber. Make no mistake about the winter coming. It will be here with bells on before you know it. So your next insurance is in good working order and ready to function economically. Your health, life and foot. Call us the heating expert before the cold weather comes.

Unmistakably Yours,
SANN BOSSE,

TORY LEADER IS C. E. GAULT

Is First English Protestant To Head Quebec Party

Montreal, Oct. 17.—C. E. Gault, Conservative member of the Legislature for St. George, Montreal, since 1907, on Friday evening, was selected leader of His Majesty's loyal Opposition in the Quebec Legislative Assembly at a meeting of the 11 Conservative M.P.s who were elected in the general elections of Aug. 24 last.

Mr. Gault replaces in this position Camillien Houde, leader of the Provincial Conservative party, who having no seat in the House is unable to guide the parliamentary party.

The selection of Mr. Gault was unanimous, it was stated after the meeting.

The appointment of Mr. Gault marks the first time since the province was built was created by Confederation in 1867 that an English Protestant has been chosen to lead one of the two historic parties in the popular house. Mr. Gault for years has been one of the most highly respected members of the Legislature, and was a list of personal victories in St. George's division stretching back over 30 years. In the election of 1927 he was defeated Hon. Gordon Scott, Premier A. A. Taschereau's attorney and official Treasurer.

Mr. Gault has been an infrequent speaker in the House. As leader of the opposition, an official position carrying a salary of $5,000 yearly, he may be expected to be heard more often. He has a good understanding of the French language, though it was never sought to show his ability as a linguist by speeches in the tongue, and presumably will continue to speak his mother tongue in the House, thus emphasizing the notable event of the election of an English leader in the Quebec Legislature.

No Trace Found Of Japanese Ship

San Francisco, Calif., Oct. 17.—The liner President Jefferson, steaming at 16.6 knots from the Japanese freighter Yonan Maru, Friday night without trace that no trace of the freighter had been found in the last reported position of the Japanese ship.

Early Friday the Yonan Maru, carrying a crew of 40 to 50, reported she was sinking in the stormy North Pacific. The President Jefferson reached the position at 2 a.m. Saturday but after an hour's search in Visibility was poor due to rain, but high seas were running.

Captain Gerdine ordered the Jefferson at 3.30 p.m., said the search was still on.

The Jefferson, whose passengers include Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, radioed that it would continue her search for the Japanese ship and any lifeboats or rafts may have launched.

The Yonan Maru did not reveal the cause of her difficulties. She was carrying a lumber cargo to Shanghai, having left Coos Bay, Ore., September 30. She indicated she had lost her radio mast.

"We are now sinking. Come quickly," the 7154 ton liner radioed shortly before 8 a.m. No further messages were intercepted so far as coast radio stations could learn.

"Our stern deck" is same horizontal with sea, and we are waist deep in water," was a message intercepted a little after 4 a.m.

Bomb in Man's Pocket in Theatre

Chicago, Oct. 17.—More than 1,000 persons in the downtown side moving picture theatre were thrown into a panic last night, when a bomb exploded almost in the centre of the place. Police said the bomb was in a coat pocket of Peter Mooney, 31. Mooney was injured seriously.

The only other injury reported was that of a patron unidentified city fireman who extinguished a fire which followed the explosion.

19 IN SMALL SEDAN

Quincy, Ill., Oct. 17.—The sardine industry should sign up Samuel Venturi of South Braintree. He was fined $10 in Quincy district court for cramming 19 in a small sedan in which and on which were 18 passengers. Patrolman John P. Burke of Braintree said he counted 'em.

Divorce for "Just Cause"

Madrid, Oct. 17 (AP)—A provision permitting the granting of divorce to either men or women for "just cause" was incorporated in the new Spanish constitution by decree.

The national assembly by a vote of 168 to 153 thus overthrew laws against divorce which had been in effect for centuries and placed women on an equal footing with men in the regulation of marriage relations. The grounds for a decree were not specified further.

Catholic Deputies, who have boycotted the assembly because of its religious legislation, described the measure as "another indication of the attempt of leftists to revive Iconise Spanish life entirely."

Premier Manuel Portelico Vedeschinal said the status of the church was the gravest in the history of the republic, but predicted no immediate upheaval in the relations between the Vatican and Spain.

Religious liberty Minister Alejandro Lerroux was advanced by the leader of the radical Republican party as the foundation for Premier Portelico Manuel Alanar in presidential election proceedings Wednesday, to follow the enactment of the constitution.

His Talk To Her Costs City $80

Windsor, Oct. 17.—The suites of Police Magistrate Alexander of Windsor about $80, the City Council has decided, and all because of long distance activities.

One member of the city hall staff just had to talk to a friend in Detroit, and when she used the city hall telephone more than twenty minutes and the toll was $35.

Glance From Window Saves Man in Garage

Toronto, Oct. 17.—A casual glance out of his window by George Barton yesterday saved the life of Albert Dunham. Seeing fumes filtering from the garage, Barton went to investigate and found the prostrate body of Dunham beneath the car. Carbon monoxide fumes had rendered him unconscious. First aid was hastily applied and Dunham was taken to hospital where it was announced he would recover.

Death of Edison May Occur Today

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 17.—Although his personal physician issued a statement that the emergency during the night, Thomas A. Edison's condition has become so critical that the end may come at any last night against any unnecessary disturbance during the hours when the famous inventor should die were ordered.

Police surrounded Glenmont the home in Llewellyn Park where Edison has lived for the last 40 years. Only relatives and reporters were permitted to the estate.

Mrs. Edison has borne up well under the ordeal of weeks of anxious waiting, but late yesterday she consented to place herself under the care of Dr. Howe.

Servants of the family refused to let their names be used for publication while they were off duty, but it has been learned that they will employ for many years and have been with the family.

The servants refused to give up hope. All were clustered in little groups sadly waiting.

On the estate were the children of Edison's daughter, Mrs. Theodore Sullwell in 1872. Thomas Alva Edison, Jr., of West Orange, Mrs. Marion Estelle Oser, of Norfolk; Mrs. William Leslie Edison, of Bloomington, Ill., and Charles Edison, Jr., of Edison Industries, Inc., of West Orange. Also present were John Eyre Edison and her husband, Madeleine Edison and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison.

DAIRY PLANT DESTROYED

Lindsay, Oct. 17.—A mysterious fire destroyed the plant of the East Emily Dairy Company, formerly known as the East Emily Cheese Factory. The flames started in the east end of the frame structure and quickly swept through it. A frame stable also was burned.

A phonograph record capable of playing continuously for half an hour is now on the market.

The Pope announced dedication of the Christ the King Festival of Mass on October 25 to Spanish cause, pleading with God to cease persecution, and inviting the faithful to prayer.

Boy Scout Activities

328 Ontario Rover Scouts and leaders attended the 3rd Provincial Rover Moot at London over the Thanksgiving week-end.

On his own initiative a New South Wales Boy Scout stood guard all night lantern in hand, to warn motorists of a fallen high tension cable.

Among the flags hanging in the famous Chapel of Youth of St. Giles Cathedral, Edinburgh, is that of St. Giles' Church Boy Scout Troop, Winnipeg. The two troops exchanged.

Young Men, Public Service

Not financial success, but public service by young men was the chief subject discussed by 300 Ontario Rover Scouts at the 3rd Provincial Rover Moot held at London over Thanksgiving week-end.

A new permanent home for headquarters of the Boy Scouts Association at Ottawa has been made possible by a legacy of the late Col. R. W. Leonard of St. Catharines, Ont. The headquarters is located near the Victoria Memorial Museum.

Boy Population Census

Another census is being taken this month. It will show the world's population of active Boy Scouts and leaders. In 1930, the total was reported at 2,030,000. This does not include several million who have taken training and passed from the Movement.

Kipling Spins Boys Yarn

A story told by Rudyard Kipling "in person" was an honour enjoyed by Boy Scouts camping this summer near the Kipling home at Burwash.

The story, which was given the typical Kipling title, "The Haunted Dormitory," described the disappearance of doves from a large aviecot and strange noises heard at night. The servants became so frightened that they gave notice. The haunting was investigated, and the ghost discovered in an old owl, who had made his home in the cot and dined off its occupants at his leisure. He snored in his sleep, which explained the strange noises.

Clergymen Study Scouting

Clergymen of every church including the Mormon, attended the 1931 provincial training camps for Scout masters. The largest group, 17 Anglican clergymen and student missionaries, attended the North Saskatchewan camp in Prince Albert National Park.

Some 10,000 Girl Guides and Boy Scouts and a congregation of 40,000 persons of all denominations took part in a Scout-Guide, Sunday Thanksgiving Service at the Melbourne Cricket Grounds during the recent visit of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell to Australia.

Australian Youth Parades

According to "The Melbourne Age," Australia, a pageant given by some 17,000 Boy Scouts and Girl Guides in welcoming Lord and Lady Baden-Powell was the most impressive spectacle ever witnessed on the famous Melbourne Cricket Grounds. The pageant was witnessed by 50,000 spectators.

A salute to mark the assembling there in 1929, for the World Scout Jamboree, of 53,000 boys from 48 countries, was recently unveiled by Lord Hampton at Arrowe Park, Birkenhead.

Fire Without Matches

When a party of the 24-hour cross-country hike, Scoutmasters at a Maritime training camp were deprived of matches and given a piece of steel and flint, failing to make their cooking fires Indian fashion. One group broke its cooking pot and had cold meals. The others succeeded. They included several middle-aged clergymen.

Last Christmas a small army of Boy Scouts operated 8,7 repair shops in 147 towns and cities stretching across the Dominion from Sydney, N.S., to Victoria and Prince Rupert, B.C. The boys, with the assistance of their Girl Guide sisters, played Santa Claus to some 12,000 kiddies who otherwise would have found empty stockings on Christmas morning. Over 4,000 children on farms were taken care of by mail. A number of Scout groups are already collecting and repairing discarded toys, dolls and books for their 1931 toy shops.

NO INTENTION OF WAR

Tokyo, Oct. 16 (AP)—Asserting that Japan has absolutely no intention of declaring war upon China', a spokesman for the Tokyo government today explained his country's attitude in making an issue of efforts to invoke the Kellogg pact at Geneva.

The spokesman said Japan's attitude was in no way directed at United States itself and reiterated the contention that the Kellogg pact applied to a situation involving war or danger of war.

The history and development of the British air routes from the period of pioneer flights in the present time is told by Major A.E. W. Salt in "Imperial Air Routes." The future of air transport as a means of commerce and communication is emphasized throughout the book and by Air Vice-Marshal Sir Sefton Brancker, Director of Civil Aviation in his introduction when he states "Our efficiency in the air will be one of the most important factors in the preservation of the great commonwealth of British nations." The maps of the Imperial air routes are included in the volume.

The character and personality of the "Autocrat of all the Russias" is revealed by Princess Catherine Radziwill in her life of "Nicholas II, the last of the Tzars." The book is the story of the unfortunate sovereign's life as shown in his diaries and letters to his wife. Through their medium, the Tzar appears as a man of qualities and defects leaving the reader to form his own judgment unbiased by opinions of the biographer. The author applies the following quotation to Nicholas II "he had searched for God, and failed to find it, done evil without wanting it and terribly expiated his numerous and awful mistakes."

A critical study of that renowned Russian author is given by William Gerhardi in his book "Anton Chehov." Much of the success of Chehov's work in English speaking countries is attributed to Mrs. Garnett who translated them. Mr. Gerhardi shows that the tone of Chehov's work is not pessimistic. He explains that a pessimistic attitude is a sign of decadence or proportion, while Chehov showed life in a series of farewells, sad, but inevitable.

The story of the Indian who smoked pipe of peace with every president of the United States since Lincoln is told in "We Indians" the passing of a great race" by Big Chief White Horse Eagle. These recollections of the last of the Great Chiefs were told to Edgar von Schmidt-Pauli by the head of the Osage tribe who is still alive at the age of one hundred and eight. His book gives a clear account of the life, customs and religion of his tribe since pioneer days. Stories of celebrated chiefs and of Brigham Young, Buffalo Bill and Abraham Lincoln and other famous people add to the interest of the book. An historical résumé of American history since his birth in 1863 is given from the viewpoint of an Indian. The book concludes with a lament for the tragedy of the Redskins due to the discovery of gold in their reservations in Colorado and California.

Botanic Gardens Are Dissolved

London, Eng., (C.P.) — The Royal Botanic Gardens in Regent's Park have ceased to be Royal Botanic. For nearly 100 years these Gardens, which adjoin the Zoological Gardens, have furnished a pleasant place of refreshment in the heart of London. In spite of determined efforts it has been found impossible to wake the concern pay the bills of the Royal Botanic Society that the Gardens should be open to public use next April.

Poor prices have been secured at the auction of the Society's possessions; for many valuable plants no bids at all were received. Giant palms, said to be worth $250 each, remained with the auctioneer.

One of the rarest items was a specimen of the Kaffir bread plant said to be nearly 1,000 years old. This large plant, with its 12 feet stem, and weighing 700 pounds, sold for $18.00. An elephant's foot plant 300 years old, and a "century plant," which blossoms only once in 100 years, were among the curiosities.

The Gardens were originally laid out at a cost of $150,000 and a further $100,000 was spent upon the conservatories and other buildings.

WE OFFER—

ACREMETER Tube Test Service

TO RADIO SET OWNERS IN THE BELLEVILLE DISTRICT

We have made a heavy investment to secure for our customers of this city all the advantages of THE ACREMETER — an inst rument that takes the guesswork out of tube testing and measures the functional capacity of each tube automatically. It tells you the story honestly — right before your own eyes.

The Acremeter

is the most astonishing advance in the science of tube testing. It has revolutionized radio reception.

WILL BRING BACK YOUR RADIO TO ITS ORIGINAL PERFORMANCE

If your set does not sound as well as on the day you bought it. If you do not get the same clear volume. If distant stations fail to respond. If certain favorite stations fade in and out. Then we have something that will bring your set back to its maximum efficiency — no matter what set you own, and no matter how old it is.

This Service Is Free

YOUR TUBES ARE THE HEART OF YOUR RADIO

The difference between listening to a good set, equipped with good tubes, and a set equipped with poor, ill-balanced tubes, is the difference between steering a smooth-running, high-powered car, and the pain and trouble of pushing a heavy motorless vehicle. The disintegration of quality reception is so gradual that many owners do not realize it. They merely feel that they are becoming less interested in their radio and in the programmes being broadcast.

WE WILL TEST, ANALYZE AND MATCH YOUR BAD TO TUBES WITHOUT CHARGE WHILE YOU LOOK ON

The Acremeter will detect and definitely indicate all possible defects in a radio tube. It does this with such simplicity that these defects are indicated visibly in a manner that you will readily understand.

We will make your radio better than it ever was. The older your set, the more astonishing the results. There is absolutely no charge for this service. You do not have to buy tubes needlessly.

Are Your Radio Tubes Pulling Together?

The necessity of a "stroke" in a rowing crew goes undis puted. The extra weight of this man who does not row is more than compensated for by the advantage gained in keeping the whole crew pulling together.

To get the best out of your radio it is absolutely necess ary that your tubes pull together. Let the ACREMETER test your "stroke." Bring your tubes to our store and watch this marvelous instrument point out the defective tube or tubes that are spoiling the great work of the others. It's a trust just to see it done.

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE IN BRINGING YOUR TUBES TO US WE WILL GIVE YOU A VERY HANDY TUBE CARTON JUST FOR THE ASKING.

Owing to the conditions the people are beginning to be more interested in church welfare and are regular attendants at the services. "We extend to you both our best wishes for a happy and prosperous life together and ask you to accept this fernery, not for its value, but as a slight token of respect and good will.

RUM STANDARD FOR PIONEERS OF LUMBERING

Exchange Basis in Pictou County Was Liquor

MUCH DRINKING

Puncheons of Rum In House of One Family In Four

Pictou, N.S., Oct. 17— (By The Canadian Press)—Pioneer lumbermen of Pictou County had something akin to a rum standard of exchange. At the opening of the nineteenth century Pictou Harbor was the centre of the lumber trade of the north shore of the province and cutting, hewing, hauling, rafting and shipping of ton lumber was for some years the one business of the people of the country. The part that rum played in business is described in a history of Pictou County which was written by Rev. Dr. George Patterson in 1871.

"The lumbering business proved most injurious to the social habits and moral condition of the community," wrote Dr. Patterson. "It brought in a large influx of population of a very loose character and it had its usual demoralizing effect upon the residents.... But the great evil, we might almost say the great characteristic of the times, was the great extent to which rum was consumed. The first settlers used very little. In fact had not the means of using it for they had not cattle. But the extent to which it was now used is absolutely incredible.

"The habit of drinking was most prevalent among the lumberers. We have heard for example, of a man being employed through the one winter at five shillings a day, with an allowance of a gallon of rum per day, but yet being in debt in spring although the money and rum for a little else but rum. When a lumbering party went to the woods, it was customary to include their provisions-ings with a caravan, which might make such a timid spare the supply of liquor, as to render an early visit to the settlements necessary to have it replenished. When they did get there they daily consumed quantities, which, if they had been using some modern liquors would have soon prostrated them for the undertaker. while at intervals their labors were arrested for the enjoyment of a carouse, which might last two or three days. Thus in spring they still found themselves in debt to the merchants, from whom they had received their supplies in autumn, and the only consolation that seemed open was to go through the same process the next season, with a fresh supply of articles from the merchant, which he was very ready to afford, with the view of obtaining their business in this way many farms were mortgaged and never redeemed.

"But though drinking was especially prevalent among the lumbermen, yet all classes were affected by it. In the most moral settlements, every third or fourth family would have a puncheon of rum, for the supply of themselves and neighbors. In some instances where there were a number of sons in a family of a preaching manhood, the whole might be consumed with very little assistance from others. In one large settlement, it was calculated on one occasion that there had been introduced in the fall as the rate of half a puncheon for each family, and before spring the supply of some was exhausted. The testimony of a tradesman at his bench taking his glass regularly every hour. A person who worked in a shoe shop told me that the allowance to each workman from the employer was three glasses a day, while he was confident that an average could man drank as many more. A member of my congregation told me of himself and others who spent a job for ten days or a fortnight in the best of drunken debauches, with their quart bottle of rum a day and not at the end of the time the worse of it, though at the close of that period, they felt unfit for work of any kind for the next week or two. Men, not content with a glass, would accustom to drink a half pint at a time, or even a pint, and I knew a man who at one time undertook to drink a whole quart at once and did so, but it nearly cost him his life. He was in such a state that his friends were summoned to him in spring, but he recovered and lived for years, drinking to the end. though he never attempted such a feat as that again.

"If these be regarded as extreme cases, yet the habitual use of liquor was common among all classes. The minister took his dram as regularly as his parishioners. The elder sold liquor. No respectable person thought of sitting down to dinner without the decanter on one corner of the table. The poorest would have felt hurt if a friend called and he had no liquor to give him. No magistrate was employed without his daily allowance, and the commissioner was less than no glasses. As likely if we must, even that quantity was often exceeded by the use of additional allowances on private account. No barrister attended court without his dram. On all occasions of public excitement, at elections, and the scenes of family interest, births, burials and bridals were consecrated in the same manner.

"A well-to-do farmer having died, his neighbors were invited to assemble, urged that henceforth they should be content with only three glasses. Scarcely had he finished when an elder, whose conservative principles had been hurt by the proposal, stepped up to the table, filled a glass, and as he raised it to his lips said, "Here's to the man that will take his two glasses," and then drank it off. This was a signal for the sailors from the shipping to fill their bottles and the subsequently scenes of drunkenness and riot followed. But few funerals prevailed among the genteel, may appear from the fact of a lady boasting that the liquor bill for her house amounted to £400 per annum.

"It must be said that the pure West India rum then drunk did not produce anything like the loathsome consequences of the present day. Where the same maddening effects in the moment, nor did it produce such evil results afterward. Hence men lived to old age, after the continuation of liquors to an amount that now seems incredible. Still that drinking was a tremendous evil, and the period we are describing was such that those who can remember it regard it as the worst morality that Pictou has seen before or since."

Gold Industry Buoys S. Africa

Johannesburg, South Africa (C.P.)—"As far as we in South Africa are concerned," said J. H. Hofmeyr, chairman of the Witwatersrand Commercial Exchange, at the annual meeting recently, "we have greater grounds for confidence than has been the case almost any country in the world, for we have in our midst a great gold industry which from day is one of the only stable sources of prosperity.

"The stability of this great industry during the past year compared of the amounts spent on stores by the gold mines for the year ended June 30 last and for the previous. In 1929 the amount was $73,650,000 while in 1930 it was $73,500,000, other words the variation was little more than one per cent. These fields in 1930 produced 35 per cent. of the world's gold, the highest percentage for one year on record, the total output being 20,300,000 fine ounces.

"I think that these facts bring home with singular force the fortunate South Africa is in possessing this great industry and how thankful we on the Witwatersrand should be that the gold mines lie at our very door."

BEAR LAKE IS WAITING RUSH

Newest Mining Field Is On Most Northerly Island Sea

Waterways, Alta., Oct. 17— Although Great Bear Lake, centre of latest mining finds which is expecting a big rush in the spring, is the most northerly of Canada's inland seas, it is far from difficult of access. It offers several very interesting features for transport work which are already being developed in preparation for the expected rush.

W. H. Patriarche, airman, who has become extensively flying in the territory, points out Great Bear Lake actually perches astride the Arctic Circle, covering some 12,000 square miles of the Great West Territories with clear blue-green water. But it is by no means the remote, frozen wilderness it was employed by 75 miles to the west run the regular Mackenzie River boat service, and the Air Mail. Ocean going vessels from the Pacific ports can reach the mouth of the Coppermine River, 120 miles from the lake itself; while by direct air route it is only one day's flight from the railhead at Waterways, Alberta.

That the rush will come is evidenced from the enquiries that continue to pour in to transportation companies and the field, but even from California, the Eastern States have come queries regarding routes and ways of travel into the new area of activity. Some, who desired to go in immediately, have failed to secure transportation owing to the difficulty of clearing those camps which were not prepared to winter in the country. Recent weeks have been spent by the aerial operators in taking in the final shipments of food and bringing out the men who are not staying to over the "freeze-up."

Preparations are already underway for the next year's work, and plans have been made for the winter freighting. From the time when the first planes are able to get away on skis, large shipments of supplies and machinery will begin, followed, as the spring approaches, by prospecting parties to be first on the ground when the ice of the lake is melt.

Already the field-man's point of view the country is ideal. It is well treed with much of the timber running up to 18 inches, but yet there is comparative freedom from undergrowth, and the rock formation is well exposed. The Eastern shore of the lake where the work has centered is broken, rocky country, with hills to approximately a thousand feet in height. The water is deep and owing to the size of the lake a heavy sea may develop, but there are excellent harbors and sheltered coves all along this side, and transportation is little hindrance.

The pioneer companies naturally are keeping their plans secret, but their knowledge of the country, and their geological data is jealously guarded. But many of the engineers from other fields have simply stamped and shaken at the diamond drilling and blasting that has been done. Indications of valuable deposits on several properties has shown results which, while still unofficial are known to have more than horne out the first hopes of their discoverers.

Gasoline, at present cost $3.15 a gallon, and food averages $2.00 a pound. But with increased volume the rates both for passengers and freight will come down, and the coming year, depression or no depression, the hitherto untouched natural resources of the Great Bear'houn- ter will be followed to of at last coming into their own.

Stirling Hockey Club Will Enter a Team Trenton Valley League

At the annual meeting of the Stirling Hockey Club, held Wednesday night, it was decided to enter a team in the Trent Valley Hockey League this year. The team will be composed of practically all "home" players, including Earl Fox, Harry Ingram, Earl Wallace, J. Ackers with the other players from the village or community. It is reported that the other team in the league will have no imported players on the "roster" this year. If this is the case the contest this year will no doubt have a more personal touch as the glory for the winning of the league championship will go to the hometown fans on the successful team in place of a "foreigner." No doubt the league contests will be keen and friendly.

At Wednesday night's meeting the matter of organizing a team was left in the hands of the following: Jack Ackers, Harry Ingram and Earl Wallace.

The following are the newly elected officers:

President—R. W. Meiklejohn.

Ist. Vice-Pres.—Hugh Morton.

2nd. Vice-Pres.—Earl Rogerson.

3rd Vice-Pres.—Henry Tulloch.

Sec.-Treas.—Harry Pringle.

A new Management Committee was appointed to take duties as follows: Jack after all entertainment, to help raise money, and to see that hockey is a success in Stirling this winter. This committee is as follows: W. Bolfour, Canada's own mining consultant, Chairman; Thomas W. Solmes and W. H. Parrell.

Messrs H. C. Martin and C. R. Basteds were appointed to take charge of the plan for the reserved seat tickets.

Drama Staged At West Huntingdon

The annual anniversary services of the United Church at West Huntingdon were held on Sunday, October 11th.

The morning service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Bowers of Madoc, who spoke very fittingly for that special occasion of the year. The choir rendered two anthems with Mrs. Pitchett taking the solo part in a very pleasing manner.

The evening service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Baker of Belleville. The choir again rendered two anthems, also Mrs. Pitchett and Mrs. (Rev.) Trueman sang a beautiful duet. Both of these services were well attended.

On Monday night a fowl supper was given followed by a play; "Eyes of Love."

The young people of West Huntingdon have a good reputation for their knowledge of the country, and their prologial data is jealously guarded. But many of the engineers from other fields have simply stamped and shaken at the diamond drilling and blasting that has been done. Indications of valuable deposits on several properties has shown results which, while still unofficial are known to have more than horne out the first hopes of their discoverers.

U. S. ASKED TO PARTICIPATE

Briand Explains Why U. S. Involved Through Treaty

Geneva, Oct. 16—Aristide Briand of France, as chairman of the council asked the League Council today to ratify United States participation in the arbitration of the Sino-Japanese dispute involving the Kellogg-Briand peace pact.

The president of the League of Nations formally ratified over the objections of the Japanese delegation and invited the United States to engage in arbitration of the Manchurian conflict.

Briand proposed that Prentiss Gilbert, United States Consul General to Geneva, be invited to sit in on the council's deliberations "so as to be in a position to express an opinion as to how either side views Kellogg-Briand treaty."

The United States, he explained among the signatories of that pact, he said, was consequently entitled to be regarded as being especially interested in hearing evidence in the present dispute by pacific means.

"Moreover, the government of the United States," he continued, "with which communications regarding the dispute before the council have already been exchanged, has expressed its whole-heartedness in the work undertaken by the League of Nations and has affirmed its desire to reinforce the action of the League."

Chairman Aristide Briand, in summarizing the council's decision that the United States, by its constitutional and judicial nature (raised by Gustafo Guani, Salvadorean delegate, remained inactive.

The council again over-ruled by a vote of 13 to one the Japanese delegate's objections and declared that the question was purely one of procedure, requiring only a majority vote. It was made clear that the United States representative would not have a vote on the merits of China's appeal.

Supporting the invitation were the delegates of France, Great Britain, Italy, Germany, Poland, Spain, Rumania, Chile, China, Peru, Ireland, Jugo-Slavia, Guatemala and Panama. Only Japan voted against.

International observers regarded the council's action despite Japan's determined stand as evidence of the League's vigor and a good omen for the ultimate happy settlement of the Manchurian affair. The council awaited a reply from Washington and expressed confidence that Prentiss B. Gilbert, United States Consul General, would take his place at the conference table.

England's General Election Campaign is Marked by Increasing Turbulence

Prizefighters and Footballers in Demand For Candidates

MUCH HECKLING

Prominent Men in Affairs Hooted Down By Voters

London, Oct. 19 (Canadian and Associated Press Cable)—Great Britain today swung into the final week of a general election campaign marked by increasing turbulence.

Football players and prize fighters were in demand as assistants for beleaguered candidates as political meetings all over the country produced bitter heckling and in some cases fisticuffs.

Sir Oswald Mosley, wealthy young Socialist, heads the "New Party," took a bodyguard of gridsters and pugilists, including Ted "Kid" Lewis, one of his candidates, when he addressed a meeting of 15,000 persons in the Birmingham Rag Market last night. He appeared without his guard and with several bruises and lacerations. Chally and boiture few and police had prevailed upon the speaker to escort him out of two policemen's away from the place.

Sir Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions and Colonies, had an experience at Liverpool similar to that which Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald encountered at Seaham last week. Mr. Thomas was howled down by hecklers shouting "traitor" and "traitor" as he attempted to make a speech in behalf of Dermot Hall Caine, son of the late novelist. Mr. Hall Caine is a National-Labor candidate.

Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born newspaper magnate, was unable to make himself heard at a rally at Govan, Scotland. The Clydesiding in fact ouzidd there's seives in making it hot for candidate, who did not capture their liking. At a meeting of a Labor candidate at Shettleston Cross, Glasgow, was broken up by communists, police escorting the candidate to the safety of a tram car. Caithgine Gavin, a Conservative candidate, who carries a team of stewards to maintain order at her meetings, lost one of them to a hospital in a fray at Carshalton.

At Grangemouth a Labor speaker was interrupted so often he finally stepped down from the platform and himself issued a heckling call. Two groups of Communists engaged in a verbal battle in Glasgow and threatened to "bash" each other on the jaw.

Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is returning from Parliament, still never widened the gap between himself and his erstwhile colleagues in the Labor party, when in a radio address Saturday night he declared the Labor party's platform was the "most fantastic and impracticable" ever put before the electors.

Polling takes place on October 27, for 548 seats out of the 615 in the House of Commons. Sixty-seven members have already been returned by acclamation—61 supporters of the National Government and six Labor opposition members.

T. A. Edison Lies in State Surrounded By Many Inventions

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 19—Surrounded by the well worn, familiar objects of his daily use, the body of Thomas A. Edison lay in state today in the small and unpretentious workroom where for many years he read and thought and made experiments.

Some test tubes, bits of plastic he had been using in his search for a formula for the manufacture of rubber, an old desk, many notebooks, and a blue-covered couch, where he used to take his rest—there were the background. And over his casket was shed the soft radiance of what the world regards as his greatest invention, the incandescent lamp.

For an hour this morning workmen from his factory passed slowly through the little building just off main street. They call it "the lab." The inventor's son, Charles, was there to receive them. Later the public was admitted and a long line of men and women and children began moving through the quiet room.

The body will lie in state until Tuesday afternoon, when will be private funeral service Wednesday in the Edison home, Llewellyn Park, after which, according to a change of plans announced today, all that is mortal of the great inventor will be laid to rest in Rosedale Cemetery, East Orange.

Soon after Edison died yesterday representatives of the family announced that burial would be in the Rosedale Cemetery Monday. Today, however, after a family conference it was decided to have buried there the family indicated that interment would be in Rosedale Cemetery, East Orange.

Thomas Alva Edison, great inventor dies in sleep early Sunday morning.

Hospitals Will Benefit by Closer Relations with Press

Famous Baby Mix-up Scandal Made Worse By Attempts to Blindfold Press—Publicity Helps Hospitals as Well as Other Lines of Business—Mistake to Antagonize Press Say Speakers at Hospital Association Convention.

The Mail and Empire

Full co-operation with community newspapers, so that the hospital's service to that community may indirectly but vitally be increased, was urged upon hospital superintendents at the opening session of the 11th convention of the American Protestant Hospital Association in the King Edward Hotel.

By way of illustration, it was pointed out in the discussion which followed the reading of John A. McNamara's paper that the now famous Bamburger baby mix-up in Chicago some months ago would never have received the newspaper attention it did if the hospital in question had given out the legitimate information at its disposal in the beginning.

The hospital authorities had been queried about a rumored mix-up in babies. Instead of explaining how such a mistake as that rumored was impossible under the hospital's system of identification, they refused to give the newspapers one word on the matter it was stated.

The papers "plaved" the story because of its intence human interest; public interest was roused to a high pitch. Then the balloon was pricked, and the net result was much unfavorable publicity for the hospital concerned. which might have easily been avoided in the first place, it was pointed out.

Friend or Enemy

"The newspapers can be your best friend or your worst enemy; all according to how you handle the situation yourself," said Mr. McNamara in his address. Mr. McNamara is executive editor of The Modern Hospital, Chicago.

He reminded the 150 delegates from 31 states that newspapermen and editors were just like themselves and so reacted in much the same way to situations which they met. There was the occasional newspaper people who were unpleasant, as in every other group, but most were pleasant, congenial men and women whose purpose was ferreting out the news of the community.

"For years the hospital has been a place of mystery, a place that the people of the community didn't know, nor care to know. Some time or other always eager to learn what goes on inside the building," said Mr. McNamara.

"The marvels of the X-ray, the electrocardiograph, the physical therapy machinery, the technique of nursing, the work done by the dietitian, and eye magnet, the fluoroscope, and its work, the various common tests in the laboratory, and a thousand other procedures that are common and prosaic to you are fraught with interest to Mrs. Brown, who live down the street a little way."

Contact Emphasized

In addition to weekly news releases and the daily co-operation on routine matters, hospitals should contact the newspapers as often as possible, he said.

"When you have an unusually interesting case in your hospital, call them up and treat the reporters with all the courtesy you can," he urged. "An excellent example of this occurred in Chicago when Miss Gann, the nurse at St. Luke's, was put in the respirator. Nothing but the best publicity resulted because the director of the hospital met every reporter personally and did everything in his power to see that they got good news stories."

Every patient automatically became a publicity agent for the hospital: whether it turned to the hospital's advantage depended on the institution.

The responsibility that every patient left the hospital a booster for that institution rested solely on the superintendent. Complaints should become his or her personal business, said the speaker.

BLUENOSE IS WINNER OF 1ST

Captain of Bluenose Bests Captain Pine in Jockeying

POINTS HIGHER

Course of 36 Miles is Laid Out For Race of Schooners

(By A. D. Merkel, Canadian Press Staff Writer, C. G. S. Lady Lassiter by Rade Steamship Co., Halifax, Oct. 19.—The schooner Bluenose of Lunenburg, N. S., defending champion of the North Atlantic fishing fleets, today gave the schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud of Gloucester, Mass., the United States challenger, a sound thrashing in the first completed race of their title contest for the Fishermen's Vanguard Trophy.

Walters, Bluenose's fiery little skipper, drove his big shit-banker around the first leg of the five legs, 35 minutes, finishing at 2.33.20, Atlantic time, with Thebaud far astern. Only during the first half of the course, sailed almost directly before the wind, did jovial Captain Ben Pine's Gloucestermen show any speed. Then the 125-year-old ocean queen. Captain Ben had the advantage of the start, an advantage disputed over the first six miles, but after that Thebaud followed in Bluenose's wake.

Thebaud, a small vessel, did not appear handicapped because of the wind, but once the schooners started working into the teeth of a brisk northerly breeze, Bluenose forged steadily ahead of the contender from Gloucester.

Conditions today were, even her warmest supporters admitted, not to Thebaud wanted—a smooth sea and a light breeze, but with the latter too heavily ballasted, labored through the sea, and was a slow, sprightly vessel she should be at less than ten knots, while Bluenose the stately matron, glided over the dancing white-crested waves grace fully as a water sprite.

Halifax, October 19.—Bluenose, queen of the North Atlantic fishing fleets led the schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud of Gloucester, Mass., the United States challenger, by more than five minutes at the half-way mark in their first race for the International Fishermen's Trophy. The first leg, over the 36 mile course was bitterly contested by Captain Angus Walters of the Bluenose, and Captain Ben Pine of the Gloucesterman. Running almost directly before the easterly breeze the rival sailing masters of the fishing boats displayed every trick in gaining the lead rather than to speed. The Bluenose won in 2 hours and a half of their six hours time allowance on the first half of the course, which was also forced to relinquish an advantage he had gained in the early stages of the leg. Captain Angus by more than half a mile at the finishing buoy, a veritable, marking the half way point, was reached.

Bluenose was officially timed as passing the light vessel at 11:27:30, and the Thebaud at 11:32:50.

Thebaud's performance was creditable. Although outsailed by her longer seriously contested the course with Captain Angus' big sail-banker but the supporters of the latter were doomed to disappointment. As often as not the Gloucester boat found herself and drew away from the Bluenose, but by the end of the way mark her commanding position seemed assured.

The schooners were close-hauled for the outer automatic buoy seven miles from the finishing line.

Clear skies and a light northwest wind greeted the fishermen this morning and the United States challenger, Gertrude L. Thebaud, as they went to the line for a brief start in the International series at Lunenburg, N.S., for the honor and possession of the International Fishermen's Trophy. The gun sounded off the mouth of the harbor reported the breeze freshening and there was every prospect of a fine race. The Smoother seas than prevailed Saturday gave Thebaud a shorter visual conditions more to her liking.

The schooners staged a battle along the eastern shore and swept past Sandwich Point within a stone's throw of the rocks, which had Thebaud blanketed but Pine held his course, Thebaud sailed lifted over followed by Pine. The operation was repeated by the challenger but Angus Walters held his ground, coming through the weather position which he wanted, and at half an hour after the start they were on even terms with the challenger in the preferred weather position. As the leg was almost a run before the wind, this position might well prove of great importance.

Bluenose was sailing by her about 40 seconds at the first six-mile mark. The next leg of about 11 miles was a continuation of the run before the wind. The schooners raced neck and neck for the first six miles but then Pine's boat was taken by the breeze further off the wind by the rival skippers, more intent upon keeping the lead than in covering the course. Part of the time one or the other was sailing wing and wing.

Children's Day

In Anglican Church

Children's Day in the Church of England was observed Sunday from coast to coast—special talks to the children and sermons dealing with the religious education of the children were given in all Anglican Churches. Each year a special printed message is addressed to the children by one of the Bishops of the Church and this Children's Day the message was from the Rt. Rev. H. Allen Gray, D.D., the first Bishop of Saskatoon, who, owing to ill health, is retiring to live in England.

At St. Thomas Church at the morning service, the Vicar, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne addressed the congregation regarding the religious education of children and emphasized the duty of all parents and members of the Church to the Sunday School, which is the nursery of the Church. In the afternoon the eighth and fourth were baptized at the Parish House and marched to the church where a special children's service was conducted by the Vicar.

At Christ Church Children's Day was willingly observed. The Rector, Rev. H. C. Clarke, in his custom gave a very interesting and instructive talk to the children at the morning service, using as the subject of his address "The Christmas Paper," from which he drew many interesting and helpful lessons. At the Sunday School in the afternoon, the teachers talked to the children of the day being observed from coast to coast by all children of the Church of England in Canada.

All offerings throughout Canada on Children's Day, other than those specified for some special purpose, will be given towards the work of the General Board of Religious Education of the Church of England in Canada.

PRAYERS SAID AFTER MASS

In Accordance With Apostolic Letter From Pope Pius XI.

In accordance with the wishes of His Holiness Pope Pius XI. announced in the Apostolic letter on unemployment and the means of relief of the suffering, special prayers were said after High Mass on Sunday morning at St. Michael's Church.

The Apostolic letter was read to the congregation at each Mass and in it His Holiness refers to the present situation as a new calamity, remarks Dr. Gilfillan, the humble, the workers and the proletariat. The great multitude of willing and honourable workers forced to idleness and reduced with their families to extreme indigence moved the Holy Father to address a appeal to all, who possess a sense of faith and Christian love, an appeal for what he termed a crusade of charity and relief. This crusade would be accomplished through prayer, preaching, charity and the aid of the press. Particularly did the Holy Father entreat the faithful to lift up their hearts to the Giver of every gift, that in His infinite mercy He may shorten this period of tribulation.

The approaches of the Feast of Christ the King, the Holy Father considered an opportune time for the holding of solemn triduums of prayer in every parish to implore God to spread abroad thoughts of peace and its gifts. The triduum for St. Michael's parish will be held beginning Thursday morning.

EDISON'S BODY LIES IN STATE IN LIBRARY

Funeral Will Be Held On Wednesday, Interment at Milan, Ohio

PAY HOMAGE

Public Will Be Allowed Privilege of Passing Inventor's Bier

(By THOMAS F. KOOP)

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 19.—Thomas A. Edison in death received today the homage of the millions for whom he had made life more comfortable.

The body of the eighty-four year old inventor, who died at 3:24 A. M. Sunday, lay in state in the library of his laboratory.

After a private funeral Wednesday at his Glenmont, estate here, Mr. Edison's body will be taken to Milan, Ohio, for burial near his birthplace.

President Hoover hoped to come from Washington Wednesday to stand at Mr. Edison's bier both as a personal friend and as head of a sorrowing nation. Meanwhile Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, the inventor's two "old cronies", hastened to West Orange.

Mr. Edison slipped quietly from a deep coma into a lasting sleep Sunday morning. Holding his hand was Mrs. Edison, for forty-five years his constant companion. At his bedside were his six children.

After his death, Dr. Hubert S. Howe disclosed that Mr. Edison, on learning recovery was improbable, did not desire to live. His life's work done, he did not wish to place an invalid's burden on his family, he said.

The body was taken today to the Edison library, scene of many of his triumphs of invention. It has been many months since he was there, because of his illness. There today sang among the books and test tubes, that were so much his life, the body lay in state, where friends and strangers alike might pass by, paying their respects.

Arrangements were made for the library to remain open from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M., today and Tuesday, the bier to be surrounded day and night by a guard of honor composed of four of Mr. Edison's employees. The personnel was to be changed every fifteen minutes.

Employees Look On Master

The 9,000 employees of the Edison plant and their families were privileged to enter the room an hour earlier than the general public.

The building, standing only a few blocks from the Edison Llewellyn Park Estate, is a treasure house of the inventor's most intimate possessions—a collection of his books, photographs model, a bronze bust of Herbert Hoover, a picture of Mr. Hoover with Mr. Ford, and similar memorabilia. A tendency almost akin to that with thousands of scientific and philosophical volumes.

The funeral Wednesday will be on the fifty-second anniversary of Mr. Edison's perfection of the incandescent light. Although his famous Menlo Park demonstration did not take place until December 31, 1879, he perfected the light on October 21 of that year.

His electrical inventions were considered by the many honors showered as the greatest of his 1,200-odd patents. The number he has examined had been set at $15,000,000,000.

MAPLE SUGAR FIGURES

Maple sugar and maple syrup produced in Canada in the spring of 1931 had an estimated value of $3,537,700, of which the former accounted for $870,200 and the latter $2,666,900. There were 5,494,100 pounds of maple sugar produced and 1,214,700 gallons of maple syrup. Of the total output of maple products in the province of Quebec produced 4,726,000 pounds and 727,900 gallons of maple syrup. Ontario came next with 626,000 pounds of maple sugar and 373,400 gallons of syrup. The remainder of both products came from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The sugar sold for an average price of 17 cents per pound and the latter for $1.46 per gallon.

W. H. DUNCAN RETURNS HOME

Hunted 15 Months, Gives Himself Up. Committed For Trial

Midland, Oct. 19—Nattily attired and looking entirely at his ease, Duncan, who has been in hiding since mysteriously on June 30 of last year, leaving behind him alleged claims of bonds for $67,000 surrendered to Provincial Constable Harry Wright in Magistrate Cook's court Saturday morning.

Duncan walked into court with his counsel, William J. Healey of Toronto, and formerly of Orillia, and announced that he was ready to answer any charges the Crown had preferred against him. He was told that there were four charges of conversion of clients' funds, and to these he entered a plea of not guilty. After he had agreed to the waiving of the taking of testimony he was committed for trial before the County Judge. Duncan was then remanded without bail to the Barrie jail to await his trial.

The Provincial Police in Toronto had confidential information early Saturday morning that Duncan would surrender. It was known that he was in Toronto Friday and had arranged to come back and stand his trial.

Wife Confident of Return

During the fifteen months that Duncan has been away from Midland his wife has remained here, confident that her husband would return and answer the charges that had been laid against him. In his absence the Progincial Police kept up an active search just as they did in the case of Tom Brown, Mayor of Bracebridge, whose death in Mexico took place under tragic circumstances.

Duncan was Mayor of Midland and was highly regarded. That he still has numerous friends among his former clients was indicated here Saturday by the presence in court of many citizens of this district, who had heard of his return from the United States.

Friends stated here today that Duncan could not stand any longer the terrible strain of being hunted from place to place by police officers and being separated from his wife and two little boys, who are still here. He was one of Midland's most prominent citizens and a patron of all sports, but principally hockey.

Ferguson Carr, who heard his cries for help, was mired himself when he attempted to rescue Chambers. Several workmen who rushed to the scene were held back by the treacherous ground.

He was taken to hospital sufferins from exposure and shock.

HOLLOWAY ST. CHURCH HOLDS ANNIVERSARY

Special Speakers Gave Sermons at Morning and Night Services

MISS LUSCOMBE SANG

Musical Programme a Delightful Part of Anniversary

With the singing of one old and beautiful hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty! Early in the morning our song shall rise to Thee"—the morning service was opened Sunday at Holloway Street United Church, it was a special day in the history of this fine old church, which for nearly fifty-five years has been the Spiritual home many families residing on the East West Hill. Within it have worshipped men and women of well known names, who during their lifetime were ardent workers in this congregation and loyal, helpful citizens of Belleville. Today some of their children and grand children are members of the church and are helping to carry on the organization and advancement of the Christian work bequeathed to them.

Large Congregations

The services throughout the day were largely and the congregations were large. The musical portions of the services were well rendered by the choir under the capable leadership of Mr. F. C. Meyers and Mr. Alex. Gordon, the organist. During the morning service the choir sang with excellent expression the Anthem, "Thou O God Art Praised in Zion". Mrs. John Adams taking the solo, and Mrs. Frank Bayfield and Mrs. Adkins the duet part. Miss Helen Lascombe, who is home on a holiday from the Toronto Conservatory of Music, sang with excellent taste and sweetness of quality, "The Penitent," by Vandewater.

Special Preacher

The special preacher at the morning service was the Rev. W. P. Woodger, B.A., of Napanee, in every able, interesting and convincing sermon he urged upon his hearers the great necessity of taking a firm stand on moral issues—a great work for Christ—with their efforts and prayers. The text upon which the preacher based his remarks was taken from Galatians, the second chapter and second verse: "Only they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do."

Mr. Woodger said that he always liked to say a few words to the children in the morning service and the lesson he gave with them was one which impressed every one present. In showing a ball game. The play had been unnoticed and every of the players were on the field throwing the ball from one to another. They fooled in doing this, and made no real attempt to catch the ball and also in throwing the ball they did so in a careless fashion, knowing that anything nearby called to them to stop the careless play or they would get the habit and act in the same way at the ball playing ball. They said Mr. Woodger, those men preached a sermon and did not know that they had done so. The reason is that their careless carelessness leads to habitual carelessness. In actions and speech he warned the children to be constantly on guard against carelessness—be earnest, and thereby become better prepared to play well their part in life as good men and women.

Give Account of Stewardship

Addressing the older people in the congregation the preacher said that Paul and Barnabas had gone from preaching to the Gentiles to give an account of their stewardship to the church at Jerusalem, there had arisen some differences regarding their teaching but they had met and settled the matters in question, they were then received in full fellowship and permitted to continue the work among the Gentiles, the one condition being as given by St. Paul in the text, "Only they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do." Mr. Woodger said that the poor was to occupy a prominent place in the congregation. The word forward has a good and an active meaning. There is the forward child and there is being forward with a roar in fault finding but St. Paul uses it in the good meaning, that of being eager to give and to give cheerfully. The congregations on this anniversary making a special offering and he felt confident that the amount would be satisfactory. Systematic giving was to be recommended. Two things are laid in their sacred, worthy objects. Too much emphasis is laid upon the amount given but it i the spirit of giving which counts. We are being forward and anxious to give. Be forward also to take a stand on moral issues, "Be ready to do and desirous to do that which is right and not to be led by the crowd in the realms of life." Young people today are facing issues and have grave choices they have to make in society.

Many Temptations

There is the temptation to take the first drink and the temptation to other evil. "Let us be forward to take a stand on moral issues," said the preacher. There is the temptation to gamble. Have no right to expect more of young women than we have of young men."

The young women, however, can take the proper stand and their example and influence will work for good. Then there is the question of service. In the Rivards club there is the spirit of being forward for service—this is contagious. There are too many organizations that have to carry the members, instead of the members carrying the organization. This, the speaker said, is applicable to the church. Religion must be vital. Christian missionaries are not asked or about doctrines but they are asked, "What has Christ done for you. The heart of the great power for good of these missionaries is that they are personally dedicated to Jesus Christ—He has their life—He is at the centre of their life. The preacher urged those of the congregation who had been members of the Methodist church and who are now members of the great United church of Canada—not to lose the distinctive feature of personal religion and abandoned in their former religious association—that a man should be able to say, I know in my heart that Jesus reigns and that He has come into my heart."

The preacher closed his interesting discourse by calling upon his hearers not to be simply nominal Christians but to definitely consecrate themselves to the service of God—to be loyal, hearted Christians like St. Paul.

Sunday School Rally

In the afternoon at the largely attended Sunday School rally the superintendent, Mr. James N. Hudgins, addressed the pupils on the church's missionary, pointing out how it is the duty of the school to support the church. The offering of the purpose, it is understood was quite liberal.

The preacher at the evening service was the Rev. H. R. Tanton, of Trinity United Church, Cobourg, who delivered an eloquent and forceful address on the call of Christ when he said, "Follow me."

During the evening service the choir gave in a most excellent manner the anthem, "How adorable are thy Courts." Miss Helen Lascombe rendered the delightful solo, "Repeat Ye," by John Prindle Scott, and Mrs. John Adams rendered in a most pleasing manner, "The Ninety and Nine."

The pastor, the Rev. Canon Harold B. Neal, who was absent from the morning service, preaching at Napanee, was present with the congregation at the evening service.

CAPONE'S FATE NOW WITH JURY

Evidence Has Been Summed Up By Defense and Prosecution

(By Victor Hackley)

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 17.—Three years' investigation, months of intensive preparation, volumes of evidence and testimony of scores summered down today to a question that will determine whether or not guilty of violating the income tax laws.

Only a brief summation of the Government's case by United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson—the first court argument that has made since taking office—and the instructions of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson remained before the case became a matter for the jury to decide.

The usual array of witnesses of victory were flaunted before the jurors. Instead, there was one scintilla of evidence to support the charges." And on the other hand there could be no possible doubt as to guilt.

The trial started October 6 after considerable jockeying for position. Counsel for the defense, Mr. Wilkerson said he refused to take into account any sentiment or clemency.

Although his gangster friends, who elected to fight similar income tax cases had received terms more than those who pleaded guilty, relying as much as five year sentence, the big scarface hoodlum has decided to risk. The maximum penalty possible, under conviction on all 23 counts, would be 27 years imprisonment and a $40,000 fine.

The indictments charged Capone with attempting to evade and defeat taxes on profits and income, ranged from $103,999 to $357,346 in 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1929.

THE NEW HONEY GRADES

The consuming public are showing a special interest in the attractiveness, appearance and correct identification of quality which is made possible by the new honey grades which came into effect this year. Where honey is sold by grade the grading must conform to the Canadian standards. The Canadian standards for honey provide a natural classification by colour into four classes—White" "Golden," "Amber" and "Dark." These classes in turn are graded strictly on the basis of quality by "Inspectors" or "Manufacturers." The honey grades are especially popular because of the consistency of the application of grade terminology to the product when graded, the inherent quality of the honey literally sells itself.

SURPRISING TOTALS

Rather suggestive figures were quoted by Hon. Dr. Manion on Thursday last in reference to the condition of Canada at the present time. He pointed out that there was in the banks of this country nearly one and a half billions of money on deposit and that the annual payrolls of the workers of Canada in all industries amounted to two and a half billions. These figures are staggering.

The savings reference is of particular interest. This means that there is about one hundred and fifty dollars or one hundred and sixty dollars on deposit in the banks for every man, women, and child in the Dominion of Canada. Considering the large number of children which make a fairly large proportion of this population (and even many of these have their bank accounts) the showing is a sign of Canadian industry and thrift. It means an average of perhaps seven hundred to eight hundred dollars per family.

The payroll is a mark of healthy industry, of the industrious character of the people in general and of sound legislation in regard to industrial workers, and general prosperity.

Though Dr. Manion had to speak of a railway condition which will doubtless have to be corrected, yet this side of the picture he revealed is enough to give the Canadian people fresh courage in their outlook upon the days to be. In view of these conditions such things as depressions are only resting-places in the journey across the future.

SAVING AND SPENDING

No one blames people for industrious and for saving money. Yet men may serve by spending as well as by saving.

There is a need today which is very close to every one's door and many are answering the call to look upon their brothers and sisters in distress.

But there are some people whose salaries and incomes pour in unabated is and who nevertheless restrict themselves in their purchases as those less fortunate are compelled to do. If everyone of any means does this the world over prosperity will be indefinately delayed.

There are many people who without suffering could help by being generous in their purchases and by so doing give a lasting reward of satisfaction in knowing that they have helped to keep alive a spirit of optimism even under depressing conditions.

He who has means and allows his interests to shrink in time of depression is helping to hold his own purchases and causing other men to doubt the very things in which he is interested. If he owns stocks he helps to bear them down.

But many who can help are helping. They stand alongside the men and women who give and buy even when giving and buying mean the sale of the last of the earth. They have a reward in good deeds.

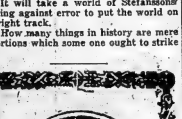
He who dires up the bowels of his compassion is practising man's inhumanity to man which makes countless millions mourn, and forgetting that these men are his brothers, and that in the final analysis a rag-tattered man may count higher in real value than he who is laden with bank accounts and stock certificates and lands. He has yet to learn that he owes a duty to the less fortunate brother and he is practising a philosophy of ethics which is false to life.

TRADITIONS

Traditions died hard. It is easy to repeat what has been taught in school or what one has once learned for a fact. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Canadian explorer of the Arctic has found this out and if the false tradition lives long enough even the Eskimos will find out what mistakes are being told of them.

Stefansson has repeatedly stated that the current belief is that the Eskimos live in igloos. Only three hundred out of fifteen thousand of the race have ever heard of an ice house, and not one has ever seen it. Bees, butterflies, and flowers of wondrous coloring are found in the Arctic though the schools and men and women at large call the Arctic a place of desolation.

Traditions is often very enticing and dangerous. It is so easy to repeat without knowing better and with sufficient currency an opinion soon goes for a fact though there is not a single atom of truth about it.



The explorer will probably have to state this a hundred times before the school texts will change.

But should not the word of a man who knows better from his own personal experience be taken in preference to the word of tradition which is only founded on something someone once said, no one knowing whether it is true or not.

It may be hard to adjust one's self to the truth in regard to imagined living conditions among these people but the truth is better than any fiction, even if it be a fairy tale.

It will take a world of Stefanssons battling against error to put the world on the right track.

How many things in history are mere distortions which some one ought to strike out.

TIME

By Aline Michaelis

What has Time taught me,
Through the swift years?
What has he brought me?
Laughter and tears.

Gifts that were shining,
Gifts that were gray;
Rare joys divining,
But for a day!

What has Time told me?
Treasures of truth,
Yet they were sold me
Dearly, for youth!

Youth was the payment
On Time's demand,
Youth's gorgeous raiment
Made for love's land.

Life's tree is shaken
Of hopes I sought,
Yet, Time has taken
Les than he brought!

AIMEE McPHERSON HUTTON, (not what-a-man Hudson) or vica versa, which is it? has been trying to lick the devil out of big staid old Back Bay Boston, and recently attended a night club there. She says she saw plenty of fun, chaff and sawdust but no real joy, plenty of physical exercises but no mental calisthenics, plenty of sex parade but no uplift, save on the faces of henna blondes. Aimee and her mother are going back into the city of Boston on their honeymoon evangelistic trip, but there is no indication that Boston has any use for the aroused ire of Aimee. In any event the old and cultured bean city does not care to be hurried, as Billy Sunday and others of the Sawdust Trail found out a few years since when they rose petals of California from her abbreviated skirts and came east to slip a few fast ones at the Devil on his native heath.

GEORGE EARNSHAW, big pitching ace of the Philadelphia Athletics, believes baseball courage has unlimits. Earnshaw recently witnessed the mid-weekly show-up of crook suspects at the Chicago detective bureau. After the crook parade and camera "mugging", the A's pitcher and some of his companions posed on the same platform for photographs, which were afterwards printed in a Chicago newspaper together with those of the crook round-up. Shortly after a woman appeared at police headquarters with a copy of the paper and pointed to Earnshaw's picture, said: "That is the man who took a room at my house on July 29 and left the next morning with two watches, a camera and a fountain pen." It took a police sergeant fifteen minutes to satisfy her that Earnshaw was with his club in Philadelphia on that date.

FROM CALIFORNIA, the land of big fruit and tall stories comes this one, relayed by Walter Winchell in the New York Mirror.

Leonard Golos offers the one about the New Yorker paying his first visit to California, the land of eternal sunshine and advertising. He passed a field ripe with honeydews. In honest exclaimation he chirped: "Marvelous melons, eh?"

"No," was the indifferent native son's reply, "gooseberries."

As they passed an apple orchard in full bloom, he said: "What splendid apples!" and the Californian squelched him with: "Merely crab-apples."

When the pair got to the Pacific Ocean, the New Yorker was fed up. He casually observed: "I see someone's radiator has been leaking."

THE FERMENT OF INTELLECT

Some philosophers have seen in the prolonged depression the inscidental benefit of causing many people to use their brains as they never did before. It is apparently true that there is a new army of thinkers abroad in the land. Never were there so many of what Carlyle called "great thoughts" put forward as a solution for all our troubles. Panaceas are, in fact, thicker than blackberries.

Among so many it might seem invidious to single out one. But the originality of the proposals put forward by one analyst of our most fairly dominant wealth citizen. One of them is the adoption of a "universal calendar." This is recommended as one of the ways to bring about the "actual end of the present world business depression."

Another is adjustment of the world's currencies on a "Universal Numismatic Standard." Still more striking, and presumably effective, is "The Equalization of the Barometric Systems of the World." This work alone is guaranteed to "employ millions from all classes." Only a bold man would deny this —if it is understood at all what was meant.

Truly this is an age of self-expression. But as the cynical professor said, the question is whether the self-expressers have anything worth expressing.—New York Times.

CITY MANAGERSHIP

City manager administration is, in many instances, handling admirably the multifarious problems incident to economic readjustment with its consequent unemployment. Here, as in other fields, it is proving its worth. One danger, however, looms on the horizon, and of this Prof. A. R. Hatton of Northwestern University, the author of many city manager charters, sounded a warning at the Louisville convention. City managers must be aware of becoming dispensers of political patronage and cogs in political organizations, as is regrettably the case in one or two large cities.

Council-manager governments, operated by politically appointed city managers, should be models of the highest ideals of a movement which had its foundations in the desire to eliminate partisan influences and activities in local affairs. Happily such cases are few, and probably will not increase greatly in number. The real menace exists in the maintenance of a high standard of managerial practice and ethics.—C.S. Monitor.

BACK-SEAT DRIVING WITH RADIO

Sea captains are exposed to new troubles with the advent of the radio-telephone. For instance, the captain's wife, accompanying him this space-annihilating device has outlined a conversation held with his wife, seated at the domestic hearth, Mrs. Captain issued instructions to her husband on the wireless warning him that as he was docking at a different hour than usual he must not forget to make allowances for the difference in state of the tide. The captain amusedly refers to the incident as back-seat driving with a vengeance.

Undoubtedly the invasion of the captain's bridge by the much-heralded voice of the partner of his joys and sorrows has humors to match. A W. W. Jacobs could do justice. But as an allegory of what is going on more or less all the time through the agency of radio, it looms as one of its entertaining qualities. The air is frequently filled with the vaporings of political quacks or the economic nostrums of enthusiastic faddists. Persons of responsibility prescribe for all the ills of the body politic. The unseen audience is at the mercy of unknown orators. It is back-seat driving on a grand scale.

Newspapers are doubtless frequently at fault in regard to the space and prominence devoted to orations of little or no importance. But every newspaper tries to be achieved any standing in its community is sensible of its responsibility to present its news in some degree of perspective. The same sense of responsibility seems not yet to have attacked to the medium of radio broadcasting. That medium has reached a high stake of mechanical perfection. As a vehicle of entertainment it performs wonders. But there seems to be something still lacking in the way of its editorial management.—Toronto Telegram.

GOVERNMENT

The growing complexity of civilization inevitably compels common action which is governmental. Increase in size and number of the ships using a given route means more navigation aids ultimately a government function. In their several ways, the telephone, motor car, aeroplane, radio, and a thousand other inventions, add to the duties of government. Shortly after these duties are performed, that government costs too much means nothing but a general grouch unless we are ready to do without the new inventions.

It is true, unthinking enthusiasts demand us to establish public services that are quite unnecessary. But to complain of that on the ground of expense is to give away the case. The evil of an unnecessary government service is, not that it costs too much, but that it abridges the people's liberties and tends to demoralization.

The reason why people allow the establishment of superfluous government service is that they have nothing to guide their decision in such matters. Where is the rule to be found by which we can judge whether a given proposal to extend government service is good or bad? There are standards. If you like, but they are imprecise and mutually contradictory; they cannot help the public to conclusions.

There is a proper field of government, and, of course, government should keep to its proper field. But that saying is only a form of words until we survey the field and mark its boundaries.—Ottawa Citizen.

Slipping softly by;
Like water lilies drifting
Where the sun pools lie,
Or like the white dew lifting
Their slow twilight cry.

How gently does the dark come,
Bedclothes for the les,
Like road dust on the green plum
Settling silverly,
Like day-shine petals falling
Into the rose's tree,
Or like a lost gull calling
Its way at sea.

How gently does the heart still
Silence after rain,
Like wind departs a tall hill
To sleep in the grain;
Like restless music dying
In a slow refrain,
Or like a traveler sighing,
Safely home again.

Lapses Into Coma, Thence To Last Sleep at Age of 84 Years

(Associated Press Despatch)

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 19 — Thomas A. Edison died at his home in Llewellyn Park at 3.24 a.m. Sunday. He was 84 years old. His wife, six children, his personal physician and two nurses were at the bedside when the end came.

The pronouncement of death was made by Dr. Hubert S. Howe, Mr. Edison's personal physician, at 3.36 a.m. and transmitted by Arthur Walsh at 3.37 a.m.

The announcement of death, given to the press by Mr. Walsh, was made by the president of the Thomas A. Edison Industries, said:

"Thomas Alva Edison quietly passed away at twenty-four minutes after three a.m., October 18, 1931. (Signed) Dr. Hubert S. Howe."

Heart Failure Cited

The end came after a day and night during which Mr. Edison sank deeper and deeper into a state of coma, while his heart, which during weeks of illness had acted powerfully, began to falter.

Bulletins issued by his physician last night and shortly before death indicated the rapidly approaching end. The pulse became weaker and more rapid, and respiration more and more shallow.

Members of the household remained in the room the night with Dr. Howe, was in the sickroom constantly during the night.

Disease Becomes Acute

The immediate cause of death was uræmic poisoning. This was the result of nephritis, which first became acute about the first of the time of his illness with pneumonia two years ago. A chronic kidney condition, which had been present to a greater or less extent for thirty-five or forty years

For twenty years he had attacks of acute pain in his stomach and other symptoms of gastric ulcer. His blood pressure had risen and remained normal. For a man of 84 years, his blood vessels showed a remarkably little change, and his heart was exceptionally strong. His pulse was slightly irregular, but this never caused him any convenience.

Mrs. Edison's History

The late Thomas Alva Edison, undoubtedly one of the world's greatest men, was born on February 11, 1847, in the town of Milan, Ohio. His ancestors had emigrated to America from Holland about 1730. The name Thomas was that of one of his ancestors and that of Alva came to him from a family of Irish Alva Bradley, who owned and operated flour mills in Ohio at that time.

After the American Revolution, the Edisons went to Nova Scotia, where the inventor's father, Samuel Edison, met Miss Nancy Elliot, a descendant of Samuel Edison, after living in the region of St. Thomas, removed to Michigan because of his sympathies with William Lyon Mackenzie.

Edison's father had a work-shop in Milan, in which he made handwrought shingles. The world almost had the great inventor in these early days at Milan, for, because having a narrow escape from smothering in a bin of wheat into which he had fallen. The bin was close to drowning in the canal. When Milan's boys and girls were over Samuel Edison moved his family to Port Huron, Mich., where he became a dealer in fuel and salt.

At Port Huron, young Edison went to school for three months and this was all the school education he ever received. His teacher reported him as "addled," and Edison' stated that he was always at the foot of the class. But Edison's mother had been a school teacher in Canada before her marriage to Mr. Edison, she had very poor opinion of the school's proficiency, and she herself took up his tuition.

A Child Experimented

Even in his childhood years he was an "experimenter" and maintained his laboratory in the cellar. Chiefly interested in chemistry, at that time, he had arranged on shelves in the cellar some 200 bottles all of which he had labeled "poison," to keep possible meddlers away from them. Mrs. Edison once ordered the removal of all the "rubbish," but consented to allow it to remain provided it was kept under lock and key while the boy was away. Most of the lad's pocket money in these days went on chemicals.

It was through the argument that he needed money with which to buy chemicals that he won the permission of his mother to apply for the concession on the newsboy on the trains of the Grand Trunk running between Port Huron and Detroit. He maintained a sort of laboratory even on his train. He also set up a small printing press and issued a weekly magazine which he sold at 3 cents a copy. One day, however, from the lurch of the train a stick of phosphorus fell on Edison's shelf and set fire to the coach. Thereupon the conductor of the son's ears so hard that his hearing was affected for the balance of his life. Edison once said he thought the deafness an advantage to him in his work of invention.

Was Telegraph Operator

About the time he left the railway as newsboy he saved the life of the child of the station agent at Mount Clemens. In gratitude the station agent taught Edison railway telegraphy, and a little later Edison obtained the post of night operator at Stratford Junction. This was in 1863, when Edison was 16 years old.

According to the recollection of John Ducan, 516 Ontario Street, Turogin, one of the oldest living telegraph operators in Canada, who in 1864 was sent to take Edison's job at Stratford the great inventor in that year fell asleep at his telegraph key at Stratford Junction and allowed two Grand Trunk engines to collide. The mechanical contraption of cog wheels he had invented and placed on his desk to send an automatical signal over the wire had failed to work. No particular harm was done in the bump. Nevertheless young Edison received orders to report at Toronto. Instead he jumped his job and the first train for Detroit.

Invention is Not Used

In turn, Edison worked at the key in Adrian, Fort Wayne, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, Louisville, Detroit, Memphis and Boston. It was at Boston that Edison became interested in the business of invention. He first worked on a vote recording machine by means of which he could record the votes of the legislative bodies at Washington. It was not adopted, however.

Then Edison became a partner in the firm of Pope, Edison & Co., electrical engineers. Among his important developments of this time we find stock-tickers, stock printers, automatic telegraphy, duplex and quadruplex telegraph systems, the carbon telephone and receiver, and he helped Bell make his telephone practical by introducing the carbon transmitter. In 1871 Edison invented a vote recording device which he offered to the Congress, but it so well known today and used by so many people. His first record was a strip of tinfoil wound around the drum, and first words recorded and reproduced by the record were "Mary had a little lamb."

Invents Electric Bath

The experience Edison gained in chemistry as a boy, the familiarity he acquired in electricity and electrical circuits, and, most of all, his ability to work hard and for long hours in the face of seeming defeat, all combined to make it easy for Edison at the age of 32, when he started the job of developing a practical incandescent lamp for a world living in near-darkness.

Incandescent lamps had been built, and even operated, for a few hours, before Edison began his own laboratory experiments — scientific curiosities. Then, too, electric lighting was not new, for Bush had exhibited a practical arc lamp and dynamo at the Mechanics' Fair in Boston the year before. But the practical incandescent lamp and seating for a man with the chemical and electrical training, plus the tireless persistency of Edison, to tackle the problem.

Search For Filament

Edison knew that the filament, or burner as he called it, would prove to be enclosed in a glass globe and the air exhausted, but the big problem was to find a filament that would last.

In his search for filament material he tried, in turn, some 1,600 different kinds of vegetable fibers and ores. What persistence it must have taken to go on and on, and on after each one of the materials had been carefully tried and failed!

Later he came to the conclusion that some form of carbon must be used for the filament, because carbon could be burned longer and at a higher temperature than most metals, without its burning out. Among the things which he carbonized in his search were lamp-wick, cotton, celluloid, cocoanut, hair, cork, cotton soaked in boiling tar, drawing paper, fish-line, lampblack, paper saturated with tar, punk, red hairs from the beard of J. H. Mackenzie (the man who taught him telegraphy), thread, tissue paper and wood splints.

Burns Forty Hours

One after another he carbonized these materials until he came to cotton thread. By two nights and a day Edison and his Assistant, Batchelor, kept at it trying to extract pieces of carbonized thread from a number of ears after they had carbonized them. Each in turn was so fragile that it broke. Three times, after one was pulled from the mould, the filaments were broken before they were sealed in the bulbs.

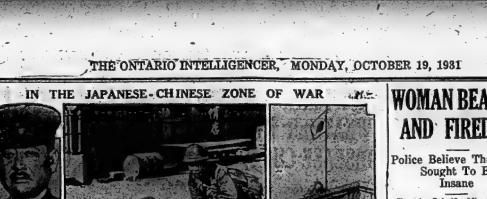
But finally one was sealed in and the air exhausted. The current was turned on and the night they had so long drained met their day. The lamp burned, and burned and burned—not for a few seconds or minutes, as the previous ones had, but for 40 hours. Another great discovery had entered the pages of history and the date was October 1879.

Mr. Edison was called to the aid of the United States Government in the war. For years the United States had depended upon Europe for supplying it with various chemicals and supplies, and because of this American industries suffered seriously sometimes.

Realizing his own and his country's dependence, Mr. Edison, back in 1914 plunged into the mysteries of synthetic chemistry, and, as a result of his experiments, evolved processes for the manufacture of much products required by munitions makers and others as carbolic acid, sulfuric oil, surfuric, sulfite, salts, acetanilid, para-nitro-acetanilid, paraphenylenediamine, para-amidophenol, benzidine, benzol, toluol, xylol, solvent naptha and naphthaflakes.

Where eight to ten months ordinarily are required to construct a benzol plant for instance, "The Wizard of Menlo Park" had one built and producing in forty-five days. By getting his plans all worked out beforehand on paper, and employing shifts of men 24 hours a day, he was able to build a complete carbolic acid plant in eighteen days after the work of construction began.

Soon its output was six tons a day. Thus, his genius was applied to the building of two benzol and nine chemical plants in various parts of the country, which were of incalculable service to the United States Army and Navy in producing products needed in the manufacture of explosives.



Late in 1915 Edison was appointed by Secretary Daniels head of the Navy Consulting Board, upon which there were a score or more of other Americans pre-eminent in various fields of inventive research. He was then working about eighteen hours a day, but he said he was "still too busy" to lend a hand to Uncle Sam. Later, when it became clear that the United States was to enter the war, Edison devoted his entire time to Government problems in his laboratory and aboard a vessel provided by the Navy Department.

IN THE JAPANESE-CHINESE ZONE OF WAR

As Japanese aeroplanes continue to bomb Chinese strongholds and Nippon warships steam to continue the offensive against China in the Manchurian sector, these graphic pictures, taken at consiable personal risk to the photographer, show how the Japs are waging war on their traditional foe around the mouth of Mukden. The lower photograph shows officers, left, of the Japanese artillery directing the fire of their batteries on Chinese forces in Manchuria. This bombardment of retreating Chinese troops followed the capture of Mukden the previous day. The flag of the empire of the rising sun is shown (upper right) flying over the wall surrounding Mukden. The Jap machine gunners are shown aiming at a few scattered Chinese soldiers in Mukden (top, centre), while General Hanzo Kanaya, chief of the general staff of the Japanese War Ministry, is shown at the upper left.

SPEED LIMIT LIFT IS URGED

Boards of Trade Say 35-Mile Maximum Too Low

Windsor, Oct. 17—Abolition of the 35-mile an hour maximum motor speed limit for passenger vehicles, and substitution for it of a law based on safe driving was urged in a resolution adopted at the closing session of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and the Chambers of Commerce. The resolution, which was introduced by the Kitchener Board of Trade, was the subject of much discussion, but on a dissenting voice was heard.

Every delegate who spoke on the subject supported the opinion that the 35-mile limit is too low, and, as a result, it was changed.

All felt that the limit could be abolished without an increase in the number of accidents, providing the ban against reckless driving was strictly enforced.

On the suggestion of George Marsh of Hamilton, General Freight Manager of the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway, the resolution was passed so as to apply only to passenger vehicles. Mr. Marsh held the view that the speed of heavy trucks and buses should be left to the discretion of the Department of Highways.

The organization passed a resolution touching a somewhat similar subject introduced by the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce. It covered the present many business in stopping for passengers "almost any place and without pulling into the curb or off the partially off the pavement."

A. N. Smith, Cornwall, was elected President, succeeding T. J. Paterson, North Bay. Other new officers are: Hon. Presidents: G. C. Marin, Hamilton; Cecil Bethune, Ottawa; Fred Newton, Picton and T. J. Patton, North Bay. First Vice-President, J. G. Crawford, Port William; Second Vice-President, Justus Wilson; Third Vice-President, Major J. O. Thorne, Toronto; Secretary-Treasurer, T. Family Narrowly Escape Death ' A Gas Explosion

Windsor, Oct. 19.—Three people narrowly escaped death when a cottage was badly damaged by a gas explosion at Riverside Saturday night. Williams Adams, his wife, Jennie, and their daughter, Lorraine, who had only moved into the house that day, were thrown to the floor by the blast. Fire which broke out afterwards was extinguished by the neighbors. Loss was estimated at $2,000. The roof of the house was shifted, the walls bulged, and the stove was completely demolished.

Police Believe That Man Sought To Be Insane

Toronto, Oct. 19.—Miss Ellen McLaney, 45, was severely beaten and then wounded by a gun in the hands of a man, believed by police to be insane, who broke into her apartment here Saturday evening. She is in hospital in a very critical condition.

The man fled after the shooting and escaped through crowded streets early today. He has not been apprehended.

The assailant battered Miss McLaney's skull with the weapon and then fired at her. Her cries for assistance were unheard and the revolver shot was muffled.

The woman did not lose consciousness and after the man had gone she staggered a distance of twenty-five feet to the office of a dentist, Dr. G. Knapp.

PRODUCTION HIGH IN SEPT.

Output of Gold For One Month Highest On Record

Toronto, Oct. 19.—A new high record for September production of gold in Canada by Ontario gold mines last month, according to figures prepared by the Ontario Department of Mines.

A marked advance in value of output in the Province over Camp features the report. Although the number of tons of ore milled over the preceding month, the grade was higher.

Production of gold bullion, exclusive of exchange, from all Ontario mines was $2,850,284, an increase of $301,836 over August and of nearly $600,000 over September.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 59. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

All the following day Jane thought fast and furiously. She had felt the purpose for which Tarzan had asked a few words with her. She knew she must be prepared to give him her answer. Again, was it to be? Did she love him or did not love him.

She realized the spell that had been upon her in the depths of the Hot-off jungle. Here there was no spell of enchantment. Nor did this immaculate young Frenchman appeal to the primitive woman in her as had to stalwart forest-god. Why, he had not even a mane!

She thought of Clayton. Here was a man of social position, culture and wealth. She knew his was the sort of love a civilized woman should crave. Clayton would be its garden. "Won't you say 'Yes,' Jane?" he pleaded. "I will devote my life to making you happy." What could she say?

That evening Tarzan caught Jane alone. For the first time, she realized the depths of his love. "You do not love me then?" Tarzan asked quietly. She was strangely silent. "You will be happier without me," he continued simply. "Civilization will bore you. Soon you will long for freedom.

"I'd rather see you happy than be happy myself. I know now you could never be happy with—an Ape." Bitterness tinged his voice. "Don't say that!" she cried. "You do not understand . . . Forgive me, for I may never see you again." A strange hesitancy in tone called. Unmindful, he felt something pressed into his hand.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

Upstairs in a semi-darkened room, a tall, gaunt figure stood looking down at the bed, where Jim lay sullenly smoking a cigarette. The vaquero's eyes were swollen, and his face still bore the scars of that lusty battle, yet even in the darkness those eyes were lighted with little gleams of undying fire. At last Morales spoke.

"Jim mio, what would you do when a man comes between you and all your life's desires?"

"Kill him," came the dispassionate reply.

Morales nodded.

"Who is it now, senor?"

"The Americano, Radcliffe. Within a little time he dies."

The vaquero shrugged. "Why not? Have you another cigarette?"

CHAPTER XXX.

All that next day Morales denied himself to everyone, even to Jim and Adela. Leaving word that he was not to be disturbed, he remained locked in his room, and not until the following morning did he call Adela to him.

Yet to Adela those hours, as they passed, were marvelously rose-colored. A new world, a new life lay in all its perfect promise just ahead. She had never known happiness such as this—this ecstasy of living that made her heart sing triumphantly, even while she waited her uncle's call.

The summons did not come unexpectedly. From the first it had been clear that whatever feelings her uncle might have about her love for Ted he would say little until he had thought it out to the very end. That was Morales's way.

But the very hour she entered his room, Adela sensed approaching conflict. She knew at once that the present moments would call for all the patience and fortitude she had possessed. Morales sat quietly behind the long mahogany table where lay a number of papers, some yellow from age. The curtains of the window had admitted only a faint half-light. Adela paused to the window to see more clearly.

"How often, my uncle, must I find you ruining those aristocratic eyes? There's less, better. Look what, a bright, sunny world you've been leaving from you." She put her arm about his shoulder.

But Morales only frowned at the scattered papers before him. With a little sigh the girl tossed aside and passed her hand over his luminous hair and dropped to her knees beside him.

"What is it, mio mio? Why are you unhappy on this day when I wait all the world to be happy, gloriously utterly happy, as I am? Have you made it up in your mind to quarrel with me?"

He looked gravely to the young, triumphant voice. He looked silently into her face, where her eyes spoke to him of a happiness the old Spaniard had forgotten for many years. Slowly Morales spoke.

"Last night and early this morning I have been reading old letters and documents left by former usurers of this hacienda." He hesitated, almost lovingly the yellow papers before him.

"They are quite old, you see. They come down from generation after generation of men bearing Spanish names. Always a Morales has been lord over this land. In a past one may be proud of. For forty years it has been in my hands, and I have added to its acres and increased the number of its cattle and the power of its name. I have made a domain of this land, a dominion, yet today I am not content. I had hoped when the time came for me to join my ancestors that I should see you with children and a husband fit to become master here."

"That is hardly the right order, uncle," she smiled up at him. "But I think I understand you. You are going to tell me Ted Radcliffe is not be a fit husband for a Morales."

His eyes refused to meet hers. "I would go farther. I would say no American could be. Their ways are not our ways. And yet, too, I confess the fault in part has been mine. One forgets how the years pass. To me you are still a child. I have jealously kept you at my side, not realizing that here is no one worthy of marriage with you. One forgets. It was wrong that you should be kept here at home on the border, among peons and half-castes, and American adventurers. I should have kept you longer in Mexico City. Already you are more American than Mexican. That was the fault of your hot-headed father. But that is over."

A spot of color glowed dangerously in the girl's cheeks. "Uncle, aren't you taking a very long way of saying that you don't want me to marry Ted?"

"I am not to be saying merely this? No, chiquita, what I am really saying is that you will never, never so long as I live, marry Ted Radcliffe."

For a moment the girl looked steadily into his fixed eyes. Then she rose slowly and moved away before him, with little clenched hands.

"I am sorry, uncle, that I tell you mio, that if there is one thing I am sure of in life, it is that I will marry Ted. I will do my best to give up everything I have ever possessed, to live in a way much poorer than your driven peon, to be happy in a hut with him if he takes quarrels that hurt us both, and do nothing more. It is not fair that you ask me to choose when I told that I shall not marry, for I may be poor and he will be rich as well."

For a time the old Mexican sat brooding before the girl. He seemed to be considering something within himself. Then he spoke.

"Who shall say? And yet I rather doubt that you will find happiness in poorer than your driven peon. So much I know of Mexico City tomorrow morning."

She was just pleading now. Her voice was laughter. "Uncle, I have no least intention of going to Mexico City tomorrow or the next month."

Morales's thin lips of Morales tightened. "Then you have twenty-four hours to revise your intentions. In the morning we go to Mexico City. Jim will drive you to the station in the morning. Now I must think, that you are in Mexico. Now leave me."

Head held high, she left him, but her hands were still clenched, and once in her own room she threw herself on the bed and gave way to a storm of tears. They were more of anger than of fear, those tears, yet so fierce was the thought that everything Morales threatened he had the right and power to do. They were facts. He had said it. In Mexico, it lay wholly within his power as guardian to send her wherever he chose. Slowly the sobs died. She lay on the bed, chin in hand, and looked resentfully out at the bright morning. Gusts of a frenzy of grief and anger, her little fist beat upon the pillow and she starts started to her feet. From beyond the window she heard the mockery of a harpsichord humming a Spanish song of love and fate. Suddenly the thought of separation from Ted, of living exiled from him even for a time, became intolerable. For the next half-hour she lay outstretched on the bed, brooding, planning, and at last she tiptoed to the door. Just outside she heard someone breathing and knew that already her uncle had set a guard over her. She was a prisoner! Again her eyes flashed in rebellion.

Kicking off her shoes she tiptoed back to the window. Nothing moved outside the big hacienda. Her rendezvous still stood by the gate, and now she suddenly smiled. Quickly she threw off the light silk dress and slipped into a traveling costume. Again she listened at the door and heard the soft breathing of her uncle's servant outside. She walked to the window and leaned out. The palm and yard beyond lay empty in the glittering sunlight. Thickly on both sides of the window the old wisteria clung to the stucco walls. Softly she raised herself to the low window sill, and, hand over hand, very gently, she lowered herself, then reached down with one slender leg until she found a resting place in the gnarled vine. In less than a minute her foot had touched the soft grass beneath, and in another instant she was running down the log path toward the tall black gates.

She looked back. A peon lounged beneath the eucalyptus. Toward him a dog lay, lazily scratching in the shadow of the wall.

She was through the gate now and vaulting into the seat, touched the starter. The hum of the motor broke the desert stillness and a moment later she was speeding for the open road.

The revolt against Morales has begun.

Once she gained the broad Vierdi road the mile posts flashed by. At each rise she glanced behind her, half expecting to see her uncle's car in pursuit, but the run to Verdi was safely made, and an hour later the fugitive drew up before the mayor's quarters.

ARTIFICIAL WEATHER IN DISEASE CURE

Toronto Architect Says Present Buildings Insufficient

HEAT CONTROL

Manufactured Atmospheric Conditions Important

Toronto, Oct. (C.P.) — Mechanically-manufactured climate for hospitals and other similar institutions was urged as immediately practicable and desirable by the Canadian Research architect, James Govan, M.R.A.I.C., of Toronto, in addressing the American Hospital Association.

The Canadian scientist presented an air conditioning plan which, he stated, could be carried out, without boosting the original cost unduly or raising expenditures for operation, average present-day buildings, he said, had poor capacity for keeping heat out. Their walls and roofs, in effect, leaked heat, making it difficult to keep them cool in summer and more costly than necessary to heat in winter.

The first step, he declared, was construction of buildings with insulated walls and roofs. Such buildings, he said, were already in use in Canada which had shown that the size of the heating plants normally used was practically 100 per cent in excess of requirements due to the increased efficiency in heating as a result of insulated construction.

"Without adding anything whatever to the building cost under Canadian climatic conditions," said Mr. Govan, "the first cost of the heating plant can be reduced approximately 40 per cent, as compared with that in a building of ordinary construction."

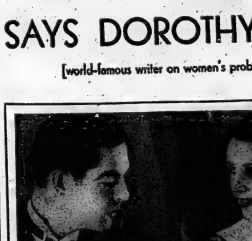
Savings thus effected, he asserted made it possible to instal air conditioning apparatus for a moderate cost to the hospital of making its own interior weather to suit the patients' needs in an insulated building, said this Canadian authority, would be considerably less than inefficient heating in ordinary construction with the added feature of providing relief during summer hot spells.

He quoted medical authorities to show the value of manufacturing atmospheric conditions to order in treating specific diseases. In premature infants, he said, 40 per cent mortality rate has two peaks—in very cold weather and during excessively hot spells. Mechanical air conditioning, during a four-year test, cut the death rate in the Infant Hospital at Boston, Mass. In this case, the skin could be put in a more healthy condition than modern ingenuity, driven reduced, moisture effusions removed and discomfort incident to many diseases eliminated, Mr. Govan said.

MAKE CANDIED FRUITS

The prospect of an important new home industry is rapidly taking shape as the result of experimental work carried out by the Federal Experimental Station at Summerland, B.C. Apricots, peaches and pearss are the fruits largely used for the candied process and high by attractive results have been secured. One of the chief reasons home is considering commercial production, while several small operations are in progress at Summerland, it has the advantage of offering a winter income inasmuch as the fruit is largely shipped out as canned in the usual way with the sandring season being occupied out during the later winter months.

BULLET THROUGH HEAD



Hanna, Alta., Oct. 17—Ten-year-old Murray Halverton lies in hospital here with a bullet in the back of his head, and in a precarious condition doctors state but there is a chance for recovery although the bullet passed through the brain.

With his 13-year-old brother, Roy, the wounded boy was playing with some gophers they had caught when their little playfulness developed into a fight, accidentally discharged, the bullet entering the boy's forehead and lodging in the back of the brain.

"BROKEN ILLUSIONS CAN NEVER BE MENDED"

YOU GIRLS AND WIVES who long to win love and hold it—live up to a man's IDEAL!

"It's a deep need of man's nature to idealize a woman—to think of her as more delicate, more exquisite than himself.

"Don't let the 'little' things—careless, unfeminine details—spoil your lovely effect!

"SUCH a 'small' offense against daintiness as a faded shoulder ribbon peeping out

...frayed lace edging visible when you lift up your arm . . . a slip not so colour-fresh as it might be. Such things as these rob you of all illusion in his' eyes!

"And broken illusions can never be mended.

"Perhaps you don't realize how often a silk slip may show.

"I beg you all to do these two very simple things:

1. Buy the loveliest, most exquisite lingerie you can.
2. Keep it always colour-fresh, beautiful.

"JUST knowing your underthings are lovely does something to you! It makes you FEEL feminine and charming. And when you feel it you ARE!

"But how can we keep delicate lingerie fresh and colourful!' girls often say to me.

"Frequent washing leaves it so faded and lovely-looking.

"It is true that ordinary 'good' soaps take a way its COLOUR and the charming new look of freshness, but this is never the case with Lux. These wonderful flakes are especially made to preserve COLOUR and NEWNESS.

Such glimpses as this do not escape you're feminine and exquisite!

"AND AT HOME: Your very SURROUNDINGS can help give you confidence of charm. Pretty curtains, cushions, colourful table linens, all form part of the magic spell if kept ever lovely with Lux."

PICTON PLANS PUBLIC WORKS

Main Street To Be Widened at Cost of $4,000

Picton, Oct. 19—Picton Main St. will be widened, it was decided at a meeting of the Town Council on Thursday night. This will cost about $4,000, half of which will be provided by the grant from the Unemployment Relief Fund. To date the grant is $2,500, and the remaining money will be spent on sidewalk repairs. If a further grant can be secured, a water main will be built on Centre Street. This is greatly needed as the present pipe is rapidly a good deal of time at the council meeting. Members were in favour of such a main if government assistance can be secured.

The town feels that it has not received a grant from the Unemployment Relief Fund in proportion to grants other towns of the size of Picton have received. The present unemployment is not so bad as it is here.

The Upper Canada Band returned from Earlville, N.Y., where he took a carload of apples to the band on there.

The Bay of Quinte lot brought 40 good prices, there being a demand for T. B. tested cattle. Mr. Foster is sales agent for Holstein cattle in this district.

At the special council meeting on Thursday evening the following grants were granted permission to hold Poppy Days on November 7th and 11th.

PALE AND SICK, BUT DIDN'T KNOW WHY

So she went from bad to worse. But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) brought her back to health.

"A FEW years ago, before I was married," writes Mrs. Fred McClelland, Desbarats, Ontario, "I was ailing for over a year. I really didn't know what was wrong with me, because parents, at that time, thought I young people should never be sick.' I had no blood, and was so pale! If I went upstairs I would have to sit down when I reached the top. Finally a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. . . I took them, and had the color come back to my cheeks, and looked myself again."

"I looked myself again." (Sgd.) Mrs. Fred McClelland.

There is a scientific explanation for the remarkable results brought about by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic). The iron and other elements in the pills increase the amount of haemoglobin or oxygen-carrying agent in the blood. This has been proven by official hospital tests.

The increased oxygen revitalizes the tissues just as a draft revives a fire. The result is renewed health—better appearance —greater happiness.

Go to a drug store today and get a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Don't put off this wise decision. Be sure to get "Dr. Williams'"—so that the druggist will know exactly what you need. 50 cents a package. 21

MILLION DOLLAR PAYROLL IS IN GREAT DANGER

How the Local Situation Affects The General Prosperity of The Entire Community

In regard to the local situation, while railway employees in Belleville still number around one thousand (1,000) and the annual payroll over one million dollars a year, several hundred have been laid off, and many are working 36 hours and 40 hours per week. All employees in the running trades are working on greatly reduced mileage schedules, and all salaried employees have accepted ten per cent cut.

Every business man in Belleville has suffered directly or indirectly from this condition, and to quote from a London Free Press editorial on Monday, September 7, 1931: "Yet while all this is going on, trucks and buses, which pay little or no tax and give a minor service to the public, are flourishing. The trucks, using roads paid for by the motorists, are taking the railway freight traffic on the Eastern lines. The passenger buses also using fine highways for which the average motorist is paying through the nose, are responsible for the loss in passenger traffic. Yet they pay little more in taxes than does the owner of an ordinary motor car. They have little rolling stock, they have no right-of-way to maintain, they have no expensive stations to build and keep up, they have no hotels on which to pay deficits, they offer service only in a restricted area. Meantime the railways are paying exceedingly heavy taxes, but the people as a whole, are paying the taxes of the bus and truck operators. Certainly if any competition is unfair that is. No one wants to put the busses and trucks out of business, but there should be an equalization of taxation as between the railway and other common carriers, so that the burden shall not be unjustly on one group."

However, while in the ordinary course of events years are required to obtain any legislation to deal with such a situation, shippers, merchants, jobbers, in fact business men in all the channels of commerce, can do themselves, the railways and the country a great and a real benefit by patronizing the railways.

When they spend a dollar with the railway they are assured that it will return again, since railway employees invariably establish good homes and are good Canadian citizens.

Why We are Soliciting Canadian Merchants and Manufacturers to

SHIP BY RAIL

BECAUSE in patronizing the Railway the Merchant and Manufacturer are supporting an established, necessary and highly effective service of transportation and are protecting one of their best markets.

Not only is the Railway a great contributing factor in purchases for its own needs, but the many thousands of Railway Employees and their dependants have a purchasing power that greatly assists in developing and maintaining active money circulation in every community in which Railway Employees reside.

SHIP BY RAIL TO OUR MUTUAL ADVANTAGE

RAILWAY LAYOFFS HAVE A MARKED EFFECT ON TRADE

Every Business in Belleville Has Felt in Some Manner Railroad Wage Reductions on Railroads

Business men and economists today fail to give sufficient thought to the ramifications of the situations facing the railways today. The effect of continued reductions of staff on the railways upon Canada's markets is not credited by the average citizen.

In Canada 30,000 railway employees have been thrown out of work and hundreds of thousands of others have accepted wage reductions and short hours. In the United States the railway employees number 209,000 less than in March 1929. This number probably exceeds the entire contribution to employment being made by artificial stimulation and government expenditures and public works in that country.

While one cannot say that the present depression in world trade has been caused by decreases in the business of the railways which have necessitated layoffs, there is no doubt but that they have had their effect and that effect has been tremendous. One would be fairly safe in saying that there is no industry in Canada which has not suffered and the market represented in the railway employees pay envelopes has been cut.

All for one and one for all, united we stand, divided we fall. Belleville railway men are asking support and protection of their fellow citizens, on what they consider a fair and reasonable basis.

W. GRENZBACH WINS TROPHY

Keeps Trophy Permanently Winning Three Times

Peterboro, Oct. 17.—W. O. Grenzbach, R.R. 7, Woodstock, became the permanent winner of the coveted Frost Fence Challenge Cup when yesterday when he won the trophy for the third time by finishing first in the competition for the best plowed land in sod, tractor or team, which was a feature of the closing day of the international plowing matches. Grenzbach first won the challenge cup in 1927 and repeated last year. John R. Hargreave of Beachville, the winner in 1928 and 1929, was second today in the rubber match between the two rivals.

For the third day in succession rain cut down the attendance, but made no difference in the competition. The ploughs were 50, the matches were 50, which was 66 higher than the 1930 total and 82 over 1929.

The plowmen and officials were guests of the City Council last night at a banquet, at which 700 guests sat down. Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, was the principal speaker. The various prizes and trophies were presented to the winners.

A new horseshoe-pitching record, surpassing the best previous score registered either at the Provincial plowing matches or at the Royal Winter Fair, was registered in the singles competition held in connection with the international plowing matches near here today when Joseph Godden of Mount Dennis made a score of 263 to win first place. Godden scored 50 ringers, which is also thought to be a record. D. A. Tiffin of Islington, Ont, was second with 55 and N. Brady of Fenwick third, with 162.

Mrs. D. O. Jackson of Toronto won the ladies' single with a score of 121, the only other contestant, Mrs. D. Napier of Toronto, registering 81. Both were awarded silver-plated horseshoes.

Today's competitions resulted as follows:

Peterboro teams special, open to teams owned by Peterboro County residents—1, Walter Bowles; 2, Alex. Hubbell; 3, R. A. Garbutt.

York County plowmen who won the inter-county competition open to teams of three men from each county at Stratford in 1930, repeated this year and captured the Bank of Montreal Trophy for the second year in succession.

York County led in points in the Inter-County competition of the International Plowing Match held here this week with 261 points. Brant County was second with 256 3-4 points; Victoria third with 253 1-3 points, and Peterborough fourth with 249 1-3 points.

The results are:

York 261 points; Brant 256 3-4; Victoria 253 1-3; Peterborough 249 1-3; Halton 247 3-4; Perth 247 3-4; Durham 239 1-2; Simcoe 236 1-4; Middlesex 230 1-2; Peel 229 3-4; Waterloo 228; Frontenac 226 1-2; Hastings 241; Leeds 213 1-2.

CUB'S FORMER OWNER DEAD

Charles W. Murphy Ran Shoestring Into a Million

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 17. — Charles Webb Murphy, former owner of the Chicago Cubs, who boasted he had "run a shoestring into a million," is dead.

Murphy died at his home here late yesterday, the victim of a stroke of apoplexy suffered last June. He was sixty-three years old.

He owned the Cubs during the famous "Tinker to Evers to Chance" days, and during his eight-year reign, the Cubs won two world championships, in 1907 and 1908, four National League titles, finishing second twice and third another two seasons. He was one of the most picturesque characters of the sport, and often engaged in bitter quarrels with the powers of organized baseball.

Starting his career as a sports writer in Cincinnati, Murphy resigned in 1904 to become publicity director for the New York Giants. While affiliated with the Giants, he learned the Cubs could be purchased. And induced the late Charles P. Taft, former Cincinnati publisher, to advance him $105,000 to buy the Cubs. In 1913, Murphy sold his interests after a storm of protest, which followed his dismissal of Frank L. Chance, the "peerless leader" of baseball fame and later hiring of Johnny Evers, who has succeeded Chance. He engaged Hank O'Day, veteran umpire, to replace Evers.

Murphy was reported to have sold out for the sum of $750,000.

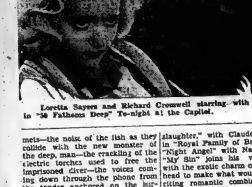
FRATERNAL IDEALS NEED

Toronto, Oct. 17—Need for the spreading of fraternal ideals, especially in times of distress and disorder, was stressed by Hon. W. H. Price, Provincial Attorney General, addressing members of the Independent Order of Foresters here last night. In this way a worldwide brotherhood of love and fraternity would be created, he asserted. The meeting was called in tribute to Joseph Powley, of Toronto, recently elected world head of the I.O.O.F.

Embarrassing Moments

TWO-MAN CARS ON BELT LINE

Hamilton, Oct. 17—Two-man cars will be operated on the belt line of the Hamilton Street Railway for one more year at least. This was the decision reached by the city council at a special meeting last night. The decision postponed for a time introduction of one-man cars on this route, which has long been a matter of discussion here.



AMUSEMENTS

"FIFTY FATHOMS DEEP" IS SENSATIONAL

"Fifty Fathoms Deep", showing tonight for the last time at the Capitol Theatre, leaves two outstanding mental queries. How did they photograph the scene three hundred feet beneath the sea, and how were they able to record the sounds at that depth. A large glass bell, submerged to a required depth containing the cameraman and his equipment, answers the first query, but the question of the recording of sound remains a deep secret.

It is uncanny to hear the hiss of escaping air from the divers' helmets—the noise of the fish as they glide with the new theatre of the deep, man—the crackling of the electric torches used to free the imprisoned diver—the voices coming down through the phone from the tender anchored on the surface—three hundred feet above!

These are but a few of the moments of absorbing interest to be found in "Fifty Fathoms Deep" The story of friendship, broken by the intrusion of a gold-digger who infatuates the more appreciable of two pals, and the tragedy following —down in the depths of the ocean —makes "Fifty Fathoms Deep" a picture well worth seeing. Jack Holt, Richard Cromwell and Loretta Sayers play parts of the hero and the fascinating gold-digger respectively.

"Dangerous Trails", an episode of Adventure in Africa, the Pathe Sound News and the Audio Review complete an all-round excellent programme.

WHEREVER SHOWN "MY SIN" DRAWS LARGE CROWDS

Ere Pearl Dresserware Tonight

All ladies attending the Belle Theatre tonight will receive a Blue Pearl Dresserware gift with the compliments of the management.

Supported by a large cast of well known character players, Tallulah Bankhead, the electrifying, internationally famous stage actress, and Frederic March make their first joint bow to the screen world in "My Sin" at the Belle Theatre to-night and Tuesday, matinee daily.

Miss Bankhead's appearance in "My Sin" follows quickly after her recent sensational personal triumph in "Tarnished Lady," her first motion picture role. A daughter of Alabama's Congressman William B. Bankhead, niece of Alabama's Senator John H. Bankhead, the gorgeous new cinema star triumphed for eight years on the London stage before returning to her native land to captivate moving picture audiences.

March has been seen recently in a series of powerful roles, in "Manslaughter," with Claudette Colbert, in "Royal Family of Broadway," in "Night Angel" with Nancy Carroll and "My Sin" joins his virile talent with the exotic charm of Miss Bankhead to make what would be an exciting romantic combination.

In the supporting cast are Harlan Davenport, Scott Kolk, Anne Sutherland, Margaret Adams, Jay Fassett and Lily Cahill.

"My Sin" a strong emotion-filled story of a woman's regeneration, is the dramatization of Fred Jackson's thrilling story, Tallulah Bankhead, a cheap cabaret singer, kills her brutal husband in self-defence. Tried for murder she is defended by Frederic March a down-and-out lawyer, and acquitted. Free, she seeks to bury her past, becomes a successful interior decorator, is wooed and won by a scion of a proud and promising family.

But her past will not stay hidden. Her reputation menaced by scandal, she is rescued again by March, who, inspired by his unexpressed love for this woman, has re-established himself in his profession. March's efforts are fruitless, but, offered a chance to go on with her marriage, in spite of her past, the girl realizes true happiness for her lies with the man whom fate sent twice to save her.

The setting of the story shifts startlingly from an indolent tropical scene to New York's brilliant millionaire world. The picture is the product of George Abbott's direction. His recent pictures include "Secrets of a Secretary" and "Golden Heaven."

"THE MIRACLE WOMAN" WITH BARBARA STANWYCK NEXT AT THE CAPITOL

Continuing the run of the season's outstanding pictures, Manager Holmes announces "The Miracle Woman", Barbara Stanwyck's greatest starring vehicle, for exhibition on Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, at the Capitol.

"The Miracle Woman" has a most unusual plot, an exceptionally strong cast, and an aspect which will find reflection in everyone who sees it.

The Reverend Fallon dies whilst preparing a sermon, and his daughter, Faith, feels that his death is due to the inhuman way he was to have been deposed of his church. She enters the pulpit and denounces the congregation. Her oratorical powers are heard by Hornsby, an adventurer, who sees a way to make a fortune.

He approaches the girl with a proposition, and the Temple of Happiness results, a humbug church exploiting the doctrine of faith healing. Several shillabers are employed to act the lame, the crippled and the blind, all part of the immense graft.

A young musician, blind, decides on suicide, but is diverted by the voice of a girl over the radio, who denounces quitters as cowards. Inspired by the voice, he visits the Temple of Happiness, and meets Faith. She is interested in the blind young man, and later falls in love with him, much to the chagrin of the unscrupulous Hornsby, whose own regard for the girl is a little different to that of a business partner.

Hornsby's financial head, Bill Welford, mysteriously commits suicide, and Hornsby uses this event as pressure on Faith to go away with him. She refuses, and threatens to expose him to the congregation. He counter-threatens to turn of the lights, but confuses the wires and is electrocuted. A fire is caused by the fusing of the wires, and the most surprising sequel results.

"The Miracle Woman" will be shown at the Capitol daily at 2.30, 7.15 and 9.10 on Tuesday and Wednesday.

JOAN CRAWFORD COMING TO BELLE IN "THIS MODERN AGE"

Pauline Frederick Featured

"To the millions of sport fans the name of the late Knute Rockne immediately brings to mind football. To the millions of air-minded citizens the name Lindbergh immediately brings to mind airplanes. So, to the millions of movie goers has the name Joan Crawford come to mean carefree youth, pep and beauty.

In "This Modern Age," continual comedy-drama coming to the Belle Wednesday, Joan Crawford has the greatest opportunity to give vent to her boundless spirit that has ever been given to her. While in "Laughing Sinners" she portrayed a member of the gay younger generation, there was a decidedly serious note. In this latest picture Joan is thoroughly herself from beginning to end.

The story is fundamentally one of pleasure-mad youth in Paris without a care in the world and with the where-withal to carry on to the fullest extent. Pauline Frederick, playing the youthful mother of Joan by her own happy-go-lucky mode of life furnishes the incentive to the younger people to go to the limit of hilarity.

The supporting cast includes Neil Hamilton, who starred with Norma Shearer in "Strangers May Kiss"; Monroe Owsley, last seen opposite Gloria Swanson in "Indiscreet"; Hobart Bosworth, Emma Dunn, Albert Conti, Adrienne d'Ambricourt and Marcelle Corday.

Marmora

MARMORA—On Wednesday evening the Young Ladies' Sodality of the Sacred Heart Church held a very successful and enjoyable social evening.

The entertainment consisted of songs, duets, comedian and a dialogue, "Mischievous, Mattie".

The cast of characters was as follows:

Mrs. Greene—Mary Brady; Mrs. Grey—Anna Crawford; Mattie — Dorena Gehan; Annie — Kathleen Doyle.

The winners of the contests were: Miss Anna Mannion and Miss Rita Deacon.

In conclusion a very dainty luncheon was served and dancing was enjoyed for a few hours.

The weekly meeting of the Marmora Girl Guides took place on Tuesday evening in the White Hall with a good attendance.

Inspection was carried out by Captain Mrs. F. S. Pearce after which there was a short session of business. The games, "Pa, me, and baby", was taken by the five patrols, the Lily of the Valley patrol winning first. Honisitry patrol and Pompergel patrol following.

The first named patrol secures the highest number of points for the evening. Patrol leader Kathleen Giles read the first chapter of "The Bruce" and several songs were sung at the meeting closing with tags.

The meeting will lack the services of Lieut. D. Hascie for two months as she is spending that time in Toronto.

The reorganized First Marmora Troop of Boy Scouts held another interesting meeting in the council chambers of the town hall on Wednesday evening, with the five patrols being well represented. Scoutmaster Kerr called the troop to order and after attendance had been taken a good game, "Stealing the Whistle from the Bear" was well carried out. "Jim" was next played and thirty well grown objects being arrayed on a table. Each patrol was given one minute to view the articles, then each member was requested to write down the names of the objects by memory. Out of an attendance of forty-five twenty of the boys were successful in getting twenty-five named. Only eight failed to name twenty. Patrols were then given various drills in turn after which the troop was dismissed.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Woods of Campbellford spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. C. McInroy.

Mr. McInroy and Miss McInroy of Roseneath visited Mr. and Mrs. A. McCallum on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Dunford and family spent last week-end with relatives at Eldorado.

Mrs. P. Sopha and daughter Florence spent last Monday in Campbellford.

HIGHWAY RICH IN HISTORY

Stretches Along Upper St. Lawrence Abound With Mementoes

Kingston, Ont. (Written for the Canadian Press by G. H. Williamson)—The first ship which American forces sent a cannon ball crashing from across the St. Lawrence is still to be seen on the shore of the King's Highway overlooking the Upper St. Lawrence River. This ship is old Fort Wellington at Prescott. The shot was fired in the war of 1815, and the defenders retaliated with a shot that smashed through roof of the Ogdensburg court house. The Prescott fortifications are the most complete of the block house type, with an embankment around it.

Below Prescott, at the head of the Galops Rapids, stands a cairn that attracts the attention of the tourist. It was erected to show where Port de Levis stood on Chimney Island (Isle Royale) opposite Fort de Levis, the last stand point of France in Canada. The French garrison surrendered on August 29, 1760, to the British under General Amherst, one of the officers was Maj. Gen. George Washington, afterwards leader of the American Revolutionary forces and first President of the United States of America. The British established siege batteries on the point opposite the island and also on adjacent islands, so that the French had no chance whatever, in view of having no reinforcements. A cannon ball fired in the fight between the French and the British is embedded in the cairn.

At Maitland, near Prescott, one may see a flagpole close to the highway. This was erected by the Women's Institutes on the side of the French fort and shipyard, New Oswegatchie, captured by the British under command of Sir James Yeo in 1760. The women have gone well to mark the spot, but there is a move for a more substantial monument by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada.

One proceeds on to Morrisburg, where Sir James Yeo Whitney practised law before he became Premier of Ontario. Near here is the spot that noted political leader lies buried. Crysler's Farm, where British and Canadians won a decisive victory over American invaders on November 11th, 1813. It is a coincidence that this battle was on the same day of the month as the Great War armistice was signed more than a century afterwards. The memorial on Crysler's Farm, close to the King's Highway, en-route to Montreal, was erected in 1895 by the Historic Sites and Monuments Boards of Canada. Descendants of the vanquished type have made many scratches on the stone, but with the inscription.

The Canadian Press writer, on his way eastward, stopped at a little cemetery along the King's Highway, two miles west of Lansdowne, and there saw a white marble monument erected to the memory of a young British soldier. John Davis who fought under Sir John Moore at the battle of Corunna in the Peninsular War. Here is the inscription:

In memory of John Davis
Died April 6, 1876
Aged 86

A pensioner of His Majesty's Ship of Foot. Was engaged in the Battle of Corunna and assisted at the burial of Sir John Moore, when — Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,

As his corpse to the ramparts we hurried;
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero was buried.

At the foot of the inscription there are the Holy Bible and a Crown. John Davis was nineteen when he assisted at the burial of Moore, the Battle of Corunna being fought in 1809.

Piles All Gone

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles go quickly and don't come back. Often in a surprisingly short time. Bad blood circulation in the hemorrhoidal veins caused by sedentary habits, affected parts weak, flabby, almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can reach the real cause of these piles. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 990 cases, he named it HEMROID. Ask at any McKeown's Drug Store says one druggist of HEMROID. Relieves or refund your Pile misery or money back.

Restriction Upon Doctor Urged at Yale

New Haven, Conn.—A plea for stronger restrictions to improve the character of the medical profession was made today by Dr. James R. Angell, president of Yale University, at the opening session of the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Angel painted an unattractive picture of the profession in general, but urged that tremendous gains had been credit for the advances they have made, and encouragement for the aims and purposes they have set up for themselves.

Dr. Angell declared "that some medical men are ruthless in their desire to get rich, others seem Shylock look like a pure philanthropist, the fee-splitting still goes on; that needless operations and probably useless but expensive treatments are ordered by some surgeons and physicians; that the layman is shocked in the land and that the patent medicine business still flourishes, thanks largely to human credulity, human imagination and the assistance of a sometimes venal press."

Dr. Angel describes the medical profession as "the only profession whose controlling purpose is to make itself more or less unnecessary—in other words to commit suicide."

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith discussed "My chief interest in the Care of Men and Women in Industry," in the light of the early efforts in New York State to pass a workmen's compensation law and the present attempts that have been made to break down its effectiveness.

"It is a most commonsense inadequate-ly," Smith said, "because we have not yet succeeded in compensating for all diseases incurred in the course of occupation which are directly traceable to the occupation or its unsanitary surroundings. It applies generally there will continue to be cases such as those of the workers suffering from radium poisoning, which occurred in New Jersey a few years ago."

QUEEN'S HEAD GROUP WITH DOUBLE WIN

Many Surprises Seen in Grid Games of Saturday

TIGERS LUCKY

Montreal Winged Wheelers Seem Headed For Dominion Title

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 19 — Two strong Montreal senior squads and a fighting group of athletes from Kitchener had a field day at the expense of three Toronto senior grid squads Saturday, in the second week's play of the Eastern Canada Big Rugby season, while McGill defeated the University of Toronto by Montreal Winged Wheelers and chased Argos to Toronto, and Kitchener Panthers pulled a surprise and upset Varsity Orphans. Queen City rugby followers slowly watched their hopes of a title playoff in Toronto this Fall, fade away.

In the other three senior fixtures of the afternoon, Queens downed Western in Kingston, Hamilton Tigers defeated Ottawa over the Rough Riders in Ottawa and Sarnia Imperials journeyed to play a draw in the Ambitious City.

One of the surprises was the battle royal in the Ottawa mud when the Big Four champions, Hamilton Tigers, when they met in the Capital City, decided to repeat the Hamilton aggregation were rather lucky to win as they were five of their points on a touch in the first 15 minutes of play.

All the teams will get back to hard training this week in preparing for the final week's drive in an effort to finish on top of their respective groups and seek a berth in the Eastern Canadian playoffs.

By virtue of their victory Saturday, Queen's rest alone at the top of the Intercollegiate race, while McGill and Western are tied for second place with win and one loss each. Varsity are the tailenders having failed to break into the win column in four games, Montreal and Hamilton Tigers lead the Big Four group and Middleweight win over the Orphans created a triple tie in the Senior O.R.F.U. senior series.

The word magnet comes from the fact that the best specimens of lodestone are obtained from Magnesia, a city in Asia Minor.

The name sandwich, given to the world's heaviest wood, means "axe breaker."

The wood duck carries her young around by seizing them by loose skin on the nape of the neck, much in the manner of a cat carry ing a kitten.

ETERNAL CITY DESCRIBED BY REV. DR. BYRNE

Illustrated Slides Showed Beauty of Many Churches in Rome

SPENT FOUR YEARS

Speaker Explained Different Views in Most Interesting Manner

"Rome, the Eternal City," was the subject by an absorbing address delivered by Rev. Dr. Byrne, chancellor of the diocese of Kingston. Dr. Byrne had spent four years in Rome and had many interesting details to tell of the wonders of this city. The lecture was illustrated with slides of the architectural wonders and the treasures of art found in Rome. The auditorium was filled.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Children of Mary of the Church and the speaker was introduced by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. Beginning his address with a description of the ancient temples and buildings of pagan Rome, Dr. Byrne told the legend of its founding and described life in the city in pagan days. The Coliseum, the scene of countless of gladiators and the martyrdom of hundreds of Christians. Views of the picturesque stone bridges, the famous aqueduct bringing water twenty-five miles into Rome, and the ruins of great buildings were flashed on the screen.

Interesting Places

The audience was then taken on a pictorial tour of the city with special attention to the marvellous churches that have built one after another from the days of the early martyrs, great in the annals of the church, had fallen at the hands of their persecutors. There was the Church of Santa Pudenziana, said to be the oldest church in Christendom. This was once a palace where tradition tells, Saint Peter himself had been baptized. Beneath it contains an altar at which he said mass. The Church of St. Peter's, built about the spot, where St. Paul was beheaded. Here two hundred steps climbs on the ground and three churches erected, one above the other. It is called the Church of the Three Fountains.

Many Churches Popular

Relics of the crib in which the infant Jesus was laid are kept in the church of Saint Maria Meggiore, the most popular of the churches of Rome, and Midnight Mass on Christmas Eve, in this church is attended by visitors from America, the ceiling being gilded with the precious metal. The Church of the Holy Cross in Jerusalem contains the veil, thorns from the crown, and a piece of the true Cross brought by Saint Helena. Another church is so named from the fact that it is built on earth brought from Jerusalem. The transverse piece of the Cross of the Good Thief is here preserved, and its marble steps are protected. The wood are those Our Lord trod to meet Pontius Pilate on condemnation. At Good Friday devotions these steps are covered with the faithful waiting to ascend them on their knees. Proof of Succession

Proof of the succession of the Popes from St. Peter was found in the Church of Saint Paul, a modern structure. Another church contained a painting of St. Peter receiving the sacrament as bishop and on one wall is a mosaic showing the change of the Latin language to the Italian. Dr. Byrne also showed pictures of the fine buildings of the Vatican. The marvellous Pieta, Michelangelo's famous statue of Christ in the Arms of His Blessed Mother. The exquisite chapels. Final scenes were pictures of the Papal guards and of the Pope being carried through the streets

TRIBUTE PAID TO T. EDISON

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 19.—Pope Pius XI. expressed deep sorrow at the news of Thomas A. Edison's death, and will send his condolences today through the Apostolic delegate at Washington.

President Hoover eulogized Thomas Edison as the greatest inventor the nation has ever produced, and as the benefactor of all humanity.

Deeply moved by the death of Thomas A. Edison, for nearly forty years his close friend, Henry Ford paid tribute to the inventor as one "who changed the face of the world in his lifetime," and whose work "will influence all the future."

Halvey S. Firestone told the Associated Press "one of the great privileges of my life has been to have the friendship of Mr. Edison and to have enjoyed close association with him."

Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy, and President of the Royal Academy of Italy, described Thomas A. Edison as a "benevolent intellectual giant in commemorating the inventors tors death.

Dr. Albert Einstein, German scientist, regards the inventive genius of Thomas A. Edison as a legacy to the present generation to be used for the betterment of the world.

"In Edison, a great technical inventor, to whom we owe the possibility of alleviation and embellishment of our outward life, has departed from us," Dr. Einstein said.

BLUENOSE RETAINS SCHOONER TROPHY

Bluenose Retains Cup

Winning Second Race from Schooner Thebaud

Capt. John Matheson at Wheel of Thebaud In Today's Race

WIND WAS FRESH

Bluenose Outsailed Challenger Especially In Beat To Weather

By A. D. Merkel, Canadian Press Staff Writer Aboard C. G. S. Lady Laurier by Radiophone to Halifax.

The Gertrude L. Thebaud out of Glocester, Mass., challenger, raced the Halifax Herald International Fishermen's trophy, was today defending up an unexpected battle for the title.

After the drubbing she took yesterday from the Canadian champion Bluenose in the first of a two out of three series under virtually the same conditions of wind and wave, she surprised everyone by hanging her own on the course half of the open ocean course of 38 miles.

The schooners were alternately ahead, but Thebaud was seriously challenged in the home stretch by a year old champion of the North Atlantic fishing fleet.

Bluenose was expected to do better when the weekend work began.

Captain John Matheson, substituting for Captain Ben Pine aboard the Gloucestsman, got the jump on Captain Walters at the gun at start. Instead of a personal duel that marked the opening of yesterday's race both skippers were today more intent on covering the course, and their lines was six minutes better at the six mile mark.

The start of the schooner race today between Bluenose defending champion, and Gertrude L. Thebaud, of Gloucester, Massachusetts was postponed for half an hour owing to the shifting wind which had hauled to the north. The original starting time was set for 2 p.m. A.S.T. the sailing committee signalled that another course, the same as that sailed yesterday, had been selected.

This would give the schooners a reach to the Sambro lightship by way of the inner channel, and another reach seven miles to the outer automatic, a beat six miles back to the inner automatic and long and short hitches up to the harbor.

Turkish Women To Buy Gowns at Home

Istanbul, Oct. 20—The women of Turkey's officialdom must turn their eyes from the mode of Paris and buy their gowns at home, the cabinet decided today.

Thebaud Had Weather Berth

The starting gun found Thebaud with Captain John Matheson at the wheel in the weather position slightly astern of the Bluenose. They crossed the line with Bluenose slightly ahead, but being outcooled by the challenger. It was Matheson's start.

The conditions following the start were identical with those of raising yesterday when Captain Angus Walters engaged a luffing match with Thebaud and lost in a usable minutes in the operation. But he was not caught napping today and five minutes after the start was bearing away, apparently in an endeavor to sail through Thebaud's lee, which still held a slight lead.

At 9.35 the Bluenose with "scan dalous" sail, had opened up a lead of two lengths. The schooners were doing their very best, each headed for the Sambro lightship seven miles to the south. They will have to pass the inner automatic buoy at the mouth of the harbor homeward.

They charged down open ocean course thirty six miles on even terms with the defender But as soon as the windward work began it became apparent that Bluenose veteran of the Grand Banks, had in her hull or spars something that no naval architect, not even her designer, Bill Roue, was thoroughly understand. They called her an accident. But she has been built to whip her, and more may yet be launched. But she came home today so far ahead of Gertrude L. Who will say that the contest were ready to admit she deserved to hold the International fishermen's trophy.

Captain Angus Walters, who was at Bluenose's wheel, sailed a race that would make a yachting skipper envious. He had Pro Captain John Matheson overlooking nothing in his struggle to bring the international trophy back to the United States yesterday.

Thebaud finished at 2.42.13. Her elapsed time was three hours, eighteen minutes and thirteen seconds. She was twelve minutes and one second behind the Bluenose.

STABILIZING OF WHEAT IS IN PROGRESS

Sales To France and Germany Part of Scheme

REDUCE STOCKS

Expected Cut to Less Than Half of Original Stock

New York, N.Y., Oct. 20.—Dow, Jones & Co. says that according to information received in Chicago circles two transactions for the sale of stabilization wheat are now in the formative stage.

One is the sale of upwards of 50,000,000 bushels of wheat to France and the other is a second sale of a material quantity of wheat to Germany.

The New York representative of the Deutsche Getreide Handel-Gesellschaft, the organization which handled the recent 7,000-000 bushel transaction with the Federal Farm Board, is now in Chicago. Dow, Jones says the French negotiations are likely to coincide with the visit of the French Premier to the United States.

If completed, these transactions will reduce the Federal Farm Board's surplus stocks to materially less than half of the original 363,-000,000 bushels purchased.

Stocks and Bonds Rise In New York

New York, N.Y., Oct. 20.—Both stocks and bonds pushed forward with renewed vigor today.

The drying up of liquidation during the recent period of hesitancy and signs of renewed confidence in the stock market generally were regarded in brokerage and banking quarters as the basis of the new upturn.

Rails led the advance in shares in the early trading, but were soon joined by other groups. There was an average rise of seven points in leading issues by early afternoon.

Jolly Handbill Tells of Ruin Which Passed

London, Oct. 20.—(AP)—"They were all wrong" is the leading one of a handbill reviewing gloomy prophecies of other days, being distributed in London. Here they are:

William Pitt said: "There is scarcely anything around us but ruin and despair."

Wilberforce in the early 1800's said: "I dare not marry, the future is so dark and unsettled."

Lord Grey, in 1815, said he believed "everything is tending to a convulsion."

The fear of Wellington on the eve of his death, in 1851, thanked God he would "be spared from seeing the consummation of ruin that is gathering about us."

Disraeli (1846): "In industry, commerce and agriculture there is no hope."

Queen Adelaide said she "had only one desire, to play the part of Marie Antoinette with decency in the revolution that was coming on England."

Lord Shaftesbury (1848): "Nothing can save the British Empire from shipwreck."

But, concludes the circular, "We came through all right, and shall do so again."

THE ESPLANADE

The project of the esplanade on the east bank of the Moira River, north of Bridge street, which has been before the special committee and the city council, has commended itself to many citizens on the grounds of its value as a relief undertaking, on which a very material share of the cost can be secured from the government unemployment fund; its importance as a means of providing parking space, and also its ultimate value to the city as a source of revenue.

The Ontario Intelligencer, after giving study to the proposal, believes that the present is a good time to go forward with the work. It is a necessary work and it can be done to advantage, not all contracts, but much of it. Money has to be spent this winter on relief in order to obtain government assistance and there appears no undertaking in which are bound up so many evident advantages to the city.

The special committee mentioned the sum of about $120,000 as the cost of the work and the site. It appears that an independent report is likely to be secured by the city from Messrs. Gore, Nasmith and Storrie, consulting engineers, and this will settle the question of costs to the satisfaction of citizens.

The project, while utilitarian in the relief of unemployment and of traffic congestion and in ultimately leading to a new business street, is also one of beautification. The riverside drive as planned will be eighty feet wide. Next the retaining wall at the riverbank, will be the five-foot sidewalk, then a five-foot boulevard, a twenty-foot driveway, then a twenty-five foot parking place in the centre, another driveway of twenty feet for northbound traffic, and a five-foot sidewalk. The driveway will be of macadam with a view of eight inch base. A project like this is in harmony with such undertakings in all progressive cities, in its removal of old structures and in added fire protection.

Labor will gain materially by the work, through the use of cement and the actual manual labor on the project.

Parking space is badly needed and there seems to be no other space available. This roadway would take care of thousands of cars. The street would also take truck traffic off the present main street.

These are some of the reasons why this paper looks with favor upon the project and believes that such a plan is highly constructive and advantageous.

MANCHURIAN INDEPENDENCE IS NEW ANGLE

JAPAN AT WORK

U. S. Now Looking To Settlement of Own Problem

Tokyo, Oct. 20 (A.P.).—The latest, and apparently most ambitious of a series of "independence" movements in Manchuria seeking separation of that domain from China as an outgrowth of the Chino-Japanese controversy was reported in press dispatches from Mukden today.

General Ling Ju-Ching, former ally of the Manchu dynasty and now described as "former pacification commissioner of the three northeastern provinces" was named as the head of the new movement.

Long-standing enemy of Chang Tso-Lin, the late Manchurian war lord, and Chang Tso-Lin's son and successor, Chang Hsueh-Liang, General Ling was reported rallying troops and establishing a progoness Agency (Japanese) said 60,-000 already had answered and the force was being enlarged for the avowed purpose of establishing a Manchurian regime to displace that of Chang Hsueh-Liang.

The Movement

Rengo reported significantly that Ling-Chi-Ching's activities were

NO NEW POLICY FOR LIBERALS

Constitution Precludes Discussion of Beer Resolution

London, Ont., Oct. 20 (By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Certain over here for a day on the annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association, the delegates present from all corners in the province, from Mr. Mackenzie King, Dominion leader, arrived from Ottawa this morning, but he is not going to attend the meeting tonight. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario leader, is going to so will speak.

Because of the constitution of the Association, the meeting will not result in any new declaration of policies. Delegates from Windsor brought with them a beer-by-the-glass resolution, but it was shelved the party on record as favoring the quebec system of beer parlor. It was understood the bylaws of the Association precluded discussion of the resolution. The party's liquor platform was drafted at a convention called for that purpose last year and the annual meeting has no power to amend or delete any plank.

Press Gives Little Space to Winston Churchill

Burnley, Lancashire, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Interest in the prominent position which Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, former Conservative Chancellor of the Exchequer, has occupied in previous general election campaigns, is may scorn strange that so little is being said by the leaders of the present one. He has always been a strong, caustic and dashing speaker.

Last night Churchill came here from his own riding at Epping, Essex, to support Major Cyril Culverwell, Conservative candidate opposing Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, Labor leader. Prominent conservative newspapers devoted very small space to his speech. He described the rise of the Socialist party as a "great misfortune."

The only sally that enlivened the audience, according to a Labor newspaper, was when Mr. Churchill referred to the fate of King Charles, who lost his head. Mr. Churchill, turning, spoke to Mr. Henderson and added: "I don't see you have a crown to lose on his head. His seat will do."

Thomas "Fed Up" With Party Politics

London, Oct. 20 (AP)—Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for Dominions, said in a campaign speech at Derby today that he was "fed up with party politics whether Labor, Liberal, or Tory."

"No one party can pull this country out of the mess it is in," he said. "Men and women of all parties must sink their prejudices and see that this country is going to be pulled through its troubles."

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter Ishbel made a flight to Bassetlaw where polls close at 9 p.m. tonight. MacDonald's candidacy, remarking at one point: "There's a hazy swing in my favor in Seaham."

The King will return from Sandringham to Buckingham Palace next Monday, he said on hand for the election the following day.

Manchester Guardian Gasps at Audacity of Snowden

Labor Chief Turns To Conservative Side In Election

IN CENTRE OF STAGE

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 20.—"On the star turn of the election with the Conservative side" is Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is retiring, according to Walter Citrine, Secretary of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress in a speech at Bristol, another to the recriminatory speeches passing between Mr. Snowden and his former colleagues in the Labor party.

Tribute to Mr. Snowden's important part in the campaign is also paid by the London Manchester Guardian, which devoted its main editorial to him today. His recent speeches, The Guardian stated, raised questions of fairness and decency in political discussion. The newspaper recalled that when Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, joined the Coalition Government during the war they were assailed with "cruelty by Mr. Snowden's They were told they were "office seekers" and accused of being ready for whatever "dirty work their Tory masters bid them do." The Guardian said,

"One can only gasp." The Guardian continued, "as the audacity of a political leader who can denounce as 'fantastic impracticable' a Bolshevism run mad,' a policy which he helped to draw up."

Mr. Snowden seemingly has no intention of leaving the centre of the stage, "It does not in the least surprise me," he said last night, that Mr. Henderson and his friends are smarting under the exposure of their record here at a Labor broadcast of Saturday. Before the end of the election I shall have opportunities of dealing further with these matters."

Similarity of Case Causes Sensation at Detroit

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 20.—An attendant that his sister had confessed to him the killing of two prostitutes in Phoenix, Arizona, was made today to the Associated Press by J. L. McKinnell, Los Angeles University student, and brother of the suspected slayer, Raymond Bath, jaded. McKinnell made a positive statement after a series of reports had been circulated in which police denied the young man's alleged statement.

Stopping in a corridor of the homicide bureau of the police department at breakfast, he took time to breakfast, McKinnell told his version of the discovery of the bodies of Mrs. Agnes Leroi and Miss Helen Sampson, residents of Phoenix, Ariz., clinic, in two trunks and a valise at a railroad station here yesterday.

A baggage master, who saw blood seeping from one trunk demanded that it be opened. Mrs. Leroi, who had arrived in Los Angeles a short time before on another train, came to the station with McKinnell to claim the baggage. She told the agent she did not have the keys and would get them. The suspicion of the agent led him to make the license number of McKinnell's automobile and the student was arrested.

"I knew what was in those trunks," the young man said. "She told me. I can't understand why

Olive Branch Wielded by Briand in Jap Dispute

Brings Marked Optimism Into Discussion of League

BRIAND'S VIEW

Geneva, Oct. 20—A trader's proposal for peace, outlined by Aristide Briand, veteran wielder of the olive branch in Europe, brought marked optimism into the Manchurian discussions today as the League of Nations Council entered the second week of an extraordinary session devoted to arbitration between China and Japan.

Briand's proposal was said to be sufficiently flexible to serve as a basis for negotiation and contains some features which both parties in the controversy have agreed to, Japan, may' reject to protect their own feelings. It was also described as being sufficiently broad and adaptable possibility of deadlock.

Action in a position to know something of what is going on in the council's private sessions said M. Briand was suggesting steady retirement of Japanese troops in Manchuria to the railway zone simultaneous replacement of each Jap anese soldier withdrawn by two or more Chinese soldiers to secure Japanese lives and property, and observation of this process by a neutral commission of military experts or civilians representing the League of Nations.

There was every indication that the council plans to remain on the job until a peaceful settlement is well under way.

Mrs. Sargent hunted the Front Street over in an effort to find the missing vehicle and later reported the theft to the police. There is a possibility that some motorist had taken the car in mistake as there was a car left close beside the place where Mrs. Sargent had parked her car. Brotherly Assistance Not Charity Giving is Object

City Churches and Schools Represented On Board

CARE OF TRANSIENTS

To complete organization of the special committee of citizens to assist in unemployment relief this winter a meeting was held last evening in the Council Chamber of the City Hall with Mayor Reid as general chairman. The gathering was most representative, the churches of the city, the teachers, and the various welfare organizations sending delegates to aid in this important project.

As outlined by the Mayor, the prime object of the formation of a committee was that of assisting and augmenting in times of emergency the work of the Women's Christian Association. The organization was well prepared to deal with the annual relief programme of a normal year but in seasons of acute distress with citizens anxious and willing to do their part it was necessary that resources be organized to deal with the situation when the need arose.

The spirit of the committee should act, as pointed out by Mr. E. V. Illsley, that of brotherly assistance, not charity-giving, and big problem was that of workers forced in this trying time to idleness, whose need was great but who would face the keenest hardships rather than ask for help. Some one in a friendly way must seek them out and aid them. It was imperative that there be a central office for the committee and that sub-committees be appointed to deal with the various phases of the work.

One committee could look after employment. It was the feeling of the meeting last evening that the housekeeping of Mrs. Ford Read would be willing to co-operate in a plan for giving employment to the unemployed. Countless little tasks about a house, lawn, or odd jobs of repairing that could be conveniently done this winter instead of being put off indefinitely. A central agency for listing these, working in conjunction with the Employment Bureau would fill a real need.

A committee would be needed to look after funds that generous-hearted citizens are sure to contribute this winter. If a special appeal to be made, a depot for receiving and distributing supplies donated must be arranged for. Above all, an efficient relief must co-ordinate with that of the Women's Christian Association so that all will be cared for without overlapping.

These were the points of discussion at the meeting last evening, and many ideas were brought out by the various speakers. It was suggested that Mr. Homer Gas Department offices in the City Hall would be an ideal central office, and Miss Helena Lynch was appointed secretary of the committee.

On the question of caring for transients, Pte. Lynch reported for the committee which had been appointed at a previous meeting to find a suitable place for housing these men. From his re-ing this morning "in a certain direction," understood to be toward Manchuria, where the remnants of Chang Hsueh-liang's former Mukden government has been attempting to function.

Many of the independence reports have lacked any substantial basis, but in Japanese authoritative observers professed to see an illustration of the ambition of the Japanese army to bring Manchurian elements to bring about Japanese dominion of Southern Manchuria without resorting to military measures.

Japan's withdrawal of objection to United States participation at Geneva encouraged Washington to look to the Far East for a settlement of its own difficulties. Japanese Ambassador Debuchi at Washington, predicted that in a few more days without hostilities would virtually assure peace.

China awaited a meeting at Shanghai of the Nanking government representatives and officials of the insurgent Canton government which was hailed as a favorable means of politically uniting China as that city might face Japan with a solidarity.

abe did it. I drove her to Sixth and Broadway and she got out. I gave her a dollar and she disappeared in the street crowds."

Dr. W. C. Judd, husband of the woman, who identified the head and composed under the grilling of detectives and who was taken into custody with McKinnel, said:

"I believe she was perfectly deranged."

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 20.—Two sinister looking trunks, opened by the police here last night, yielded the bodies of two young women and led to the quick detention of two men and an intensive hunt for a woman suspect, but failed to clear up much of the mystery veiling the slayings.

The victims were tentatively identified as Mrs. Agnes Leroi, X-ray technician of a clinic in Phoenix, Ariz., and Miss Hedvig Samuelson, her roommate. The woman identified was Mrs. Gertrude Ruth Judd, 27, a secretary at the clinic and supposed friend of Mrs. Leroi and Miss Samuelson, who had been missing since Friday.

Found by Trunks'

Police soon located B. J. McKinnell, Judd's brother, and his husband. Dr. W. C. Judd, and questioned them while other officers searched Judd's apartment. The latter was believed to be fleeting by train from Los Angeles to Phoenix.

Police officials admitted they were having gone with his sister to the railway station to claim her baggage. Information came here from Phoenix, presumably by Mrs. Judd, inquiring officials here to learn whether his sister had killed the woman whose body in the trunk must have been insane." Dr. Judd insisted he knew nothing of the case.

Both Shot

Letters and photographs in the trunks led to the search for Mrs. Judd by the Glendale police. Coroner's police assumption as to identity of the bodies, one of whom apparently had been shot.

After discovery of the bodies, one of which was headless, police found a suitcase in a rash room containing a head and the rest of the torsos. Officers here were informed Mrs. Judd had been with the two women or had been associated with them in Phoenix.

Trunks Shipped Similar

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 20.—Struck by the similarity of the Los Angeles circumstances, Detroit police have checked up on trunks shipped from there the slaying of two women whose bodies were shipped in trunks from Detroit to Los Angeles, will throw any light on a similar crime which occurred here eleven years ago.

Two trunks have been seek-ing Eugene Leroy on a murder charge in connection with the killing of Mrs. Judd had been found dismembered body was found in a trunk in a New York express office. Police said age had been slain in a Detroit apartment, where she lived and her husband had been living. He disappeared about the time the trunk was shipped to New York, body identified.

Interest in the Los Angeles case was aroused by the similarity in the finding in Los Angeles of one of the bodies as that of Mrs. Agnes Anne Leroi, who had been an X-ray technician in a Phoenix clinic.

JAPAN LOOKS TO CHINA FOR SETTLEMENT

Fall of Chiang Kai-Shek As President is Imminent

NOT GIVEN AWAY

Terms of League of Nations "Quite Acceptable to Gov't

Tokyo, Oct. 20—(AP)—In view of the deadlock between Tokyo and Geneva over the League of Nations recommendations aiming at a peaceful solution of the Sino-Japanese controversy over Manchuria, Japan today became more inclined than ever to look to India for a settlement.

New possibilities of negotiations directly with China were foreseen in official circles here as the result of reports that the fall of Chiang Kai-Shek as president of the Chinese Republic was imminent and that Chiang's political foes, the Canton Insurgents would play an important role in the formation of a new government at Nanking.

In this connection it was recalled that Eugene Chen, Foreign Minister of the insurgent Canton government, visited Tokyo last August and conferred with Baron Shidehara, Japanese Foreign Minister. At that time Chen reputedly clarified Canton's position in the event that Chiang eventually should be overthrown.

Baron Shidehara and Chen discussed Manchuria at that time. Afterwards Chen assured interviewers that he had not "given away" Manchuria to Japan, despite reports to that effect published by newspapers favorable to Chiang.

Chen was said to have advocated the closest harmony between China and Japan in carrying out the aims of the late Dr. Sun Yatsen, founder of the Chinese Republic, for a pan-asiatic policy.

The League of Nations recommendations, which included a suggestion that Japan give assurances of complete withdrawal of her troops from Manchuria within three weeks and that China and Japan begin direct negotiations for a settlement before hand were unofficially termed "quite unacceptable" in government circles here.

EXPORT OF GOLD UNDER CONTROL OF GOVERNMENT

Order - in - Council Calls For License Before Shipment

PENALTIES MADE

Maximum Fine of $1,000 and Three Years Imprisonment

Ottawa, Oct. 20—Subjecting the export of all gold to Government supervision, Canada today moved to conserve her supply of the precious metal for the meeting of governmental and municipal bond obligations abroad and for the continuance of the dollar's present adequate backing.

Under an order-in-council, approved by the cabinet Monday, gold exports can be made only by special Government license and through one of the chartered banks. The ban dates from today until next March 31.

Maximum fines of $1,000 or three years' imprisonment or both are provided against anyone who ships or tries to ship, gold in any form out of the country without the authorization of the Minister of Finance.

Calling all the news correspondents in the capital to his office in the east block yesterday afternoon, Premier Bennett made the announcement by which Canada joined the several nations which have either prohibited or restricted the movement of gold during the past month. After briefly explaining the situation, the Prime Minister handed out copies of the order-in-council.

Follows Premier

Written in the formal style of legislation, the order-in-council was addressed to the Governor-General whose signature made it law. It told that the Premier of Canada was below par in New York, that the Dominion's international financial qualities had obligations which must be paid there in New York gold and that Federal fold holdings by law in order to maintain to the extraordinary powers vested in the Governor-General-in-Council by special legislation of last session, it was declared that it was "expedient forbidded, except under Government-al authority; that no licensed exports be made except through a chartered bank and that violators of these regulations should be liable by fines or imprisonment, or both.

Notable in the order was its firm declaration that the present value of the dollar was not due to domestic conditions. The order stated in the same sentence that it was further observed that monetary practices of various countries had been recently revised, thereby creating unbalanced trade and a threat to the future trends of credit and the stability of gold standards against currency note issues of the nations of the world."

Production in Canada

The Canadian gold mines are producing at the rate of $70,000,000 a week. Under this order, all this gold must be sold to banks in Canada, unless, of course, the Government sells it to some export. It is believed here, however, that it is against the law for class of exporting that the order is directed.

Heretofore, the Government has sought to attract Canadian-mined gold by offering a premium and a premium on it. The premium was as much as that of the premium on United States money in Montreal on the day of receipt of the gold the day before and the day after.

Whether the Government will continue to pay this premium is a point upon which official statement was available.

Parliament will be sitting when the order expires on March 1. It can be renewed then, or allowed to lapse as the Government sees fit. The order could not be made effective beyond that date because the present legislation of last session under which this step is sustained, expires on March 1. There is hope that at that time conditions will have improved sufficiently to obviate the necessity for a ban of this kind.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen Asks For Prima Facie Cases Against Hydro

Windsor, Oct. 20—"If anyone else wants to start an inquiry, let them do so only when they can produce prima facie cases. Do not let them start an inquisition that will be useless and pointless and only serve to waste time and money."

With these words, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, former Premier of Canada, and a member of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, yesterday afternoon, voiced the sentiments of the Hydro body and challenged its critics.

Stretch of 70 Miles from Madoc to Perth Will Cost $1,000,000

Gov't to Complete No. 7 Highway and Relieve Other Arteries

45 MILES SHORTER

Road From Belleville To Actinolite to Be Built As Feeder

As an unemployed relief measure at a cost of $1,000,000 to employ 1,500 men, the Provincial Department of Highways is calling for tenders for the construction of a road from Madoc to Perth, a distance of 70 miles, to provide a through highway from Sarnia to Ottawa and relieve the congestion from Toronto to Ottawa by 45 miles.

In making the announcement yesterday, Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, stated that the road, together with a road commencing at Belleville and ending at Actinolite, would cost approximately $1,000,000. The first section of the work will consist of rock cut ting, straightening the present highway and other preliminary operations, and this will be undertaken this Winter by Provincial Highways Forces. This involves work in the Counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac and Lanark.

The 70 miles between Madoc and Perth is almost virgin country, sparsely populated and containing but few small plots suitable for agriculture in Ontario, Mr. Macaulay declared. Because this is practically untouched land, it was not thought reasonable to assess the municipalities for a share of the cost, and the Dominion and Provincial Governments will bear the burden on a 50-50 basis. The road from Belleville to Actinolite will be assumed partly against the municipalities.

Says Work Welcome

"As the work is close to the centres of population where unemployment is most severely felt, it is proposed to rotate the workmen so as to stretch out the work to the greatest extent possible," said the Minister of Highways. "The road between Belleville and Actinolite through the town of Tweed will facilitate traffic from No. 2 highway originating east of Toronto and destined for the Ottawa valley.

"The Madoc-Perth road will complete No. 7 highway, Sarnia to Ottawa. The heavy traffic between Toronto and the mining areas of Northern Ontario will be relieved, it is expected to the completion of this highway to Ottawa.

Both roads will be of improved gravel and will be constructed as rapidly as circumstances permit. The topography is suitable for road construction, there being few hills and valleys. The territory is thick in wooded areas and trees will have to be removed. Part of the route follows an old Grand Trunk Railway surfey made many years ago. The centre line up of deflection is expected to attract many tourists as well as relieve traffic on other highways.

Hon. Mr. Macaulay leaves this week to inspect Essex County, where over proposed highway construction there. Because unemployment problems in the border municipalities form the reason for the visit.

Illegal to Organize Expeditionary Force By Chinese in Canada

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 20.—Chinese in Canada who are reported to be planning the organisation of an expeditionary force to fight against Japan have been warned by the Provincial Government, through the Provincial Police, that such activities would be violation of Canadian law. It is illegal in this country to organize any military expedition except under the auspices of the Canadian Government.

It was reported here Saturday that a Chinese Nationalist movement in Canada were planning to organize such a force to fight in a possible war against Japan, and were prepared to organize an aeroplane corps. Police do not believe this movement has gone far, but have thought it best to warn Chinese publicly against it.

LEAKING TAPS CAUSE DAMAGE

Discovery of Trouble By Police Prevented Serious Damage

The fortunate discovery of water dripping in one of the door ways of the Canadian Department Store by the police about twelve-thirty a.m. this Tuesday morning, prevented serious damage being done to the interior of the store and merchandise. Upon receiving report of the trouble, Sergeant Arthur Harman immediately summoned Mr. W. J. McMillan, the manager of the store.

On entering the building, water was found to be escaping from the radiator taps and there was a considerable depth of water on the floors. A plumber was called and discovered that water to the furnace of the steam heating plant had been shut off and that when the steam coils had become filled with water, resulting in leakage from the radiator taps throughout the store. The trouble was soon rectified.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PREMIER

Bishop of Canterbury Speaks Highly of Hon. Ramsay MacDonald

London, Oct. 20—(Can. Press)—Tribute to the courage of Premier Ramsay MacDonald was paid today by the Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, speaking in the Cathedral City.

"I think," said Archbishop Lang, "it is only one of the many things whoun that very special responsibility arose in almost quite early days. All considerations of party, that we should pay our tribute to the extraordinary courage of the Prime Minister and those who acted by him, who refused to be received, who faced the facts and determined immediately upon a bold drastic effort to meet the situation as it had arisen.

"It is very difficult, I confess," said the archbishop, "for the ordinary man to understand the complicated questions of exchanges and the balance of trade. And just because the difficulties are so great, we must fall back upon a policy of trust. We must find men whom we can trust to see the country's interests and difficulties. That is the issue in this election."

FOUND GUILTY OF TIRE THEFT

John Wilson, Oshawa, is Remanded For Sentence For One Week

John Wilson, who claims Oshawa as his home, was arrested Saturday night at Trenton on the charge of stealing a tire from a car on the garage square at Trenton, Oct. 8. The tire was later found at Baker's garage, Trenton, to whom it had been sold.

Charles L. Fraser of Belleville was arrested Saturday night on the charge of being implicated in the theft and placed in custody along with Wilson at Trenton. Monday afternoon Wilson and Fraser appeared before Magistrate O'Regan at the Trenton police court. The charge against Fraser was withdrawn and Wilson was found guilty and remanded for one week for sentence. In the evidence it was brought out that Wilson is alleged to have stolen some tools from the garage of Belleville Motors on Oct. 8. This additional charge was laid against Wilson at the time of the trial Monday. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan of Belleville appeared for the crown.

SALVATION ARMY

The Salvation Army is found in the forefront of all institutions. The other day there came over the wires a story from Windsor about the interest in a deported family from the United States taken by the "army".

That is the secret. The "army" is where it is needed most. It does the little act which means a whole world to people in a physical, and in a mental and spiritual sense. Wherever there is human need this organization is to be found with the one hand outstretched in welcome and with the other bearing the nourishment so sorely needed.

This is the practical side of the work of this great organization which has its corps throughout the world and which is everywhere marked by the same devotion to the relief of human needs.

The other side, the spiritual, is cared for as faithfully. The results are redemptive work do not require to be told. All know them; many people from personal experience, or from what has come under their observation.

The visit of the Montreal Citadel band here the other night shows in relief an angle of the spiritual side of the Salvation Army. Music is made an integral part of worship, and how men's voices and knowledge of music can be turned to the use of the spiritual is given its highest manifestation in the "army" band. Music which builds up the soulful in man is the music the bandsmen play.

Yet there is another music motive which scatters the soul recipes. Much music heard (not in S. A. citadels, nor from Salvation Army bands on the streets) is of a negligible character, if it is not worse. Some of it is of a dreamy "moony" nature which is far detached from the realities and the healthful music of life as a Salvationist understands, and interprets it or as others outside the "army" ought to understand it. Some of it might almost be called destructive of mentality, so feeble is it. None of this stuff enters into the S. A. band programs, and yet the S. A. music's appeal is as potent as, or even more potent, than the jazzy stuff which appears to delight so many. Salvation Army music is rugged, potent, manly, and is not comparable to the sapless gigolo-like music of other places.

Every phase of life is intimately touched by the Salvation Army.

There is a vast field of fine music which, while not religious music, builds up the soul. This includes the great secular classics.

LAST OF THE ELEMENTS

The 87th atom has been discovered —there is only one missing, the 85th, in the series of 92. When that is found it may explain much more than itself.

Does the world give due recognition to these patient scientists who are searching the almost inscrutable for facts which will lead to the discovery of the real meaning of life? Some scientists believe that the final revelation is near, though others doubt this very much.

To hunt down this final element, No. 85, may be a strenuous task, but the research workers do not fear work. Their only dread is that they will not live long enough to find the key to all things, or that their investigations may be interrupted.

Delvers into nature's secrets have brought the world a great deal more joy than they have brought themselves through their patient efforts, though they are satisfied with the results of their labors.

Digging into the inside of atoms is one of the joys of the modern scientist. The electron flies around inside the atom like a gnat in a room. A new instrument has been produced which is the result of adding fifty microscopes to one another which will reveal what an atom looks like. Ordinary light is useless in this work, the X-ray proving valuable. With the aid of these the research worker sees atoms of oxygen and hydrogen arranging themselves in six-sided geometrical structures of ice and snow. It is possible to see, not the electrons, but the electrons' effects, made visible on a photograph as splashes of energy.

HELPING AGRICULTURE

The good work which is being accomplished by the Department of Agriculture among the boys and girls of the rural schools can be realized by a review of the achievements of the school fairs of this section, culminating in the championship school fair.

This movement has been in action for some years and shows no sign of diminution of interest. Rather is there a growth of interest. The results ought to be apparent in the generally higher fitness of the coming farmers in the noble calling of agriculture.

Those who have seen some of the school fairs realize what has been accomplished with the boys and girls. Belleville fair, for instance, had one of the finest showings of bacon hogs, all owned and reared by the boys' club. These boys have been brought up to the mark and are alert to the latest trend in agriculture. They are therefore apt to adopt innovations than their fathers.

Schools and institutes are remaking agriculture on a business basis which will in the long run prove a great boon to this original industry.

CROSSING THE BAR

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound or foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;

For though from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

—Tennyson

THOMAS A. EDISON now belongs to the ages. The man who brought light and more light into the world slipped quietly out of the darkness of this world into the greater light of that other mysterious world. More than sixty years ago Tom Edison sold newspapers on Canadian trains and employed his spare time between stations and customers in operating a small printing press in the baggage car printing a newspaper. Every time we look at a motion picture we should think of Thomas A. Edison who made the motion picture possible. Edison is one of the great men of all time and his memory belongs to the world to be held in gratitude and reverence for all time. Edison's task is done, there does not seem to be anything left to invent, unless it be a fool-proof financial system which will prevent prosperity being turned into poverty through over-abundance of all things.

ESPLANADE DISCUSSION has sort of simmered down, waiting more authentic figures from skilled engineers as to the ultimate cost. Seems to me that this project will be carried out eventually, so why not now. In five or ten years at the most the banks of the Moira in the city will be beautified, with or without government assistance. We understand that the government will aid this improvement project materially if undertaken this winter to aid employment. That's one reason why it should be proceeded with at once. Another reason is that a number of worthy citizens are out of work and will have to be carried over the winter in the municipality, individually or collectively. They prefer work to assistance without work. Most of the money spent on the project will go into local circulation to every citizen's advantage. Some of the most valuable property needed for the project has been offered free of charge to the community by the owners. If the project is delayed this situation may be reversed. Belleville improvements have come slowly but steadily, such as paving, gas, etc. Those who opposed them at the time would not return to old conditions for anything. The esplanade project will be opposed. Right, all the better, opposition generally brings out any weakness or defects in original plans and saves money eventually for the community. Let's all take an active interest in the esplanade project, for or against, and the final result will be satisfactory.

"ON TOP OF THE WORLD"

When Prime Minister Bennett of Canada said that Canada is on top of the world, he was not using the word in a geographical sense, but indicating a latitude where, as the American John Hayes Hay's story said, the aurora borealis bounded the New World on the North. Mr. Bennett meant merely that the resolute pioneer spirit of Canada is still superior to all her economic and other difficulties. It was not a vainglorious statement. Rather was it the expression of a man who does not speak of his beloved in percentages of devotion.

In searching for the sources of what might be called his "reasoned optimism," Mr. Bennett attributes this confidence not to Canada's inexhaustible wealth in mineral and other natural resources, nor to her comparative youth, which keeps her from falling so readily "a victime to the evils that prey on older civilizations," nor to the unity of action—though these are all factors—but to something not found in printed documents, an unconquerable belief in herself. "Her people have encountered difficulties almost unparalleled in the history of other countries. Yet their economy which were necessities in their pioneering lives furnished a sound foundation for the unified political, economic and social national structure. "What are our difficulties," Mr. Bennett asks, "compared with those we have already overcome?" What are our problems which compare with those we have long since solved?"

"This courageous confidence of one who has himself triumphed in the fact of great obstacles is a challenge to Americans. The vein of so cheerful a neighbor in these troubling times is as tonging as his country's climate. He admits that nature was unkind to Canada's Western wheat areas this year, but this calamity is one from which he sees an early recovery. The grain employment situation is serious but is "controllable." So does he face with the fortitude and resolution of a pioneer the conditions that front him in his country's service. Fortunately there are no tariffs against such a spirit. We should welcome its import.—New York Times.

FOR ALL WHO WISH TO LEARN

Increasing popular interest in adult education has been a outstanding development in academic and vocational fields for more than two decades. Enormous changes of the last few years, however, have been reflected in more limited in these branches of instruction to meet demands that were not to be seen even comparatively recently.

A significant indication of the effect which these new conditions are having in broadening the concept of public education was voiced by Dr. Harold O. Campbell, deputy and associate superintendent of schools of New York City, at the forty-ninth annual meeting of the Council of Superintendents held at Lake Placid recently. Dr. Campbell envisaged the best public school system of the near future as an institution "conducted not primarily for youth, but for all who wish to learn."

An educational system that provides primarily for youth "must assume to a certain extent that the world into which its graduates go forth will be the same world for which the schools equipped them," he declared. "But the modern world is ever changing. Adults are now asking that the age limit be removed entirely from the state's obligation to provide education."

This view is a long way beyond the old concept of education and vocation which held that men and women should except in rare instances, devote their entire careers to the field of activity which they entered upon leaving school. The encouragement of such versatility and initiative through the aid of its public school system would tend to enrich the state with citizens who not only were happier in their occupations, but also were better equipped to participate in solving the social, economic and political problems of modern democracy.—C. S. Monitor.

BE CAREFUL, SALESMEN!

It is reported that people in rural districts are being urged by insistent canvassers to buy stock in mines and oil wells. This is disquieting news.

In hard times, the one man who is certain of a job is he who can make sales. And the harder it is to make sales the larger must be the commissions. A larger commission can be paid for sale of a piece of paper than for the sale of an article that costs money. The salesman does not bound to know that the stock he offers represents no real value; in fact its value cannot be known until development is made, and it is for the very purpose of development so far as the salesman knows, that the money is being raised by the sale of stock.

There is a natural tendency to seek customers for these stocks among rural dwellers because experience has shown that they yield a high rate of success for the salesman. City dwellers who have money to invest in stocks are not easily accessible. They have secretaries and guardians and they do not readily yield the time necessary for the proper presentation of the sales talk. On the other hand, the farmer, if properly approached may devote an evening to the salesman-visitor.

Some of these farm people, unlers handled with consideration by the salesman, are in danger of becoming victims rather than customers. An old, unlettered person whose thrift has amassed a sum of money represented by Dominion bonds may take as facts the hopes of the mining company as presented by the salesman and may make an exchange which means for him a change from investment to desperate speculation.

The salesman as a body have a reputation to make and maintain, just like any other class of workers. They should see to it, not only that their own acts comport with business ethics, but also that those of their number who indulge in sharp practice, and thus add to the economic difficulties of the present time, are represented and, if necessary, replaced.—Ottawa Citizen.

Dave men gave their life and a lot of their time to prove that the earth is round, so what rite have we to refuse to admit that other people have their sides?

My sister Fanny has an obsession to the effect that its a waist of words to discuss any child except her little Herbit. As a guest in her house I dont mind listening to one or 2 of Herbits allegedly brite doings, but as the grate proud mother of a really exceptional child such as our Gladdies little Willie I feel that I have my rites.

To give you a passing example of a continuous state of affairs, Fanny was taking me for a drive in her little year before last car, and I started to tell her about Willies exploit with the plumber. You remember how he watched the plumber fixing the tub, and the plumber kept hollaering as he worked, till finely Willie spoke up and said, Birdie birdie.

Well, Id only got as far as the puncture whitening when Fanny rudely broke in and said Speeking of plummers reminds me of the time Herbit pertended to smoke his fathers pipe, of corse it wasent realy lighted but it was a very strong pipe and he smuit of been drawing on it for some little time, and the moment he was rescued from it the ferst thing he said was Sick. And he was. Payiens, Fanny said, he was realy quite ill, it was one of the cutest things he ever said.

And thats the way it went. Willyum, every time I started to tell her of some realy clever doing or saying of Willie's she interrupted me to relate some wild goose story about Herbit that a child of his age should not know, or to dwell on a whole flow of them without even waiting for something to interrupt, until in sheer self defenss I pertended to be asleep for the remainder of the so called pleasure drive. Well Willyum such is life I suppose your distant neer relation

Many First-Class Bouts in the Offing For Fans

ON THREE FRONTS

Outstanding Bout Will Be That of Thompson vs. Brouillard

New York, N.Y., Oct. 19.—On three different sectors of the fistic battlefront tonight heavyweights will get the National boxing programme off to a running start.

Head all the rest will be Tommy Loughran's duel with the Cleveland veteran, Johnny Risko, at Philadelphia, which is loaded with somewhat since 1928, when he was one of the leading contenders for the title but shot at Gene Tunney that Tom Mighty quickly received his quietus. Cleveland baker boy still can slap and cuff with any of them. He probably will annoy Loughran but that's about all.

At New York, Victorio Campolo, Argentina giant, attempting a comeback, is due to battle defeat by Loughran and Ernie Schaaf, will meet Ralph Piccolo of New York in the six round feature in the St. Nicholas arena. At Los Angeles, Arthur de Kuh, New York lightweight tangles with Dynamite Jack-son of Santa Monica.

Outstanding Clash

The outstanding clash of the week will put Young Jack Thompson, San Francisco negro, against Leo Brouillard of Lowell, Mass., in a 15-round bout at the Boston Garden Thursday night in the Boston's welterweight championship at stake. Thompson is decided favorite Brouillard in a recent non-title engagement but the title-holder will rule the favorite when the bout goes Boston's jinx on champions.

Other outstanding battles of the week will send Max Baer, Oakland heavyweight, against Jose Santa, Portugal, at Oakland Wednesday night; Midget Wolgast, Philadelphia, against Bud Lavery, Los Angeles, at Sacramento Thursday in a non-title go; and George Manley, Denver light heavyweight, against George Cook, Oklahoma City, at Denver, Friday.

HOCKEY MOVES FAVOR EAST

Even Dozen of Best Players From West Have Come East

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 19.—By The Canadian Press — Westward Canada is the home in the amateur hockey shuffle of 1931, on the basis of player transfers granted at the end of the week-end gathering of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at Montreal. A dozen stick handlers, ill to finding new homes beneath the West for Eastern competitions and only four Easterners are noted as trekking in the opposite.

Manolon Gets Best

Cream of the Western migration is skimmed by Moncton, N. B., where no less than seven players of them from Winnipeg—have wended their way. Little "Duke" McDonald, centre ice star of the Canadian Junior champions, Winnipeg Elmwoods, heads the list and is followed by Hamilton, from Elmwood Senior, with Jimmy Foster and Bill Orr; Gordon Burrage defence; and Monty Muckle wing. Moncton garnered, too, Mel Gorman, of St. Boniface, Man., and Norm Cook of Yorkton, Sask., defence men.

If Moncton takes Western talent on to Montreal, Montreal increases equality, picking three outstanding prairie lads. Prominent among them is Jack Portland, last season, Chunky Bill Mackenzie of the Little Canadians, will play in defence-mate, Kilson Massey, join Montreal Amateur Athletic Association. The other new Montreal citizens is Andrew Anderson, Jimmy Jelly, veteran Winnipeg midget who played last season for Melville, in Saskatoon's "Big Six."

Defense-stalwart for Regina Pats, when they take the Canadian Junior title two years ago, "Buzz" Boll is noted in the O.H.A. trainers as moving from Weyburn, where he played Senior last year, to Toronto.

Regina, Southern Saskatchewan, accepts one-half of the four-strong Eastern contribution, adding to its hockey-playing wealth young Kenny Kipp, of Brantford, Ont., and A. Shackleton, of Newmarket, Ont. Selkirk, once Manitoba's fertile hockey field, reclaims N. Chouinier, of Sussex, N.B., and G. Callaghan, journeying across Ontario's rich country from Sudbury to Kenora.

Insurance Against Unemployment Needed

Washington, D.C., Oct. 20—Insurance against unemployment is imperative, in the view of Gerard Swope, but should be provided if possible by industry and not by government.

The president of the General Electric Company emphasized that opinion today as the first witness before the senate committee set up by the Senate to study unemployment insurance systems here and abroad.

ONCE CANADA'S GREATEST RUGBY COACH

Years ago Rev. Father Stanton of Ottawa University was hailed as the greatest football coach in Canada. This was back in 1907 when he produced a team that was for his college, the Intercollegiate title. For years after, he coached teams which were feared by any city, but not only to football did he confine his coaching abilities. He coached at most every line of sport, hockey, track, basketball, and swimming. Father Stanton's creed in all his coaching was: "You're never licked until you give up," and he is a crab or be a man." It was this spirit that he inbued into all his teams. For the past few years Father Stanton has been in the all United States doing mission work, but last week he returned to Canada to see a Canadian football game in which the forward pass was being used. His heart is still in the old game that he helped to make famous.

Basketball and Volleyball Will Be Major Sports at "Y"

With gym classes rapidly filling up at the Y.M.C.A. and special activities getting under way, Chair man of the Physical Committee, Bob Brown, is looking forward to one of the best years in his department since he took over its supervision. Already the organization of a church basketball league is under way and a second meeting which is being held on Wednesday evening of this week should result in enough teams being entered in order to allow the schedules to be drawn and the league started on its way. This year the age groupings are so arranged as to allow for two series for the boys and also a grouping for girls. Copies of the league rules and players' registration forms are available at the Y. M.C.A. It is expected that the majority of the Church League games will be played on Wednesday evenings with the exception of the girls' games, which will take place on Thursday evenings previous to and following the regular Business girls' Gym Class.

The requests from the Business Men and Senior members for more basketball and volleyball work in the near future, it is expected, in a four or five weeks' time will be met by the Business Men's Basketball League, which will consist of teams from the Business Men's Gym Class, the Senior members section ,the Kiwanis, Y's Men and possibly a team known as the DOMINION STORES—K. The Blood

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Blood contains all the nutritious elements necessary for the repair of our tissues which, through their normal activity, require building-up substances. It also contains those elements of waste which the tissues give off. These latter are brought principally to the kidneys and lungs by them expelled from the body.

As the blood is pumped by the heart into the lungs it is surcharged with carbonic acid and other waste products. In the lungs it is aerated—that is, takes on oxygen—and as it returns to the heart again is pumped through the body it gives off this life-giving substance everywhere.

Oxygen is carried in the so-called red corpuscles of the blood by the haemoglobin which is able loosely to combine oxygen. In other words it has the property of taking up oxygen readily, also of giving it up again readily.

The red corpuscles are circular biconcave discs. They measure about 1-3500 of an inch in diameter. Usually several are found together like a roll.

The white corpuscles in the blood are somewhat larger than the red, measuring about 1-2500 of an inch in diameter. They have the ability of moving themselves which is accomplished by pushing out a part like a foot, then the rest of the corpuscles following after. This particular kind of movement is known as "amoeboid" because that most simple of organisms, the amoeba, moves itself in that way.

There are fewer white cells than red. The proportion is about one white corpuscle to 400 red ones. It has been estimated that on an average there are seventy billion corpuscles to a cubic inch of blood. The function of the white corpuscles to a cubic inch of blood believed that they actually "eat up" germs.

A remarkable property possessed by blood is its ability to coagulate. This is does when it escapes from a blood vessel. If blood is whipped with a bundle of twigs as it clots a clotting substance, called "fibrin," adheres to the twigs. There is left a straw-colored fluid known as "serum". In the normal clotting process the red blood corpuscles become entangled in the strands of fibrin and so a solid clot is formed gradually.

The distribution of the entire blood mass in the body is about as follows: about one-quarter is in the heart, lungs and large blood vessels; one quarter is in the blood vessels of the muscles attached to the skeleton; one quarter is in the liver, while the remaining quarter is distributed among the other blood vessels in the rest of the body.

One may say roughly that one-quarter of the blood is solid matter and three-quarters water. Four-sevenths of this solid matter are corpuscles, red and white. The chemical composition is protein plus a mixture of fats, salts and carbo hydrates. Combined with the waste products, referred to above, which are converted into a substance called "urea".

Casein also are in combination. In 100 cubic centimeters of blood there are 80 cubic centimeters of gases. These gases consist of oxygen, carbonic acid and nitrogen.

It will be noted that these gases are the ones that principally exist in the atmosphere which we breathe. The proportions, however, are different.

Air contains three-fourths nitrogen, one-fourth oxygen, and a trace of carbonic acid. Blood contains about two thirds carbonic acid, one-third oxygen and very little nitrogen.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

HEARTS

by Laura Reid Montgomery

Anne's dreaming eyes hovered from the vivid blue of the Lake to stare into the red face of a strange man. His shirt was torn and smudged, his thick hair rumpled but clean as the silk rested upon the taffy-tinted mass.

"I think I didn't care what you gave me," he repeated, "but I've been out of work for four months and ill do a good job cleaning your car—" he broke off and averted his eyes. Plainly he was embarrassed to the breaking point.

"I—really, I'm awfully sorry," she murmured, "but I—well, the fact is, I haven't any money, myself. I changed the gas to come down here to Grant Park because Tony did need some fresh air. Substitute teachers haven't been paid, you see, and though it will come all right it's a bit inconvenient waiting."

He had frank eyes for a tramper —this man with the bundle of cleaning rags under his arm. "I'd make the car look like new."

"It needs cleaning but I—as", she said swiftly as he turned away to regard another car that had pulled up in the free parking space, "would you care—that is, I made some sandwiches to bring because we get so hungry near the Lake—won't you take them? It's stuffed with olives and we really have more than we'll eat."

A tiny heart of blue enamel swung out as she proffered a delicate chicken triangle wrapped in waxed paper. On her wrist was a slender gold wire and attached to this was one of the tiny hearts that coal one could see each and which she added to the heart bracelets.

"I thank you kindly," he accepted and sank to the curb beside her.

"Is Tony your brother?" he asked when the boy had snatched greedily at his share and raced away again.

"Oh, no. He's the child of a neighbor who had to go to the hospital. There is no place for him to play except the street and eighteen children have been killed in our neighborhood lately, think of that?"

He studied the wide, amber eyes that were filled with pity. "Killed?" What do you mean?" he asked, not unreasonably sceptical.

"By motor cars. The children skate and toe-walk on the rollers right in the path of cars—they don't hear their bells under the wheels and then race out after them—the lots have no place to play and so her voice shook a little and she gazed speaking.

"Out near Elm Street," he began—

"We live not far from there," she broke in eagerly, "there is one triangular piece of vacancy where they used to play but the owner has erected a high—oh, very high, fence and so they are kept out."

The scarlet had died from the man's face but now it returned with air odd rush. "They took the earth out of it—that, is—a vacant lot is 'ruined' by thieves who steal the dirt."

"Of course," she returned equably, "how can they fill their poor little flower-boxes? Even toilers love flowers and where can one find dirt in town except in vacant lots?"

"Good gracious, do you know that single never occurred to me," his tone and manner altered subtly and he snatched out an immaculate white handkerchief and wiped his face and you spend your holiday airing this Tony and share your luncheon with a tramp?"

She said nothing.

"The club women asked me to donate that irregular strip of land for a playground but I—well I wanted to find out for myself about the hearts of Chicago folks —wanted to see if all I'd heard about the kindness was true. I've been away for years, you know—" he laughed, "rather you do not know, of course."

She sat back away from the cheap little window of her flivver, her face rather white.

"I've frightened you," he said penitently, "but I'm really all right. I acknowledge it myself," he insisted, "I'll send you my address—I'm a messenger, if you'll permit. Remember how Mark Twain sent his necktie over to his neighbor when his wife reproached him for calling without formal neck-wear?"

She relaxed enough to permit a delightful smile to crinkle the corners of her eyes.

"My stunt has worked beyond my wildest dreams. I not only received free-lunch but I've found a girl with a heart," he indicated the cheap little dangling blue heart but his voice told a different story, "I shall donate that bit of land to the children and it shall be given in your name, if you are willing."

Anne had given up her Saturday for the sake of the sickly little boy—had given up her peace to keep him with her while his mother lay in the free ward but—Anne had learned that it is much more blessed to give than to receive and the tiny blue heart seemed a harbinger of joy to come.

The Beauty Box

Stimulo fluff is the world's best beautifier and that's why the dreadful sex is gluing its bright eyes on coiffure styles that hairdressers have to offer. Adorable, piquant, deliciously sensuous millinery has roused in every woman's heart a desire for a new hairdo. Slanted partings, pothook curls along the forehead, ringlets to fill in spaces where the chapeau isn't all constitute toward arrangements that are whimsical and chic.

Exercise assists the body to rid itself of waste products, and it favors mental activity too. Five minutes of simple calesthenics in the morning are a pick-up, treatment, help start the day right. Stand erect, hands on hips, inhale and exhale slowly. Place the hands above the head, lift up on the toes, down on toes slowly; repeat ten times. Next, lift hands high, come up on the toes, touch floor without bending the knees.

For bleaching the skin and refining the pores, try a pack made of oatmeal. Mix two tablespoonfuls with hot water enough to form a thin paste; add the juice of a lemon. Smear over the skin and cover with two layers of cheesecloth, slip out from under the cloth when breathing will be comfortable. Lie down and sneak a fifteen minute nap. Wash off with tepid water, slap on the massage cream, the bristles.

When shampooing naturally curly hair rinse with warm water, rub in melted soap, rinse, use soap once more, then rinse for the second time. No cold water; curly-curs don't like it. After the final rinsing with the spray, turn the hot water on in the wash bowl and steam the hair. Dry so it doesn't drip, then coax in the wave lines with comb and fingers.

The oval shaped finger nail is supposed to be the proper caper, but it's not so good for long, narrow nails. Stubby nails need long eaves, somewhat pointed. Cutting thickens nails, so nail scissors seldom form a nice line. Use a file, working from either side towards the center.

Fashion Fancies

By Alice Alden

A mysterious air should be easy to acquire when wearing one of the new black velvet evening wraps cut on svelte lines. Such a model is one of soft black velvet with a throw-over scarf of the material edged with a deep band of black fox. The same fur makes the deep cuffs and trims the edge of the gathered skirt panel.

Quite bowled over by the bowler or derby shaped hat are ever so many young women, and the model on this line, made of black velvet with a black velvet visor and has a black and white wing at the side.

Simply sumptuous is an evening coat of midnight blue velvet with a yoke and sleeves of ermine. The yoke seams for sleeves extend a border at either side of the skirt so that at back, the velvet forms a point.

More than a dash of color is apparent in many of the new frocks. There we have a black crepe with a circular skirt of black crepe and a sleeveless jumper of white velvet with a yoke and sleeves of ermine. The yoke seams for sleeves extend a border at either side of the skirt so that at back, the velvet forms a point.

Try and beat it if you can, this superb combination of black and white. Here is a lovely gown of black tulle with white velvet with ruffles worn with a short fitted jacket of ermine that boasts a belt that ties in a flat bow of the fur.

Don't forget your gloves when wearing a formal afternoon frock. With black and white what would be nicer than an elbow length glove of fine white doeskin with long slender seams and pointed cuffs. Round pearl buttons decorate the outside of the wrist.

We are too fond of the tricorne shape worn to one side. Such a model is one in white velvet trimmed with natural ostrich feathers and tips nestling at the side of the face.

Cocoa Valued As A Food

"Please make me a cup of cocoa". How often have we heard this, and maybe said it ourselves from the time we were children. If we know how valuable a food cocoa is perhaps we would have said it oftener. For the cocoa bean, from which cocoa is made, is a "vegetable egg" for nourishment, as one celebrated dietitian put it. Cocoa is richer in muscle-building qualities than veal, lean mutton or eggs. It is also a stimulant, a remover of fatigue, and a quickener of the brain and nervous force.

Use a Quality Brand.

The cocoa beans are roasted, shelled and ground fine; some of the cocoa butter, or fat, must be removed, as it becomes indigestible if the full natural amount is left in. However, the temptation is sometimes too great for the makers of "bargain counter" cocoa, and nearly all of the cocoa butter is removed for sale elsewhere, and such cocoa is indigid and undernourishing. It is well to buy a good brand of cocoa which will give real nourishment and has a delicious flavor cocoa that should have.

Like most people, you will have tasted cocoa that was so smooth and bland that you were glad it was as health drink, and there was no reason to refuse a second cup. You have also tasted grainy, flat-flavored cocoa, with a dark sediment thick in the bottom of your cup. Perhaps you were disappointed, and cocoa did not figure often in your daily diet—which was a pity.

However, perhaps your cocoa was not made properly, and even a good cocoa can be disappointing in the cup if little care is not exercised in preparing it.

Your liquid may be of milk or part milk and part water. The flavor and nourishment will vary as you reduce the proportion of milk.

The amount of cocoa per cup may also be varied. For the child you might use all or nearly all milk, and allow one teaspoon of cocoa for the cup of liquid. This will be strong enough for most adult tastes and some occasions, but for a royally rich beverage, healthful and nourishing to a degree, the amount of cocoa can be increased up to three level teaspoonfuls (one tablespoon) per large cup.

Sweetening, too, will vary with the amount of cocoa used as well as with the taste of the individual. When making cocoa for a group it is wise to sweeten moderately and pass the sugar bowl. Cocoa with a well-developed sweet tooth. Salt is essential to the good cup of cocoa —just a few grains for the cup of liquid.

Two Good Methods

Put into a cup a teaspoonful of cocoa and the same quantity of sugar—mix well. Then add boiling water in the quantity desired. Add milk or cream and more sugar to taste. The better the brand of

Y'S MEN' CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Plans Laid for Activities of Club During Winter Months

The spirit of activity—the urge to get going and to accomplish things, most certainly imbues the members of the Y's Men's Club. Many matters are under consideration for the winter's programme of them being well under way. It will be interesting to watch pleasure by many people that the club intends staging for the winter season. The one which they produced last season was most enjoyable and served to bring out a number of talent. Mr. J. O'Gorman is the chairman of the committee which has the arrangements for the play in hand. Other chairmen of the committees are Mr. N. Edwards and Mr. Mahy.

The free party for the children will be given as usual this year at Hallowe'en, and a week later than ever before given the kiddies is being arranged for. The committee, the chairman of which is Mr. Ralph Morden, is the other members being Mr. E. Boyd, Mr. R. WaKes and Mr. T. Blake.

The annual dance which is always anticipated with much delight by the members of the club, place on the night of November 11 in Johnston's Academy. Elaborate arrangements are being made which will undoubtedly result in this year's dance being the most enjoyable and successful affair ever given by the club. Mr. Johnston is in charge of the dance is composed of Mr. V. Wilson, chairman; Mr. A. Welr, Mr. A. Bryant and Mr. R. Scott.

The members of the club and numerous guests had the delightful privilege of listening to a most interesting and instructive address from Dr. Ross Mitchell, secretary of the Canadian Council of the Y.M.C.A. in Canada, at the regular meeting supper at the Y.M.C.A. building on Monday evening. Mr. M. J. Blanchard, the president of the club, occupied the chair and introduced the speaker. Dr. Mitchell has only recently assumed office, is making a most tour of the various local organizations as possible and in view of the splendid address given he made by the Belleville Y.M.C.A. he is, no doubt, busy one. All of those who heard Dr. Mitchell evening declare that his address was one of the most interesting of the kind they have ever heard and that it was a great privilege to have him speak on "The Economic Situation."

Decision As To Route Of Trans-Canada Highway Will Be Deferred

Toronto, Oct. 20—Decision as to the route of the Trans-Canada Highway through Northern Ontario would be delayed until the respective costs of various proposed routes had been closely investigated, said Hon. William Finlayson, Provincial Minister of Lands and Forests, after the Canadian Club here yesterday.

"It is the duty of my department to delay decision until every angle has been thoroughly investigated," he said. "It shouldn't be forced by public opinion to make a decision before that information has been completed. Furthermore, there is no need for a hasty move for the highway is not going to be finished next year or the year following."

Floods have been, a common scourge of the world since legendary times.

British "Bobbie" Strives For Law and Order

This lively scrimmage is far from reminiscent of what is expected of Red Russia that of usually staid, peaceful London, but such scenes as the battle between a London policeman and several marchers in an unemployment parade, have become frequent in the British capital as demonstrations increase over prevailing economic conditions. A London policeman was trying to keep a marcher from the hands of the struggling marchers as this picture was snapped by a enclosure Oxford Street.

P. M. MAXWELL GOES ON TRIAL

Sentenced Four Foreigners Who Appealed Sentence

St. Thomas, Oct. 20—Action for $20,000 against Police Magistrate C. P. Maxwell, of St. Thomas, commenced before Mr. Justice Rose in Supreme Court here today. The action arose out of the alleged false imprisonment of four foreigners, Gelaw Bizorcnok, Tony Pokoywa, Joseph Brezdeski and Joseph Pradzki.

The four men found in a box car on the Canadian National Railways, were sentenced to two months in jail each, with a recommendation for deportation. They were charged with breaking and entering with intent to commit an indictable offence.

Evidence of the four was obtained only after great difficulty. Pradzki was the only one who understood English. Their sentences were repealed and upset by the Appeal Court.

U. S. No Longer Can Demand Payment and Refuse Debtor's Goods

Toronto, Oct. 20.—Concerted action on the part of several countries by suspension of international loans or cutting down of debts and enforcement of more favorable terms would effect an improvement in world economic conditions within a few weeks according to Professor W. A. Mackintosh, of the Department of Economics at Queen's University, Kingston.

Addressing the Young Men's Canadian Club here last night, Professor Mackintosh declared world tariff reductions would be necessary for credit nations and that the United States in particular could no longer demand payment of debts and continue to refuse to take goods of the debtor nation.

HYDRO BLAMED FOR TRAGEDY

Jury Says "Management Faulty in Lakon Day Smash

Windsor, Oct. 20.—(CP)—The Hydro Electric Railways management was found responsible for the trolley accident which caused the death of Mrs. Beatrice Temple, when a coroner's jury last night returned their verdict.

Following is the text of the verdict:

"Mrs. Beatrice Temple came to her death on Sept. 10 from injuries received when a southbound Hydro-Electric car turned over on the Howard Avenue loop. We find that Motorman Cross was exonerated from all blame and that the railway company is to blame, first, for allowing an operator without a proper O.K. to operate on the Howard Avenue line; second, the switch from a safety standpoint should have been set for the main line at all times and also should-have been properly lighted. The management of the Hydro-Electric Railways has shown inefficiency in many respects."

Mrs. Temple was injured when a heavily loaded Chrysler, Hydro-Line and Amherstburg car went into an open switch and a loop at Grand Marais Road and Howard Avenue. The car turned on its side and nearly 30 passengers were hurled. Mrs. Temple died two days after the accident which occurred on Sept. 8, Labor Day.

Dr. C. V. Mills was the coroner.

BRINGING UP FATHER, By George McManus

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by
TOM GILL

In quiet sympathy Aunt Clara listened to the girl's story, and when the end came, as it did inevitably in a flood of tears, the older woman put her arm about the girl and led her into the quiet coolness of the house.

"Let's worry no more, dear, about trips to Mexico City. Instead we'll talk about that big lover of yours. How did you two children decide you were in love?"

Through her tears the girl smiled up. "That's what's called calmin' the patient, isn't it?"

"Don't you care what it's called. I'm giving you a wonderful chance to talk about your Ted." She leaned back, looking at the girl with pity and something of envy. "And you do love him, don't you, dear?"

"Love him? It's as if I had been waiting for just this to happen for always. As if all my life before was just a kind of preparation for now. Does love always come like that, Aunt Clara? Does it come to everyone like that? It almost frightens me to me alone this thing should be. Is it always like that, and can one keep it by just being glad?"

"The older woman made no answer. She may have been wondering how to reply, wondering if anyone ever could reply to that eternal question.

"Dear," she said at last, "that word love takes me back so many half-forgotten years. You will have to ask a wiser woman how long love lasts or when it comes, or why. I can only tell you that it is the most precious thing that you will ever know, and that the years have nothing to bring in compensation for its loss. For that reason, my advice would be that you see Uncle Morales and everyone else in the old familiar place before you give up Ted Radcliffe. Today he is the most talk-of human being in all the border country, and Verdi is for him to a man. Bob told me—Sh-h is a dead secret—he's going to make your young man a partner. How now did you decide to love him?"

"I couldn't help it."

She laughed. "Of course not. It just came over you like pneumonia, didn't it, dear?"

Then suddenly Aunt Clara's eyes widened as she looked out the window. She chuckled. "Well, we'll have to admit the dear uncle doesn't let much cactus grow under his feet. Look!"

Jumping to the window the girl followed her gaze to see Paco Morales's car swinging down the long winding road of the military post. She turned to Aunt Clara with a gasp of dismay.

"Oh, I am so weary of fighting and of words," she sighed.

Gently Aunt Clara led her to the stairs. "Up there for you, little girl. Lie down on my bed. I'm going to entertain your precious uncle myself. Thank God for nervous headaches. You've got a beauty one. Run along. She waved the breathless girl upstairs. "Spanish grandees are just as sick as for me, dear," she assured the girl, "especially when any one for the day have been all shot to hell."

So it came about that Paco Morales, a moment later, was bowing over the hand of Aunt Clara and listening to the interest in the fable of Adela's headache. Aunt Clara let no time be wasted in that part clear.

"Adela's in my room now. The girl is on the verge of going to pieces. I know, of course, what's pleased, if you don't mind a candid woman's opinion. I've been wondering how an intelligent man like you can at times make such a deplorable ass of himself."

Morales's thin lips parted. 'she ran away,' he said. "like some common peon girl."

"Of course she did, and for the same fundamental reason—love."

Aunt Clara offered her guest a cigarette, then lighted one herself. "I wonder if you know how astonishing it seems to me to find you, of all men, baffled by this thing called Love. Paco Morales, I have known you—how many years is it? Ever since the major was first stationed here and that's over thirty years. And I remember the tales of those years, the wild romance of one Paco Morales when we were all much younger than we are now, and I wonder how one can so completely forget that love, when it comes, takes us and makes us do its will. But instead of remembering that that high wisdom, you have acted toward Adela as if you didn't know what youth or love or entire meant. And yet," she smiled, "and yet I've reason to believe that you did."

"Senora," interrupted the Spaniard. "It was not to talk of my youth I came here, but to bring back Adela."

"The woman's voice was still patient. "You've not been clear about this, Paco Morales, and yet men call you wise, as the world goes."

"I am sorry."

"Listen. There is something of the cruelty of the beast in you. I can see it in your face. I know it is dangerous to do what you are doing. The girl is distraught, desperate. Ted Radcliffe I know, he would break you in two if Adela suffers at your hands. But your unspeakable pride won't let you see this. You have threatened her with exile, threatened to tear her away from the man she loves and from this land she loves, and now you're surprised that she refuses at all this."

"Si. I am surprised. Surprised and disappointed."

Impatiently she shook her head at the trite phrase. "What would parents do without that bromide? I tell you again, Paco Morales, you're not wise enough to expect her to submit as a Spanish girl of your generation would have submitted. But Adela is of this generation, and America's ways lie near to her heart."

Coldly Morales raised his hand. "Senora, again you are mistaken. I do not come to theorize. I come for Adela. Please to tell her I am here."

Aunt Clara's cigarette flared dangerously. Not often had men addressed her in just that cold, relentless tone. She fought, not too successfully, for patience.

Ignoring his command she asked bluntly, "Just why do you object to Ted Radcliffe?"

"Object? In what sense, senora?"

"You know perfectly well what I mean. Is there any good reason why he couldn't make Adela happy?"

"Is there any good reason, senora, why every American adventurer should be welcomed by me as Adela's suitor?"

Aunt Clara smiled. "I shouldn't be so sure about the adventurer part, Paco Morales. It's no secret that Ted Radcliffe will be a partner of Bob within the year."

"We waste time, senora. May I again remind you I come for Adela? And may I add that Mexican custom gives the guardian unreserved authority over the ward?"

The woman's color had heightened. "In this case, isn't it just now and we're not in Mexico?"

Morales's eyebrows rose in polite surprise. "I do not understand."

Aunt Clara's patience had reached its end. "I think you are now on American soil. What is more, you are on a military reservation of the United States. I mean further that Adela came to me for protection. If I gave this girl over to you, I would be lending a hand to God knows what mischief. I have no slight zeal up this silly quarrel, but now I'll keep Adela here as long as she wants to stay. Yes, and now, if I weren't the well-bred wife of a high ranking officer, I'd say, 'What in hell are you going to do about it, Morales?'"

Silently Morales reached for his hat and gloves. Very correctly the bowed. Hand on the doorknob he turned. "I must ask you, in turn, what Major Blount will say to all this."

Aunt Clara exhaled a cloud of cigarette smoke. "I hadn't thought about it," she answered casually. "He'll probably recommend me for the Congressional Medal."

CHAPTER XXXI.

Among the Mexican foothills Blount had struck a hot trail.

Many times before the chase had been close, but never so promising as that night in early April. It was a high time. All through the blustering Mexican winter Blount had combed the border foothills in search of El Coyote, and now, with the coming of another spring, the old soldier's temper had not sweetened by repeated failures. No one knew how much those months of disappointment had meant to the disappointed soldier. For long months the smiles of the men in Verdi had rankled. "The major's out after 'El Coyote again," they would say, and laugh. It was a stock joke. Everyone knew it. The major knew it. During March he had redoubled his efforts. The war department had given him the use of a band of scouts from Fort Leslie Ulrich and raised the number of his cavalry to two hundred. And now tonight scouts had brought him news of a large band, numbering between forty and fifty riders, who had passed along the foothills earlier in the day. They were making toward Ice-Box Canon.

Blount too knew the Canon. He had camped there the fall before. He knew that five miles beyond the mouth it widened into a grassy meadow, watered by a spring, surrounded by high, rocky cliffs. At the upper end a narrow trail made by game and cattle emerged, and led through a precipitous pass to the summit of the foothills. Beyond lay the land of the Yaqui.

Only a chance, but the major took it. If the band intended camping all night, he might be able to block up both entrances, provided he could get men to the upper end in time. If he could, he would have them between two fires. It meant a long, forced march through the night on the single chance that the bandits might remain for the spring until dawn.

Calling his chief scout, the major stretched the situation. "It's a gamble," he concluded, "but a good one and we've got to follow it. I want you to pick twenty men, take two machine guns and get to the pass by sunup. Place your guns there and hold it. You may find yourselves outnumbered two or three to one. But they can't come through that neck of a bottle fast enough to give you any trouble. Half a dozen men could hold that pass against an army. You could hold it with machine guns. At dawn I'll move ahead with the rest of the men. If we're lucky El Coyote will find himself between us and granite walls on each side."

Half an hour later the pick of Blount's nine, twenty in all, had silently saddled and slipped out into the night. At midnight the major ordered the remaining forces to break camp, and led them for two hours at a quick walk. Once a horseman rode out into the darkness and, returning an hour later, reported to the major. The band had turned up the canon.

"The chances are they're going through, and then we have only to beat them to its pass. How far are we now from the mouth of the canon?"

"Less than half an hour."

"Good! Lead on. We'll camp at the mouth until dawn. That will give the men a chance for a little sleep. But no fires. It's cold coffee and sandwiches for breakfast, and a damned early breakfast, too."

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Belle

BRILLIANT TALENT MAKES "MY SIN" A GREAT PICTURE

The feature attraction at the Belle Theatre tonight is "My Sin," with Tallulah Bankhead and Fredric March and a supporting cast of exceptional talent. All the world knows of the astonishing success of Tallulah Bankhead on the open stage, particularly in London where for eight years she became a veritable craze with English devotees of the theatre. And the Londoner knows his dramatics. They are all schooled in the art of "make believe." They spot talent instantly and never fail to award merit a prominence and praise that talent is buttressed by beauty, then all London becomes enslaved to the new queen of the drama. This was Tallulah's seeting for eight years.

When Miss Bankhead returned to her native land, Paramount immediately secured her for the stellar role in "Tarnished Lady" in which she scored an unquestioned victory as screen star of extraordinary brilliance.

In "My Sin", Fredric March plays opposite Miss Bankhead. The play is a thrilling story of the regeneration of two human derelicts through mutual sympathy and an undying love.

Here is a story that demands an actor of strength, versatility, and inherent sympathy for its leading male characterization. Paramount made a wise selection when they cast Mr. March for the part. He has a likable personality and a reservoir of dramatic ability ample for the most strenuous demands, yet he can be delicate when subtleties are required in the part.

A splendid varied array of short offerings preceded the presentation of the feature offering.

The entire program will be repeated again tonight for the last time, to be followed tomorrow by Joan Crawford and Pauline Frederick in "This Modern Age."

JOAN CRAWFORD DAZZLING IN "THIS MODERN AGE"

Pauline Frederick Featured

Joan Crawford has done it again in her new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "This Modern Age," which is the feature attraction at the Belle, commencing tomorrow, matinee daily.

By "done it again" we mean she has given to the theatre-going world another of her extremely accurate, authentic and vividly-depicted portraits of the modern girl.

"This Modern Age" is worth any one's time because it so exactly describes the type of young girl in these modern times. As the mother in this picture, Pauline Frederick acts as no female ever gets out and makes whoopee with the youngsters.

In fact, the excellent drama of the piece revolves around the infatuation of daughter Joan when suitor Neil Hamilton tells her, "I love you—I love you" and repeats it.

At The Capitol

MAGNIFICENT DRAMATIC HEIGHTS IN "MIRACLE WOMAN".

The sweeping significance of a screen play like "The Miracle Woman" which opens today, at the Capitol Theatre, should long remain in the memory of theatre-goers. Here is a brilliantly conceived film about the age-old but powerful theme of regeneration through love. Barbara Stanwyck contributes another of her memorable performances in the dramatic and emotional starring role. Without any question of doubt, here is a star that is, sensational. She is one of the outstanding actresses in the beautiful and a performer of rare ability. Such sincerity in acting is rarely seen. She has made every one of her screen interpretations a masterpiece through her ability to actually feel her way into the part. Don't miss her performance in this film.

From the standpoint of dramatic value, "The Miracle Woman" is full of pathos and human appeal. Embittered by the death of her minister father, a pretty and beautiful Florence Fallon falls under the influence of a rascally adventurer, named Hornsby, who utilizes the dramatic ability of the girl for dishonest commercial purposes. Subsidiary at first, her conscience gradually awakens, but it is not until her meeting with John Carson, a blind aviator, who moves her to shame by his faith, that she definitely rebels! And what a rebellion! It is enough to say that few people who see Barbara Stanwyck in this thrilling denouement, will forget the enormity of her portrayal. She is simply grand!

The supporting cast includes Sam Hardy who scores as the villainous Hornsby; David Manners, who plays the role of the blind aviator, Beryl Mercer, Russell Hopton, Thelma Hill, Aileen Carlyle and Harry Todd. And they're all good. Each contributes a definite bit toward an almost artistically perfect picture.

RICH BEYOND THE DREAMS OF AVARICE

Spencer Says Forefathers Would Consider Conditions Fine

IF THEY COULD SEE

Conditions in Canada Contrasted With Other Countries

"How to Meet the Present Crisis," was the title of an interesting address before the Belleville Rotary Club Monday by Dr. E. M. Best, chief executive officer of the Y.M.C.A. for Canada. Causes leading up to present conditions were sketched. At the armistice people chanted "Thank God, it's all over" but the bill had yet to be paid and is still being paid; the total for combatants, two billion dollars; in war loans and annual payments of interest, one hundred million dollars show the high cost of war and the insanity with which its evil effects hangs on—yet great sums are being spent on armament preparing for the next war, five billion dollars last year by the nations, who fought a war to end all wars. Following the great war came standards of economic warfare, battle of the tariffs in which each country tried to build great commercial walls to keep out goods from other nations. Carrying out this idea to its logical sequence provinces should have tariffs so that Quebec goods could not enter Ontario in competition with Ontario made goods, and still further than each municipality should put up a wall to keep out made within the borders of that municipality. Then there was the gold standard and the price crisis. Some one has described the bulls and bears of Wall street as folks who borrow money from the banks at ten percent to buy two percent stocks and those who sell ten percent stocks to get two per cent interest on bank deposits.

Machinery Makes Change

Machinery has made a big change in human relations, said the speaker, who gave instances of how the age of machinery has displaced human labor, how sixty-four men unloading pig-iron were displaced by a machine operated by one man. Automatic telephones displace thousands of human operators, and longer trains displaced railwaymen.

Over-capitalization, speculation, greed and the get-rich-quick fever were among the causes of present conditions, said the speaker, that bought was just as bad as the sale or buying of both had the same purpose in view, of getting rich quick at someone else's expense.

Inadequate pay to labor was stressed by the speaker as one of the causes of present conditions and general unrest, inasmuch as labor was ninety per cent of the population. In the United States it was estimated that the industrial dollar was divided 56 to labor and 44 to capital, but in that labor division was counted executive salaries and bonuses including the $1,500,000 bonus given to the head of the steel industry.

Applies Einstein's Theory

Applying Einstein's doctrine of relativity to world conditions, who ordained that North America should reach such high levels of living comforts, while residents of Asia should descend to such unbelievable low levels? In China he saw rickshaw drivers begging for fares with tears in their eyes for if they did not get that ten cents fare in Chinese money, (ten cents in ours) they would not eat that day.

Mr. Best related incidents and scenes as experienced and witnessed by him in China, almost unbelievable, among the starving millions, also conditions in Russia, Germany and England, all of which countries conditions were much worse for the poor than in North America, but he found a spirit of cheerfulness and none of the complaining and calamity howling which is heard in our own only trouble here is that the standard of living has been so high that everybody objects to any recession from that level, if our pioneer ancestors could look back and see how we are living today they would conclude that we are rich beyond the fondest dreams of avarice, said the speaker.

It is a significant fact, said the speaker, that in Ontario eleven thousand more automobiles were sold in the first six months of 1931 than in the same period of 1930, lower priced cars, it is true, but showing that there is no lack of money to buy these things.

Incidents Given

Incidents of racketeering in stocks, over-capitalization, etc., were given by the speaker, who spoke of some stocks he held himself which had soared to high levels and then dropped to the cellar. He had no cause to complain, however, for the stock was still quoted at considerably higher than he had originally paid for it and was paying good dividends. Some people complained bitterly because the stock did not remain at its inflated high value when they were big profit makers on paper.

Dr. Best closed with a stirring appeal for support of the things most worth while in the world today, the stabilizers, such as the church, the school, the home, and the Y.M.C.A., the latter being the conserver and developer of the young manhood resources of the nation, a developer of character and good citizenship, which was stampeded by the cry of alarmists to stop anything, stagnation is no cure, keep all things worth while going with pep and vigor.

In the opinion of the speaker what the world needs most at this time is a stirring revival of the old time religion which folks have wandered so far from—a getting closer to real Christian standard and ideals.

Dr. Best was introduced by Rev. C. W. Bishop and Rotary appreciation was expressed by R. J. Graham.

As a sidelight on the interesting "career" of Al Capone, it has been revealed that every time the gang leader attires himself in the morning he is wearing approximately $700 worth of apparel. The staggering sum was totalled during Capone's trial in Chicago for evading his Federal income tax, when he was found guilty by a jury. How the $700 is arrived at is shown on the margin of Al himself. Fancy paying $10 for a pair of garters, $1 for a collar. Me, oh, my!

ELECTRIC BULBS TURNED OFF

To Show World What It Would be Like With out Life of Edison

West Orange N.J., Oct. 20.—The body of Thomas Alva Edison lay in state today, while thousands—the great and the unknown—filed past age and tribute.

He rested in the library of his laboratory, in the little room, where with lest than a year to go, many of his wizardries of science took shape.

More than 10,000 persons—school children, Edison plant employees, relatives and their curious — he waited in a long queue throughout the mellow day yesterday before he came to the end.

The inventor will be buried in West Orange tomorrow. Final arrangements have not been announced but it is thought that Dr. Walter Arthur R. Brown, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Orange, would officiate. Final services will be at the plant in Edgewater cemetery. The funeral service hour is 2.30 p.m.

President Hoover was still undecided today on his plan to attend the funeral. It was indicated in the White House secretariat that Mr. Hoover would reach a decision by tonight.

Meanwhile a public demand for a national tribute to Mr. Edison's memory has swept the country.

Acting Governor Wolber of New Jersey proclaimed that all electric lights in the State should in streets or factories—be extinguished at 7.30 p.m. for one minute tomorrow as a reminder of what life would have been without Mr. Edison's invention of the incandescent bulb.

Several railroads and industrial concerns have announced they will suspend operations for one minute in honor of the inventor.

In New York and in many other cities, flags were ordered at half mast.

JUSTICE CRAIG, TORONTO, DEAD

Administered Law in Yukon for 12 Years During Gold Rush

Toronto, Oct. 20 (CP)—The famous Klondike gold rush was recalled last night by the death of Hon. James Craig, K.C., former Judge of the Yukon.

For twelve years Mr. Justice Craig administered law in Dawson City. He resigned his appointment in 1900 and found 150 high court actions awaiting his attention when he arrived there. His health finally broke down and the slave of work and he was forced to take a month's holiday in California. HUNGER STRIKE ACHIEVES END

Manitoba Gives Assurance ot St. Vital Unemployed

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 20.— The hunger strike of St. Vital is over. It ended yesterday at noon for the six participants, who three days ago went without food in an effort to draw attention to unemployment distress in that city community. They resolved not to again touch food until assurance for unemployment relief was given by government representatives.

Yesterday four of the six conferred with government officials and were assured that food for all St. Vital's unemployed would be provided, the bills for rent, clothing and lighting would be paid, and that a conference would be called immediately to discuss public relief work.

Another Wentworth Co. Barn Prey to Flames

Hamilton, Oct. 20—Another Wentworth county barn fell a prey to flames last night to add to the list of damage wrought by fires within the past few days. A pyromaniac is thought to be responsible for the blazes, four or more having occurred in the past 48 hours.

Johnson Tew, former warden of the county, was the latest victim. His barn near Freelton, valued at $15,000 was completely destroyed, along with the season's crops and all his farmhands' implements by the narrow escape from death. He was in the burning structure but was able to make his way to safety.

A farm hand, Jim McConnell, overcome by smoke as he tried to rescue his horses, was dragged to safety by neighbors. He managed to save 15 head of cattle.

It is said that 40 per cent of recent German marriages are childless.

ELECTROCUTION IS PECULIAR

As Soon as Man Left Tar Patch, He Received Full Voltage

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 20—A peculiar accident took the life of Pasquale Disano here yesterday. Disano was tree-cutting in connection with a new building on March St. A 4,000 volt power line was struck and broken by a tree, which he felled. One end of the wire dangled on the street, which is being patched with tar, a non-conductor of electricity. Disano walked across the tar and picked up the broken wire. Then he walked over to the curb and dropped dead—electrocuted—as soon as he touched it.

EDISON SPENT BOYHOOD DAYS IN ST. THOMAS

Family Owned 800 Acres of Choice Land in East Elgin

UNCLE COMPANION

Lost Many Jobs Through Tinkering in His Spare Time

St. Thomas, Oct. 19—The death of Thomas Edison, famed inventor is of particular interest at this moment to a number of his relatives in this district, Edison's boy hood home still stands as an landmark on the banks of the Otter River, 25 miles east of St. Thomas in the little village of Vienna.

It was to this thriving little town bering town that Edison's family died when the lands on Mount Ian Island, were submitted along with those of other United Empire Loyalists. The Edisons owned 800 acres of rich valley soil in East Elgin, and it was here that Thomas Edison as a boy roamed the picturesque countryside, had his boyhood dreams, learned to swim and built up a rugged constitution that death has taken so long to wear down.

Edison's chief companion in those days was Oscar Edison, his uncle, head of the present Vienna family, which still occupies the ancient homestead. Oscar Edison was the youngest of a large family, and was not so much older than Thomas.

The future inventor was delicate in health in those days. He did not go to school early, but his mother was Nancy Elliott, a school teacher, who undertook to teach the young Thomas.

Many stories are told of Thomas Edison's early life in this district. He was always tinkering, experimenting with something. One of his first jobs was that of train news agent, but one day the water dried off a bottle of phosphorous he had in the car with him, and it set the car on fire, costing him that job.

In Port Huron it is said, he joined his father's printing house, but some man became offended at an article he wrote and threw him into the river, ending his career as a reporter.

Question of Evacuation Nothing to do with Matter

"Quite Acceptable" Says Tokyo About Decision of League

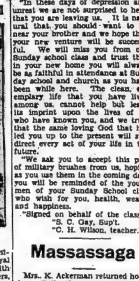
MAYBE THREE WEEKS

Tokyo, Oct. 19 (A.P.) —Official circles today described as "quite acceptable" the recommendations of the League of Nations that Japan withdraw from China, but the evacuation of Manchuria will be completed within three weeks and both China and Japan begin direct negotiations towards a solution of the Sino-Japanese controversy before hand.

The question of evacuation has nothing to do with the question of negotiations," a foreign office spokesman declared.

"It is unfortunate the League still considers the withdrawal of Japanese troops from Manchuria a simple matter. It is the crux of the whole situation, as Japan occupied Chinese territory as a means of self-defence and can not evacuate in view of the absence of Chinese government authority, which can guarantee Japanese lives and property.

It was also said the League's proviso that the proposed negotiations be held in the presence of neutral observers was not acceptable to Japan. Nine other suggestions also were received unfavorable by the Tokyo government.



The Council's terms were called to Tokyo by Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japan's spokesman before the League.

Inasmuch as General's stand had been anticipated here and Yoshizawa had been informed previously, that any such conditions would not be considered, it was not believed that fresh instructions would be sent immediately to the Japanese representative. The Cabinet, however, met to consider the suggestions this morning.

Commenting on reports the question of evacuating Manchuria was complicated because of the determination of the Japanese army to direct its own affairs, the foreign office spokesman said it was "not correct to say the army is out of control of Tokyo." The foreign office, he continued has "absolute control over all matters concerning foreign affairs."

Edgar Wallace, Writer, Acknowledges Election Fight is Clean One

Blackpool, England, Oct. 19 (C.P.) —Edgar Wallace, who is Liberal candidate for Blackpool in the present general election campaign, is displaying emphatic resentment not only against tariffs but against his Conservative opponent's allusions to his activities as a writer of novels. With Sir Walter de Frece, former Conservative member, retired, the contest is a straight fight between Mr. Wallace and Captain Erskine Boist, Conservative.

"Captain Boist has not told us just what he does except he is a retired army officer," Wallace said today. "That doesn't sound very active. If I have more imagination than he why should he reproach me?"

All the same Wallace acknowledges the fight is a very clean one. Last night he preached a sermon at the Blackpool Congregational Church and hundreds were unable to secure admission.

CRISES EASED BY SESSION

More Conciliatory Attitude Taken By Japanese Government

Geneva, Oct. 20—(AP)—A decided easement of the Manchurian crisis was reported today following a closed session of the League of Nations council.

The improvement was noted, it was learned from authoritative source, both in the military situation in Manchuria and in a more conciliatory attitude of the Japanese Government before the council.

Operation of the branch railroad between Mukden and Hailung was reported resumed and this was taken here as a sign that Manchuria was returning to more normal conditions. Council members were also encouraged by news that the Japanese had cancelled plans for declaring more troops at Shanghai.

The council was believed to have considered a Japanese note submitted last night which, after giving a history of the Manchurian conflict from a Japanese viewpoint, cited:

The Chinese Government has given assurance that it will protect our Nationals and their goods. Japan is extremely pleased with this excellent intention, but she has still some hesitation regarding its realization, especially in the present over-excited state of China herself.

The League of Nations, we are told, would be ready to assume the entire responsibility for the security of our population and their property after the arrest of our troops. It would obviously be most fortunate if the League could find a way to accomplish this.

"The lives of hundreds of thousands of Japanese people and their goods are entirely too important to be left to the Chinese Government to run risks which now, unfortunately, are too evident.

"The Japanese delegation ardently hopes that the council, considering the situation in the light of realities, may assist through its deliberate and calm action, its confidence in Japan's good will, and a just appreciation of the circumstances, to the final appeasement which is desired by all, and this will be in the eyes of the world, a striking proof of the moral authority and beneficence of the League of ...ations.

WENTWORTH FARMERS AROUSED OVER FIRES

10th Fire in Wentworth Arouses Farmers to High Nervous Pitch

John Berta's Buildings Burned After Midnight

FIRES AT MAN

Farmers Declare They Will Take Law Into Own Hand

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 21 (C.P.) — For the tenth time within a few days, the fire fiend dealt terror in Wentworth County. Early this morning wide areas were lighted by the scene of the blaze which levelled the barn of Thomas Surour, Greenville, another torch was kindled over at Westover where buildings owned by John Berta were destroyed by flames.

Berta's property is located five or six miles from the scene of the blaze earlier in the evening. Aroused by the mounting series of barn fires in his area, Berta and his wife had remained up to watch their property and had armed themselves with shotguns. Shortly after eight o'clock the terrific glare of Surours' barn was to be seen in the air and added to the anxiety of the watchers. The farmer and his wife awakened the hired man and then retired to bed, tired with their vigil.

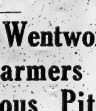
Fires at Fugitive

About one o'clock, they were awakened by a crackling sound and rushed out to find their barn in flames and discovered his assailant with him and saw a man running from the detached building. He fired instantly and saw the fugitive falter as he dived for a fence. He was fired again and missed and the fugitive vanished over the fence and into the darkness. Berta then turned to save his stock and implements.

The flames had gained too great headway, however, for in a short time the barn, the season's crop, implements, and 200 chickens and ducks were destroyed.

Save Dwelling

The wind was blowing toward the house and the roof caught fire. Berta and his son, Joe, climbed up carrying buckets of water and succeeded in extinguishing the flames in the excitement the lad slipped and fell over the roof, breaking his wrist.



Constable J. E. McDonough, of Beverly township, arrived on the scene and a search was made for the fugitive, but no trace could be found.

Farmers Nervous

"This morning, the officer stated that farmers in Beverly district had reached such a pitch of nervousness that the lives of any night prowlers would not be safe. The terrified and nervous state at a point where they would take the law into their own hands if they found any suspicious person loitering around their buildings.

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 21 — Reports reached the city at noon today that fires had destroyed barns in Berta at Troy, Ont., and Ancaster.

WHY H. SIFTON WAS REFUSED

Hour Was Too Late, Says Senator Arthur Hardy

London, Oct. 21.—Senator Arthur Hardy, chairman of the semi-public meeting last night which Harry Sifton unsuccessfully attempted to address, said that Mr. Mackenzie King, today said there had been two requests for refusing the platform to the Toronto Liberal. In the first place the Federal leader did not finish his speech until 11.30 o'clock, said Senator Hardy, adding he thought the hour too late to permit another speaker to take the platform. Secondly, Mr. Sifton was not on the speakers' list and if one person accorded permission to address the meeting, it would be difficult to refuse the same courtesy to another. "I merely used my own judgment," added Senator Hardy.

In hotel corridors and informal gatherings, the chief topic of discussion today was the attack made by Mr. Sifton against Mr. King over Beauharnois, in a statement handed to the press after the meeting. It likely will reach the control of the Liberal Association later today.

JAPAN URGES PROTECTION IN MANCHURIA

Re-establishment of Air Security is Referred

JAPAN OUTSPOKEN

Geneva, Oct. 21 — Japan received the assurance today that she cannot take her troops out of Manchuria until China provides definite assurance that Japanese in Manchuria will be protected.

The principal members of the League of Nations council could not shake the determination of Kenkichi Yoshizawa, the Japanese representative, at a long meeting this afternoon and Lord Reading of Great Britain said there probably would be an open session for the full council tomorrow.

It was during today's session that the Japanese distributed to the press another long memorandum setting forth their position.

"Something will have to be done" the memorandum concluded, "to re-establish an atmosphere of relative security in order that these conditions in Manchuria may get back to 'normal.'

"Japan considers it essential that China give assurance that she wishes to put an end to illegal, hostile acts by irresponsible and civil authorities toward the Japanese population, and that China guarantee that she will effectively continue to confine operation of their businesses without molestation."

President Of Western Wheat Pool Dies Suddenly

Major General V. A. S. Williams, Commissioner Ontario Provincial Police arrived in Belleville early Wednesday morning to hold the annual inspection of the Provincial constables and Provincial cycle patrol constables of District No. 6, the headquarters of which is located at Belleville.

About forty men were in attendance, coming from as far west as Gravenhurst, as far east as Kingston and north to Peterboro and Lindsay. The inspection was held on the main floor of the Armouries and the men looked remarkably smart when drawn up in line at attention. After the inspection the men assembled in the Sergeants' Mess, where the commissioner addressed them on matters relating to their work and duties in general. The Commissioner expressed himself as being remarkably well pleased with the smart appearance of the local corps and the inspection to which he had subjected them in every way.

Major General Williams left this afternoon for Ottawa where he will conduct an inspection of the corps in that district.

District Inspector Goodyear, of Belleville was in charge of the Provincial Constables and Inspector Grant of Toronto, was in charge of the cycle patrol corps.

PESSIMISM IN EAST PROBLEM

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 21 (AP) — There was a distinct note of pessimism this evening among persons in a position to know the trend of debate regarding Manchuria in the League of Nations Council, and the belief was widespread that the United States, represented by Prentiss Gilbert, was not backing up the league's pressure in the Orient.

Reports of conversations at Washington between Secretary of State Stimson and Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese Ambassador, appeared to have aroused fears that the United States was playing a lone hand and short-circuiting the league efforts to induce withdrawal of Japanese troops from Manchuria.

At the same time Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese representative on the council, remained adamant in his refusal to promise recall of the Japanese troops without certain guarantees which he believes China is unwilling to undertake.

WHEAT POOL PRESIDENT IS DEAD, AGED 47

Blood Clot Forms in Blood Stream - After Operation

NATIVE OF BRUCE

Elected President at Time of Inception of Pool

Regina, Sask., Oct. 21 (CP)—Operated on two weeks ago for appendicitis and apparently well on the road to recovery, J. MacPhail, president of the Saskatchewan Wheat pool since its inception in 1924, died suddenly early today when a blood clot formed in the left blood stream affecting his heart. He had been in the hospital a little less than two weeks following the second cause and his family had made arrangements to leave Regina tomorrow for convalescence.

The funeral arrangements, details were announced by Dr. Hugh MacLean, of this city, who began attending the deceased since his operation.

Outside of his activities in connection with the wheat pool little publicity came into the life of Mr. MacPhail. A farmer by vocation he stayed close to the farm all his life even when officially residing in Regina and spent much of his time in his province.

To Weel sa Child

Born 47 years ago in Bruce County, Ontario, Mr. MacPhail came west in early boyhood with his parents to Minnedosa, Man., where the family took up a farm.

The late Mr. MacPhail first came into prominence in connection with the Canadian Reconstruction when he was elected as a delegate from the agricultural secretary of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers Association to represent the early days of organization of the Saskatchewan wheat pool, he was eventually elected its first president on its inception in 1924, a position he held up to his death this morning.

He is survived by a sister and brother in Regina, two brothers residing in Elpha, Sask. his widow, formerly Miss Marion Reid of Regina and a young son, Kenneth, aged two years

Observers Report Livelier Business

Toronto Oct. 21—From various local sources improved business conditions were yesterday revealed in The Mail and Empire. In one quarter it was intimated that considerable inquiries for merchandise have lately developed, some within the last two or three weeks; and from another source it was learned that steel bond houses are unusually active compared with recent months. One large investment banking firm is said to have had the best week in weeks in over a year during the past month. These signs observers deduct that the general sentiment is well founded on this occasion and that a decided improvement may be looked for.

Garrison Acquitted of Assault, Preston Admits Perjury and Assault

Magistrate Commends F. Garrison For His Action

STORY OF ASSAULT

Four Men Change Pleas of Not Guilty of Consuming

A surprise was sprung at the adjourned sitting of the trial of Floyd Garrison, charged with unlawfully assaulting Leslie Preston, on the night of October 10th at Wellman's Corners, when Magistrate Chas. Gerrow dismissed the charge and at the same time commended Garrison for his action in the case. The four men, William Hatton, Thomas Johnson, Floyd Garrison and Leslie Preston had a change of heart, when the trial adjourned and when the case was dismissed against Garrison they asked if they might change their plea registered at the morning session respecting the "consuming" charge and pleading guilty were all fined $10.00 and $17.50 costs.

Leslie Preston, however, answered to two other charges, one of "perjury," and the other "unlawful assault of Floyd Garrison each giving grievous bodily harm" for each charge he elected summary trial and to each charge pleaded guilty. He was remanded in custody until Monday afternoon next when sentence will be pronounced. Magistrate Gerrow in dismissing Garrison, stated that he probably had provocation for his actions and he believed the man acted in self defense. "There must have been something said or done to have crossed the road that night or else Garrison would not have taken exception to his remarks," said his Worship. "Garrison acted in a commendary manner as the men were women present and he was trying to protect them. The men crossed the road using abusive language in their presence."

At the resumption of court Garrison was called to the box by his own defense to give a version of what occurred at the time of the fight. He stated he was on his way to the Corners for tobacco and saw Allen trying to pick a fight with Garrett in Maybee's store, Maybee telling him not to pick on a little man. Allen was drunk and using obscene language. He was standing in front of McCready's store, when Preston walked across the road and started fighting and abusing Maybee. At this time a car drove up in front of the store in which were some women and I remarked to the boys there were women present and to cut out the dirty language. It was then that Preston called me dirty names and I told him to mind his own business and he immediately apologized if in a fighting mood I came down off the porch of the store and both of us struck blows. Preston fell and I let him up and he rose up the road and called back "come up here and I will kill you with a club," besides using abusive language. Presently Preston returned carrying a large stone and again called for Garrison to get off that porch and I will murder you with this stone. I stepped down and defied him to strike me and Preston then and struck Garrett, at this stone interfered and Preston came up from behind and struck him in the eye when my back was turned and Maybee was holding me back and after striking me ran away." The witness denied ever having threatened Preston before George Heagle, Thomas Hutchings and Arthur Howe all gave evidence corroborating the story given by the accused.

This concluded the evidence and the result mentioned above followed.

Charges and counter-charges have been laid when the result of a party held at Wellman's Corners on October 10th was aired in police court on Tuesday before Magistrate Casement of Madoc, when Garrison was charged with assault after the prosecution had completed its evidence.

Floyd Garrison of the Township of Hawke was placed on trial on a charge of unlawfully assaulting Leslie Preston causing grievous bodily harm, which is alleged to be struck and knocked down Preston in front of McCann's store at the "Corners". Garrison stating that Preston had insulted ladies who were present, by his abusive language.

Non-Partisan Commission on Relief is Liberal Plan

E. A. LaPierre, Ex-M.P., Speaks of Political Machine

"BLANK CHEQUE"

London, Oct. 21 (CP)Appointment of non-partisan commission to take over relief administration measures in Northern Ontario was urged in a resolution passed by the annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association here last night. Moved by E. A. Lapierre, ex-M.P., Hyndman, the resolution placed the association on record as endorsing the delay in starting the work in connection with high construction in Northern Ontario, thereby delaying the starting of the unemployed workers in the north of municipalities with a view to next year when the work could have been carried on more profitably and with less hardship than in the winter time. This meeting also urged the patronage system be discontinued to be practised in Northern Ontario, and recommends that a non-partisan commission be appointed to have charge of the unemployment situation.

The Conservative government at Toronto had set up a "political machine" in Northern Ontario and using it "to corrupt the electorate", Mr. Lapierre declared. Politicians gave the government a "blank cheque" for the "wholesale development" of the northern part of the province and the use of money should be investigated, he added.

Preston's Stand
The first witness was Leslie Preston, the informant, and he told his side of the fight that started in front of McCann's store. He stated he came across the road from Mrs. Sprague's and Mrs. Johnston was standing on the stoop of the McCann store. "He told me," said the witness, "that I was insulting the women in his presence and I said he was a liar. With that he stepped down and scuffled with me and hit me on the nose. We both fell down with Garrison on top and he hit me on the side and bruised my face and head with his fists. We were separated by Reginald Allen, who walked across the street with me. The witness stated he could not eat for three or four days due to a sore jaw and that his head ached.

Cross examined by Mr. Arnold, the witness stated he and Preston quarrelled with Garrison.

"Were there ladies sitting in a car nearby?"

"Yes."

"Were you drinking that night?"

"Yes, some beer, purchased by Reginald Allen at the Royal Hotel house at Trenton."

Constable Maxwell have any say?"

"Yes, one bottle."

"How do it feel?"

"Only 11."

"Did you pick up a stone?"

"Yes."

"Then you go up behind Garrison and hit him in the face with your fist while Maybee was holding him?"

"Yes."

Another Information
Mr. Donnan—"Get another information and charge him to lay a charge of assault against this man.

"Did you use abusive or foul language to Garrison?"

"No."

Mr. Donnan—"You are on the verge of perjury, Preston, so watch your step."

"Did Garrison tell you not to use abusive language as women were present?"

"No."

William Johnson stated he heard Garrison say Preston was using abusive language and that Preston retorted "I do not have to shut up for you, but Garrison struck him then hit him in the face and the fight started. He was being thrashed by Garrison. To Mr. Arnott the witness stated that he had been drinking but only a quart that night was taken.

Reginald Allen was next called to the stand and corroborated the evidence of Preston and Johnston, adding that Garrison stated "the police back the Maybees and Prestons there was." Blake Johnson gave the best evidence of a fight in the street in front of the store of any of the witnesses. In part he said, "I heard Garrison tell Preston to be quiet as there were ladies present and Preston said he don't have to shut up for you, big boy." At that point Garrison stepped off the stoop of the store and hit Preston. Allen asked Garrison to stop and I told Garrison if he did not desist I would call the police but Garrison went on fighting. I went into the store and called the police and when I came out the men had been parted, Garrison was not at home so I jumped in my car and came to Belleville. As I was leaving Garrison called to his car but I did not go." The witness stated he did not hear any abusive language.

Thomas McCann, the store keeper and Carl Dunham all gave evidence but nothing new was tendered in their testimony. Allen was recalled by the defense and it was stated the fatal drink that he had purchased $43.15 worth of liquor and supplies from Mr. Arnott and admitted that he was only getting $2 a day part of the time for his labor. At this point adjournment was called till after the lunch hour.

BULLETIN BOARD

BICYCLIST STRUCK
George Butcher, 59 West Moira Street, has to walk today owing to his bicycle having been badly damaged when hit by a car Tuesday afternoon at about 4.30 o'clock. According to the report which he made to the city police this Wednesday morning, a boy chum of his named Allen was also riding his wheel, and he was walking alongside of him on West Moira Street. Suddenly the wheel was struck and pushed along the road by a car driven by Mr. A. E. Campbell of the Campbell Monumental Works, West Bridge Street. Mr. Campbell turned from Cedar Street into West Moira Street, going west the same direction as the boys were going. He was driving slowly and consequently the boys escaped injury, although the wheel is said to be badly damaged. The boys say that Mr. Campbell was quite fair in the matter and that he assured young Butcher that he would adjust the cost of damages to his satisfaction.

BOYS COMPLAINED OF
For boys and girls to play and have a jolly time in the open up to a reasonable hour is all right, but to have a little disturbance—making themselves a nuisance to the neighborhood—is something must be done to cause them to behave properly. The city police have received complaints that children are in the habit of congregating on Bleecker Avenue in the evening and that their conduct is objectionable. The police will investigate the matter.

$15 STOLEN FROM ROOM
One ten dollar bill and one five dollar bill making a total of fifteen dollars is a considerable sum to lose at any visitor. Constable Day, Kyle House apartments, reported to the city police on Tuesday evening that while absent from his apartment during the afternoon his pockets were entered and $15.00 stolen—made up of one ten and one five dollar bill. The police are investigating.

FINED FOR ALLEGED FISHING
A young man, Victor Hanna, pleaded guilty in police court today before Magistrate Mikel to setting a gill net in the Bay of Quinte contrary to the fishing regulations. Irving J. Lapum, district game inspector was the informant and asked for the minimum fine which was $10.00 and $3.50 costs. The fine was paid by a spectator in the court and the boy was allowed his liberty.

UNEMPLOYED MEET
A delegation of the unemployed will take place on Thursday night in Deseronto, when their various questions will be discussed, which have recently been before the citizens. The unemployed of the city have now an organization and they are approaching their public problems in a spirit of discussion rather than riot tendencies. No doubt a large number will be in attendance and probably certain solutions will be brought down that will be handed to the city council for their consideration.

Hydro Problems

A Royal Commission probe of the administration of the Ontario Hydro Commission was demanded from the Provincial Government in the legislature yesterday afternoon. It was in line with the stand of Mitchell F. Hepburn, Provincial Leader.

Specifying the "gross over-payments" in the sale of Ontario Commission Power and Transmission Company lines by a group of huge companies to John Aird, Jr., and the long term contracts for the purchase of power from private companies" as grounds warranting further investigation, the resolution declared only a non-political and judicial probe could suffice.

Blake Miller, former M.L.A., East Elgin, sponsored the Hydro resolution.

Farmers in Desperation

"The farmers of this province are in desperation," declared Dr. L. J. Simpson, M.L.A., Simcoe South, in moving a resolution deploring the abolition of preferential rates on articles from the Ottawa and the Toronto governments. Agricultural prices were the lowest in years and the dissatisfaction and unrest were noticeable among the farmers. There was a "grave danger of the Farm politics" appearing in the field unless the Liberals evolved some definite policy that would lift the industry from the economic slough, said Dr Simpson.

Tariffs Attacked

"This meeting deplores," read another resolution passed "the ruin which has fallen upon Canada's foreign trade with its consequent disastrous loss to business, industry and agriculture as a result of the present administration's tariff policies of embargoes and prohibitive customs duties, obstructive tactics and vexatious interpretations of customs regulations and the consequent loss to the re-establishment of Liberal trade policies based on staple tariffs expanding trade and consequent prosperity.

The resolution was sponsored by A. W. Roebuck, of Toronto, and R. H. Greenwood, of Toronto.

In one year, said Mr. Deachman, the Dominion Government has made upward revisions of the tariff than in all the history of the country. The British preference has been "abolished by order-in-council" despite the fact that there are only two instances United States offered Great Britain a wider preference than Canada.

FOWL SUPPER IS SUCCESS
Many Attend Anniversary Supper at Allisonville, Tues. Night

An anniversary service of a church in the community is an event eagerly looked forward to as the members of the congregation can take stock and wonder if progress has been made. Such anniversary especially in the country parishes is accompanied by a fowl supper, sponsored by the ladies' aid or kindred societies in order that funds may be realized to carry on the year or work planned by these energetic women, who are the backbone of any church organization.

Tuesday night at Allisonville, one of the oldest settlements in this district held their annual fowl supper and it was a success in every respect. The tables were loaded with the products of the harvest, chicken being the principal meat. A variety of forms of cooking chicken was set before the guests and certainly ample justice was done to the good things provided Chicken was not the only food but all the trimmings were there, salada, scalloped potatoes and pie with the usual trio and description. The food was delicious and well cooked as only the house wife of Prince Edward County can serve a meal.

At the conclusion of the bountiful repast, Rev. J. M. Plant, minister of the circuit, called the meeting to order and a splendid programme was provided. Charles Goyer and his Bon Ton orchestra supplied a number of musical selections. Miss Mitchell and Miss Melville contributed two solos and a duet was rendered by Miss Patricia Fair Meagher of Belleville who gave two readings and the whole programme was appreciated by the audience. The committee in charge realized a substantial amount for their evening's work.

Barrister Fails To Observe Signal

Simcoe, Oct. 21—Because he failed to heed a watchman's signal recently at the Lake Erie & Northern crossing here when a train approached, Frank Wallace, Brantford barrister, was fined $10 and costs. A charge of $25.50 on a reckless driving charge, laid against Wallace, was suspended for one day. Wallace claimed that he had ample time to make the crossing and was 300 feet down the road when the train passed. The watchman stated that when Wallace's vehicle passed the intersection, the car was doing 14-15 yards away. The incident took place at the same crossing and on the same day as that which resulted in the fining of Judge Innes. Wallace has declared his intention of entering an appeal.

GARRISON ACQUITTED

ssep. Evidence was given that there had been a drinking party previous to the alleged assault for Garrison, William Maybee, Reginald Allen, Harold Gunning and Wilfred Maughan were all charged with consuming liquor in a public place. All excepting Harold Gunning pleaded not guilty to the charge and were remanded for one week. Gunning was fined the minimum $10.00 and $17.50 costs, the fine being paid. It is likely that a charge of "having" liquor and supplying liquor to a minor will be laid against Allen when he appears for trial after the Garrison case. The prosecution was conducted by B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney, while R. K. Arnold appeared for Garrison the other parties not being represented by counsel. Garrison elected summary trial, and pleaded not guilty.

Witnesses Warned
The Crown Attorney did not deem satisfied with the evidence offered by the prosecution in the Garrison action for many times he warned witnesses that a charge of perjury might be laid against them and a sentence of 14 years in penitentiary imposed. The men charged with consuming liquor are alleged to have been drinking beer purchased by Allen at a house established by Johnson, Preston and Allen. About seven o'clock on the night of October 10 Preston and Allen went to the store of Milton Maybee and secured a supplement. Leaving that store they walked across the road to the store of Thomas McCann and on the stoop of that store stood Floyd Garrison. It was alleged by the witnesses for the prosecution that Garrison told Preston to shut up as he was "insulting the ladies present. Preston alleged to have remarked, "You can't shut me up, big boy," and a fight was on. Just what happened during the melee is better told by the witnesses themselves as the fight was a mix-up affair.

Reginald Allen was given a stiff grueiling by the defense counsel. R. K. Arnott, especially on his skill ity to buy beer and liquor on the money he was earning and he finally admitted in the witness box that liquor was purchased on his permit not intended for his own use. Before the case was opened for evidence Mr. Donnan informed the listeners in the court that any women, who did not wish to hear rough language had better retire and a number sitting in the court withdrew from the chamber.

WALL STREET TURNS UPWARD
After Early Hour Dip, Prices Advance Steadily

New York, N.Y., Oct. 21— The stock market refused to be downcast as result of the moderate sale of securities by the Senate investigated the railroads by the interstate Commerce Commission.

The market was dragged down by a rather wide break in the carrier issues during the morning and speculators who had endeavored to clean up on the basis of a partial break on the decision yesterday, received burned fingers. After midday, the market started upward under leadership of the Utilities and Industrials more than regained early losses.

Gains Scored

American and Foreign Power soon recorded a gain of 2 points, and other issues up a point or more including John Manville, American Power and Light, Pacific Lighting, Byers, Consolidated Match preferred, and Coca Cola. Steel issues American Can, American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Sears Roebuck, and Consolidated Gas rebounded after selling off 2 to 3 points. In the Rails, there were recoveries of 1 to 2 points after losses of 4 to 8 in such issues as Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania. Trading grew active on the afternoon advance.

Credit conditions were largely stationary. Call money was steady at 2½ outside at 3 percent. Although the loan desk rate was maintained at 1½, the 1,100 unemployed men registered here borrowed $2,500,000 on three month paper at 4 1-4 per cent, however, in contrast to 1 2-4 percent on similar borrowings a few weeks ago.

Stock Market
Toronto, Oct. Oct. 21—Toronto stock exchange market was easier this morning. Leaders slipped fractionally due to the decline in New York but the market as a whole was offering stout resistance around middday. Volume was moderate, yet showed no great release of shares for profit taking considering the weakness of this week.

Several additional issues were removed from the pegged list this morning. These included Consolidated Bakeries, Consolidated Industries, Canadian Oil supported petroleum among others and all acted well with not more than fractional recessions from the former minimums occurring.

$8,000 BARN BURNED

Accused Was Rescued From Previous Out-Break

Hamilton, Oct. 21—Increasing his toll to nine buildings, Wentworth County's pyromanic set fire Monday night to the barn of Thos. Burrows of Greensville, and the $8,000 structure was burned to the ground.

Developments swiftly followed the conflagration.

James McConnell, 22-year-old farmhand engaged by Johnston Troy, who lives directly opposite Burrows and who lost his barn with all its contents was taken from the crowd of 200 spectators by provincial and county police and was held on a vagrancy charge. The officers allege he told conflicting stories.

Earlier in the day David Blain, whose only address was given as Hamilton, was taken into custody by County Chief Constable James Clark, on charge of stealing sheep from the farm of John Swinton, the scene of a barn fire Thursday night, was laid and Chief Clark admitted that more might be further developments.

The first to discover the fire which caused $15,000 loss at the Troy farm where he has worked all summer, young McConnell also sounded the alarm which gave Burrows the first intimation of the blaze.

Could Not See Fire

Running from his bedroom in scant attire, Burrows hurried to investigate but could not see the fire but climbed into the hayloft. A patch of hay about two yards wide was burning and he attempted to extinguish it but found the resulting heat nothing could save his structure, hurried to release his livestock.

All but two of a herd of fourteen head of cattle were saved, and several horses escaped.

The police are puzzled to know how McConnell could have spotted the blaze from the spot where he was not visible to the owner when he ran from his home.

It was McConnell who related to reporters his thrilling escape from the burning Troy barn. He said that after he noticed the fire he ran to save the livestock and after liberating the horses, tripped over some harness and was nearly suffocated before neighbors hauled him to safety.

Questioned in the back kitchen of the Burrows home by five police officers who were on special guard during the day, McConnell, it is alleged, admitted that he left Wellesley, Ont., after 13 barn fires because he had heard that he was blamed. Four of the razed buildings stood within a short distance of where he worked, he told the police.

When it was suggested to the young farm hand that he might have been smoking in the barn and accidentally caused the fire, he denied that he smoked. Acting Deputy Chief Maxwell, who had questioned McConnell earlier in the evening, produced a box of matches from the latter's overalls man's pocket and said he was expected a satisfactory explanation regarding their presence.

Baldwin Urges That Tariff Issue Be Placed In Commission Hands

London, Oct. 21.—Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative Lord President of the Council in the National Government, last night urged his "Liberal friends" to give unbiased consideration to his motion of the tariff question be taken from politics which would lift the tariff issue from the realm of politics and place it in the hands of a non-political commission.

Prince of Wales Lost $18,000 When Fire Burned Ranch Barns

Simcoton, Alta., Oct. 21.—Damage totalling $18,000 was done by fire which razed two barns on the Prince of Wales' E.P. ranch Tuesday, near High River, Alta. The fire destroyed the $1,500 champion cow, Balsalm Lavender; $800 champion heifer, Princeton Lily; the $600 champion bull, Princeton Jessie; and seven young bulls.

WILL BE EVOLVED

London, Oct. 21.—Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner, who returned yesterday from Canada, told interviewers he was convinced an Empire trade agreement would inevitably be evolved.

Such a development, he said, is independent of the result of the general election in Great Britain, but he made it a matter of public sentiment, which itself is independent of party politics.

THE modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month.

If you've ever taken Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry-on in comfort. Take enough to assure your complete comfort. If it is genuine Aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Aspirin tablets do not depress the heart. They do not upset the stomach. They do nothing but stop the pain.

Headache come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Aspirin will always save the day. A throat so sore that you can hardly swallow is made comfortable with one good gargle made from these tablets. Neuralgia, Neuritis, Rheumatism. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few "of these remarkable tablets. So are the pain-nagging aches that bring fatigue and "nerves" to the faces of women.

Genuine Aspirin tablets cost so very little after all, that it doesn't pay to experiment with imitations!

BOY AN ASSET SAYS SPEAKER

Kiwanian Jack Meikle Addresses Local Club In Interest of Youth

The boy as a world asset was the subject of an interesting address given by Kiwanian Jack Meikle of West Toronto Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at the weekly luncheon of the Belleville Club. The club was also favored with the presence of Miss Helen Luscombe who is visiting in the city for a few weeks, and she delighted with two appreciative solos. Arrangements were made for the Mimi ladies night being arranged for November 3rd between Belleville and Picton clubs, and George Cole, president of the club, nominated Joe Imlah, George Griffin, and Harold Dunn as a committee to complete those arrangements.

Kiwanian Jack Meikle was introduced by Bob Shortt, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by William Rands, Mr. Meikle was presented in boy's work in West Toronto community and from all reports his ideas are being put into practical use. After congratulating the club on the fine attendance and outstanding programme, he stated that fellowship was to be had in a smaller club more so than in the large ones. They as an Association have a problem to solve that challenges every service club and church organization and every man in the community to speak-er. "These are the great days, the days when immature boys are passing a living message not a dying one and they are sharing in the work where the world is being made or saving of the youth.

"It is not a platitude that the youth is the greatest asset in the world" declared Kiwanian Jack Meikle, "but a fact. We have got to hold life on the duty and that the youth is the greatest asset for three specific reasons. First, because of his unspent years. We, as older men, are about ready to lay down the tools and materials and are looking for the young men to carry on. It is the most dependable period of a boy's life and each one of us becomes a new boss in that youth not only for good but for evil. The boy in his youth is the value turning point of life and trying to find out his relationship to God. One of the greatest things this depression has brought us that it has given up an opportunity to take stock and that it is not a matter of making life comfortable but a matter of learning how to live."

Youth Solve Problem in Day

The speaker also suggested that the high school boy look to find on his relationship to the generation in which he is. "We are not going to solve the problem in our day and generation and it is for the youths that we have to look to it. It was freely predicted that the 1914 war would be over until 1934 and the boys that were youths in the early days of the struggle are the ones who will have to tell who won the war. Kiwanis has a great part to fill in this work and the better way can be devised than educational guidance. It is a work that should interest every Kiwanian and should be a feature of the work of the Belleville Club. The speaker made passing reference to the financial drive now being conducted by the Y.M.C.A. and hoped that the club would give the matter their earnest consideration.

Nation Lives on Things Of The Spirit; Not All Is Material, Says Bennett

Toronto, Oct. 21.—Canada's Prime Minister locked up his many offices in Ottawa yesterday and travelling to Toronto and back again in record time, delivered an address assembled in Convocation Hall last night that he was heard throughout Canada and made a finance honorarix for Canadian authority on street cars; they might carry on their literary work undisturbed by the financial worries.

"A nation lives on the things of the spirit; there are other considerations than purely material," Mr. Bennett said. "And I am here to indicate my belief in this direction.

"Each of us can make some contribution; that is the greatest gift our this opportunity," the Premier said.

Marking as epoch in American forestry, the U.S. Forest Service recently made a sale of wood from the Nebraska national forest, a region "less than 30 years ago was nothing but barren sand dunes."

Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King Demands Public Enquiry in Beauharnois Scandal

Reorganization of Liberal Party is Also Note Of Address

SPOKE AT LONDON

5,000 in Attendance and Many Unable to Hear Former Premier

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct., Oct. 21—Branding the parliamentary Beauharnois investigation incomplete and abortive, Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, last night, reiterated his demand for a judicial inquiry into all party campaign funds for the last three general elections.

The probe should begin at once, he suggested, and a report presented by parliament as soon as it opens. The path there would be open to adopt legislation, which would preclude further heavy campaign fund contributions from corporations.

Threw Out Challenge

Throwing out a challenge to Premier R. B. Bennett to disclose what personal contributions are made to the Conservative party chest and to reveal what corporations had donated money to the government party, the Liberal leader said he would welcome a full investigation of the actions of the opposition. The former Prime Minister threw out a strong hint to his followers he was speaking before the Ontario Liberal Association, that he might forsake the leadership unless a change was made in the party organization.

The Liberal party possessed practically no moral organization office, he said. It could not indulge in publicity because it lacked the necessary funds. A handful of stalwarts had been crying the financial load of the party for years.

Only Fair to Party

"It is only fair to the party," declared Mr. King. "For me to say that my physical endurance is not what it was as a younger man if I had to contemplate a further period of leadership under conditions of lack of organization and education in the party's work such as that which I have been speaking. I question if I should be equal to the task. I believe I can do what is expected of me by the party in the advocacy of its cause."

But this very probably would be found unnecessary, Mr. King hastened to add. He would remain in the rank and file of the Liberal party would only to be over-ride a national organization worthy of the name, and one that would result in a return to power.

Talking to a large crowd of "The Faithful" 4,500 delegates to the Association and prominent Liberals from Eastern and Western Ontario Mr. King went exhaustively into the history of Beauharnois, especially as it affected his government. He touched on two subjects only—Beauharnois and the party organization. The Grand Theatre, was the scene of the meeting and was jammed to the rafters. An overflow meeting was organized in another hall and finally to accommodate the hundreds of people unable to enter either hall, loud speakers were installed outside in the street.

First Speech Since Prorogation

It was the Liberal leader's first speech since parliament prorogued last August and it may go down as an historic address. He wasted few words and did not spare details of the lack of party organization used these words to describe the national office in Ottawa: "one clerkship, wages and salary is in arrears and an empty office, the result of which is evident."

Large campaign funds might be obviated by creation and maintenance of an up-to-date voters' list, suggested Mr. King this would make it unnecessary for parties to bear such a heavy cost of compiling and revising lists. It would switch this burden from the parties to the state. He also advocated consideration of "some measure of compulsory voting" and a Dominion Act under which it would be possible to investigate campaigns operating when wrong-doing was suspected.

Censuring Council, Parks Board Quits

Trenton, Oct., 21.—At a special meeting today the Trenton Parks Board voted to resign from office as a unit, to protest the action of the Municipal Council in refusing a by-law covering certain park land on the waterfront here. The question in dispute arose from the fact that the Council, without consulting the board, sold a portion of the softball park. The deal involved an exchange of property between Thos. James and the town. Mr. James gave the Council a small area about 600 square feet and $300 for some two acres more or less. The members of the Parks Board are D. R. Purdy (Chairman), N. F. Whitter (Secretary), C. M. Richardson, J. M. Hennessey, D. L. Jones and T. H. Jasech.

UNEMPLOYMENT ON DECREASE

Labor Secretary of England Makes Statement at Gathering

Derby, Eng., Oct. 21.—Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Labor Secretary for Dominions and Colonies in the National Government last night enumerated a number of "bullish" points for the National Administration in the course of a political speech.

In the past few weeks, he said unemployment had been decreased by 56,000. One hundred and fifty foreign firms had definitely applied for factory sites in Great Britain, and textile industries had experienced a considerable spurt, he declared, and one firm had received orders for 16,000,000 yards of cotton.

THOMAS A. EDISON

Thomas Alva Edison, whose amazingly inventive mind has enriched life far beyond the wildest hopes of his early days has ceased to exist, his laboratory will be in other hands and the work will go on, not with the same zeal as he the master inventor put into it, but yet guided by his influence. Edison is an example of the great achievement of man using the things and the powers of nature for man's betterment. Edison did not create, no man does that, but he used and directed the powers of nature to the improvement of human standards of living.

It is particularly to be noted that the master mind produced what was commonly needed, light, and music. Not one of his inventions was such as to destroy the best in man. Everything he touched was for human benefit.

Surely the inventor of the incandescent lamp, the motion picture camera, the carbon telephone transmitter, distribution of electric light and power, multiplex of telegraphs, and dynamos with armatures of low resistance was a public benefactor, the meanest as well as the most important man in the world deriving benefit.

The great man thought little of his own wealth. Money by fortunes he spent in the cause of invention. He was pleased to experiment and to add to the sum total of mechanisms benefitting the average man.

No other man can follow exactly in his traces for no other mind is just Edison's That is his glory that his mind and his work bear so high a mark for all time. But the world needs more inventors—men of the Edison frame of mind, whose love of work and ecstacy of accomplishment make them persistent searchers in the realm of matter for gifts to bring to man. Others can serve in their own way.

A GROWING DISPOSITION

The Toronto Globe comments upon the recent reference to the Catholic Church by Rev. F. C. Ward-Whate, grand chaplain of the Grange Order of Ontario West and priest-vicar of St. Alban's Anglican Cathedral, who said that the church is teaching a lesson to other churches, its insistent and incessant demand that its youth shall receive Holy Communion and that this service shall be the main service of the day. What there is a growing disposition on the part of denominational leaders to see much that is good in other religions."

This growing disposition is not confined to Toronto, but is seen in the churches at Belleville where prayers are heard at times in Protestant churches that the Roman Catholic congregation of this city may be blessed. It is seen in the reverence the Canadian Freeman (Catholic) praising the words of Premier Bennett delivered at a United Church assembly in Toronto that the only hope of the world was in the grace of God.

On Sunday afternoon a radio speaker (Jewish) spoke of Christianity and Judaism as the two great religions which had done most for the spread of the spirit of brotherhood in the world.

THE LEAGUE'S HAND?

For a day or two there was every sign of a war cloud hovering over the Orient, despite what the League of Nations Council had striven to accomplish. Yet, on Tuesday the signs of war were not so evident.

Surely the League is proving itself a mighty agency of peace. The World Court has a steadying influence. Nations cannot now go to the reckless thing and provoke a war in hot temper as they used to do.

BELLEVILLE THE HUB

The new highway from Madoc to Ottawa to cut off miles of distance is one of the many projects which has taken the entire province by fire. It will provide fifteen hundred men with jobs and will cost one million.

Belleville stands to gain by this great undertaking. The natural outlet is Belleville and the Belleville-Madoc way will be one of the most travelled roads in Ontario.

A church congregation refused to allow a newspaper to be enclosed in the cornerstone at the time of the sealing and laying because it contained the photograph of a gangster. Why should the church perpetuate the memory of a gangster chief? Some day the cornerstone might be taken out and a future congregation might learn of gangland. The church was right, what goes into a cornerstone ought to be something sound, not the story of a mushroom outgrowth of a peculiar aspect in U. S. cities.

GEORGE ARLISS IN ALEXANDER HAMILTON
By Aline Michaels

Tonight I saw romance in bloom again,
In stately setting of an older day;
Romance, rare flower whose beauty does not wane
As long as youth's tempestuous heart holds sway!
Past splendors lifted up their lights anew,
Love suffered at the ruthless hands of life;
And yet, emerged, triumphant still and true,
While vice and virtue waged their ancient strife.

The play is done, the curtain drawn too soon,
Strests seethe afresh with the impatient throng;
A jazz band blares defiance to the moon,
The honk of auto horns drowns laugh and song;
Yet romance, living for this fleeting hour,
Has quickened fancy, given dreams new power!

A LACROSSE GAME twenty years ago was not a pink tea, or ping pong, or any of those parlor games, it was a serious business, a minature war in fact. About twenty years ago a Peterborough team came to Belleville and after the usual argument the visitors departed quickly being speeded on their way by a mob of indignant sport fans—so were the parting guests speeded in those days. Dr. E. M. Best, General Secretary of The Y.M.C.A. in Canada, a visitor in Belleville Monday recalled the fact that he had been a member of that visiting lacrosse team. At that he needn't have waited twenty years to come back. Our memories are not that long.

x x x x

SIXTY YEARS AGO things were a bit different in Belleville, not so much either, and pictures of some of the old landmarks show that not much change has occurred in their particular vicinity. An interesting photo taken about sixty years ago is lying before the writer. It depicts the building familiarly known in the past as "Marble Hall", and the store of Edmund Snell, a well known meat merchant, or "butcher" as they were called in the days-before the big packing companies relieved the local meat purveyor of "killing". The time is the Christmas season and the front of the store is festooned with palms, while huge quarters of beef hang suspended from hooks and several carcasses of deer add novelty to the display. A group in front of the store includes Mr. Snell, his wife, their daughter, who afterwards married William (Jack) Clark, then the delivery boy for their father. William Clark, generally called "Jack", married the daughter of his boss and entered the meat business for himself, his two sons, Ted and Jack, followed his footsteps in business and are carrying on the traditions established more than sixty years ago by Edmund Snell in the Marble Hall."

TWO NEW SEAPORTS

Surely history has no stranger chapter than that which tells the tale of civilization on that great inland sea, Hudson Bay. Trade began on Hudson Bay before there was a Bank of England, in days when Montreal was a tiny mission station and the site of New York was still in the hands of the Indians. And that trade has gone on almost without interruption ever since.

Trading stations were established at several points on the shores of the Bay and some of these have maintained their places and their dealing throughout the centuries of the world's greatest economic expansion, doing business always under the same corporate name and essentially with the same classes of people and in the same kinds of goods. This trade was like a body forced steadily but unchanged but unknown by the world and disregarded by all but those immediately concerned in its results.

Now, almost within the same day, two railways reach the Bay and two seaports spring up. It is practically ready for traffic, one, Churchill, on the western shore, and the other, Moose Harbor, on the southern extremity of James Bay.

A very clear and interesting statement of the main facts about Moose Harbor is given in an article in a recent issue of Saturday Night. The author is Mr. Percy Oliver who, besides his experience as a pioneer, a writer and a practical man in public affairs, has the great advantage of having visited both the new ports and being familiar with construction and administration officials who have a working knowledge of the new developments.

Nalls have been laid to Moose Harbor and the whole work of construction has made such good progress that it is confidently expected that the line will be in full operation by next autumn.

The old tradition, or superstition, that land has to the north of the present line of settlement is the unconquerable cold of the Arctic will receive another test. It will be found that generations of people have lived and reaped in the old settlement which now becomes the newest part of the New Ontario. And the "inland" provinces of Ontario and Manitoba will begin to feel effective competition of their sea coasts.—Ottawa Citizen.

THE 45-YEAR DEADLINE

One of the disadvantages in holding such a convention as that of the American Federation of Labor at a place like Vancouver is that the reports reaching this side of the continent are distressingly brief. Last week, a despatch stated that attention turned its attention to "those hoary-headed workers over the age of 45, find themselves handicapped in the competitive race, marked "too old to work." Without debate, so far as reported, the convention laid down the demand that, if industry continued its "useless-age" policy, wages must be increased sufficiently to allow workmen to provide for their old age at that age."

We are not provided with the text of the resolution. But "industry," to which the demand is said to be addressed, includes both of Capital and Labor, and since Labor is this instance makes the demand, obviously it must be upon the other partner. Industry or Capital is concerned in carrying dividends, and in setting up standards upon which workmen may retire at 45, perhaps that is about all that need be said. It is a time when wages and salaries are being reduced, in an effort to bring service of manufactured products down to somewhere near the level of diminished buying power.

"We can have reasonable good business with high prices and costs or with low prices and costs," writes George V. Woodland of the Alexander Hamilton Institute. "We must experience difficulty going while some prices are exceptionally low and others comparatively high."

Wages and salaries in some lines of activity have been reduced —in others the 1929 standard remains ..... The vital problem of business to bring it to products within the buying range of millions of pocket books—and more easily now than they have been for many years."

Aside from all that, a 45-year deadline is largely unreasonable and if it is widely prevalent through industry in the United States, that constitutes an excellent argument why Canadian organized labour should cover the remainder of its mind to it that of another country. In certain lines of employment where physical requirements are all-important, men of middle age can no more be used than in baseball or hockey, but as to industry generally, there is little evidence in this country of any such standard as "useless-after-45." If that be so, why should industry in Canada be called upon to conform to a proposed wage increase designed to meet a special situation in another country and thereby throw away the advantage which otherwise accrues from increased production cost over the border? — Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

GARDEN PATHS

Here mortal hands made beauty grow
With sky co-workers, wind and sun and dew,
And fashioned out of earth's most transient things
A charm forever old, forever new.

From trodden thoroughfares of din and toil
We enter here to peace that beauty lays
Upon the heart, and read in leaf and bloom
Prophecies whose truth outlasts our days.

The fragrant paths run through
Of the garden's peace
And he who walks with vision clear can see
Ever beyond the borders shining, still,

Little Benny's Note Book

We was having jogrifity in school today and Miss Kitty said, Now I want you boys to understand that jogrifity is not just something in a jogrifity book, it has a relation to real life, in other words I mean travelling, and it is a well known fact that the greatest education, the best broadiner of the mind, is travelling. Now is there anybody who dunnest understand what I mean by that she said.

Which nobody raised their hand, and Miss Kitty said, Good, then I'll call for a few examples of a practical nature. Now who can give me an instanta where we would learn something, be tawt by travelling? she said.

Sam Cross raising his hand, saying, Suppose we was travelling in Germaing and you was in a train and you couldnest even pronounce the name of the place you was going in, but it was printed on your tickit so you didnest half to worry, and the conductor came around and punched your tickit, you had to your tickit, that would teach you not to forget things.

You could tern that just as well at home, and I wish some of you boys would lern it in this very schoolroom, Miss Kitty said. Who else can give an example? she said.

Which Charley Chisholmn raised his hand, saying, Suppose you was travelling in China and you was sent find your way back to your hotel and there wasnest anybody around but China lawking people and expecting you to tawk it too if you wanted to ask them questions, that would teach you that everybody ort to know English.

That would be a very selfish lesson to derive from the incident, Im sure, now who else Bill rite, Benny Potts, Miss Kitty said, and I suppose you was travelling in the desert and there was nothing around but sand and dunes and camels and all of a sudden you came to a little moving picture place with a sine saying Kut Up Komedy today, that would teach you all the world is a small place after all.

No doubt, we will go on to the spelling lesson. Miss Kitty said.

Wich we did.

Curb Bad Language

The English pride themselves upon their use of the English language. Whether we, in America, do not talk as well as they is not the point here. The point is should we talk English better than we actually do?

I believe all will agree to this with an emphatic "yes". We have a rich language, an emphatic one, one that is reverenced by people on the streets than in former years. One certainly hears it more among women, in the drawing room and in the home.

Profanity is really such a senseless form of emotional expression. Of course, it indicates defiance. It's a safety valve. It is supposed to imply that you do not care a rap for anything, but it generally does not all a bluff just the same.

As a matter of fact, cowards swear a lot, and the use of profanity in moments of danger indicates that its user is doing it to keep up his courage.

You need never be afraid of a man who habitually uses foul language. He talks that way to his own kind, loud noise, but that's about all there is to his threats and dances.

The bully always swears. The person with inferiority feelings invariably resorts to it. All the smart aleecks do. They consider it clever. It is appear mannish. The vulgar swear in public and you may be sure they are vulgar fellows when not on public exhibition.

So be sure there are degrees of profanity. It runs all the way from the mildest form to the most vicious, the foulest and filthiest kind of language possible.

Women, as a rule, do not indulge themselves to the extent that men do, so they talk addicts to the worst expressions. Any sort of profanity, however, becomes a habit and that of itself should make it shun.

All tricks of speech, the habit of using the same expression over and again, are distinctly bad. To say "I believe so" or "I think so" is a seemingly innocuous "dear me" all the time, robs your language of any charm it may possess and at the same time it bure your thinking.

Lack of inhibition means not only lack of self-control but also a lowering of thinking processes. There can be no question that self-control means a heightening of personality, more power, more influence.

Profanity kills personality. It undermines character. The man individual who swears admits the deficiencies and he has no of the language. Note how often people swear when they cannot find the proper word to express themselves.

Profanity, of course, is easy to acquire and that is the reason why many foreigners learn swear words before any others. It is a lazy man's language ability.

So be careful about using profanity as a fuller or a gesture. Don't use it because you can't think of virile or because you get stuck in your speech in class. Do everything you can to curb that almost universal tendency to bad language.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

The way grew rockier. Blount doubled the number of advance scouts and threw out men on either flank. Slowly the dim figures made their way along the narrow trail that now led into the mouth of the canon. Even here the major did not halt. To him at last had come the hope of success, and the scent of battle was strong after three weeks of months of failure. He looked up at the steep canon walls on either side. Would El Coyote again elude him? He wondered. Was there a way of escape up there, a hidden way? Eagerly the major rode on, and not until the canon had narrowed to the width of the trail did he give order to halt until daybreak.

A sigh of relief passed among the troops. Men loosened the cinches of their horses, rubbed numbed hands back to life and at last, squatting in little groups, talked in low tones or, leaning back, gained what sleep they might in that cold, unfriendly place.

The awaited dawn came quickly. A jetting pinnacle of granite high above caught the first rays of the sunrise and flung it down into the canon. The gray dim outlines of men and horses became touched with faint color. The trail detached itself from the gloom and now showed itself winding steeply up the rocky grade. Over on the horses' saddles and on the broad brims of the soldiers' hats.

A quiet word passed down the column, and almost without a sound clinches were tightened, spurs buckled, and Blount's little body of cavalry was on the move again. The light grew stronger. At times when the canon straightened Blount could make out his advance scouts riding ahead.

For an hour they pushed on, then a rider came clattering down the trail. His voice was tense with excitement.

"Sir, just ahead is the camping place. There are embers of fire still burning. Fresh horse-tracks. They must be not more than an hour old. Looks like there must be at least forty of them."

Blount felt his pulse leap. "This means the boys above will have time to get in position, Sergeant," he quiah ahead with a dozen men, and tell them to halt, contact only to surrender. If they won't, fall back. Don't try to attack, but hold them until the regulars come. Just let them know they're between two fires."

But the major was already farther up the canon than he knew. In a little while the gorge widened and the men now were able to advance at a brisk trot. Pack animals and the two remaining machine guns were left behind. Again the trail grew rocky, and for an hour the only sound was the ring of steel-shod hbrses on the flinty trail and the creak of saddle leather.

Suddenly from somewhere ahead came the spiteful crack of a machine gun and a far-off shout. Blount's horse came down the canon where his men were strung in a line behind him. There was good shelter everywhere among the boulders. He smiled. The bandits would not have the slightest hope this time of breaking through. Then suddenly he heard another gun fire, and the quick, sharp crack of a rifle. Then silence. Impatiently the major forced his panting horse up the trail.

"Why the devil—no messengers?"

An orderly clattered around the bend. "Sir, the major says they've tried to get through the pass, but regulars! Major Allen says we've Gave 'em a couple bursts and they haven't tried since. Rocks all around the entrance. The sergeant says if you hold 'em there he thinks a few men can climb around and get 'em from above. It'll take some hours."

"Tell the sergeant to deploy each man and hold the position where they are. The main body of troops will be up in half an hour. Don't let the boys show themselves. Keep the detail in the pass ready for emergency—and, orderly," he called, as the soldier started down half a dozen men to scale the cliffs. Instead a dozen, and we'll have that hand at our command." Blount's little pack train catches up we can cook breakfast here. The smell of frying bacon may make those devils listen to reason."

Diligently the old major dismounted. He straightened and, looking quickly about him, disappeared into thickets. This damned bandit hunting had its drawbacks after one touched sixty.

He had stood there a full minute when the click of a horse's hoof made him turn to see a familiar figure coming leisurely up the rocky path. A smile of delighted surprise spread over the major's face. "Ord," he called, "I might have known Don Bob would be in at the death."

The straight, spare figure swaying to the motion of the horse rode up to the major's side. Bob's gray eyes looked quietly about him, and the same quiet smile touched his lips as at his face was haggard.

"Your orderly tells me that victory had perched at last," he said, and again his eyes passed to the canon walls as if seeking some sign.

"Victory has certainly perched," Rapidly and with relish the major outlined the situation to his old friend. "We're waiting for the main body of troops now, I think before the hour is up, you will be owing me that dinner," he concluded.

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Belle

JOAN CRAWFORD IN "THIS MODERN AGE"

"This Modern Age", with Joan Crawford in the starring role and a cast which includes Pauline Frederick, Neil Hamilton, Monroe Owsley and Hobart Bosworth, will be the feature attraction at the Belle Wednesday and Thursday matinee daily.

The picture was adapted from the Mildred Cram novel, "Girls To-gether," and was directed by Nicholas Grinde.

The picture enables Miss Crawford to return to the "whooper" type of role which made her famous and which she temporarily deserted for the straight parts of "Paid," "Dance, Fools, Dance" and "Laughing Sinners."

The plot concerns an American girl who lives in Paris with a mother who is an ultra-modern that she even has a secret love affair with a wealthy man about town. It is this affair that brings disaster to the daughter, whose fiance refuses to marry a girl with so disreputable a mother. The means by which the complications are solved make for an extremely lively and up-to-date story.

The picture is replete with various episodes of youthful exuberance and a wide variety of luxurious settings and costumes.

Vaudeville "Ace" character Comic, Chic Sale, offers a Barrage of laughs in the comedy-classic, "Country Beau". The Boop-Boop-A Doo girl, Helen Kane in "Lessons in Love", Bobby Jones offers a starring exhibition in his final lesson, "A Complete Round of Golf," the popular Metrotone News, will also be exhibited.

LAUREL AND HARDY

RIOT OF LAUGHS

If there has been doubts in the minds of any Laurel and Hardy fans as to their ability to carry a feature-length comedy, one look at "Pardon Us", which opens at the Belle Friday for two days, will convince them they were wrong.

The length of "The Miracle Woman" does not allow for a large supporting programme, but the performance is made complete by the addition of a very amusing comedy.

'TOO MANY COOKS" NEXT AT THE CAPITOL

A mother-in-law is bad enough, but fourteen of wifey's relations all poking their noses into hubby's business case is worse!

This is the state of things in "Too Many Cooks," the romantic comedy starring Bert Wheeler, Dorothy Lee and Rosco Ates, the "eccentric comedy" at the Capitol tomorrow and Friday.

Hubby has $5,000 saved up to build a house, whilst wifey has $5,000 in relatives ready to advise hubby how the house should be built. Hubby gets annoyed with the committee of alleged architects, and starts a rumpus. Wifey sides in with her family tree, and leaves poor hubby flat.

What happens then keeps up the pace of "Too Many Cooks" at high speed popping with surprises.

Bert Wheeler, the starring; Dorothy Lee, the diminutive, and Rosco Ates (you're not forbidden to appear in a slow motion picture), who claims no responsibility are responsible for what will be said by his nonsensical comedy drama.

Silverware Gift Tuesday

Each lady will receive a Silverware gift at Thursday's showing, the nature of which is still a deep secret of the management of the Capitol.

At The Capitol

"THE MIRACLE WOMAN" NOW AT THE CAPITOL

From dramatic, exposition of theme, acting, story and construction standpoints "The Miracle Woman" playing to-day and tomorrow at the Capitol leaves nothing to be desired.

In this title lead, we have one of the world's foremost dramatic actresses, Barbara Stanwyck. From previous pictures in which this talented artiste has appeared, as "Ten Cents a Dance", "Ladies of Leisure" and "Illicit," the public has recognized the sterling talents of Barbara Stanwyck, but these starring vehicles fall quite short, and "The Miracle Woman" covers them like a pal, for this drama completes the performance of Miss Stanwyck to such an extent, that she steps out from Hollywood's many stars, and proves what screen dramatization really means.

Unlike most pictures, the star does not entirely make the play David Manners, as the blind musician, Glenn Hersh as the grafting fake and Beryl Mercer as Mrs. Pigeon are all of equal importance to the unfolding of a most enticing story.

Briefly the theme of "The Miracle Woman" tells of a girl, vindicating the death of her clerical father, which she attributes to the unfair, mean treatment of the officials of his church. From this to which an unscrupulous adventurer puts her bitterness and her occultal powers. The final dramatic scenes where she denounces the fake in her love for a blind musician, and the climax so utterly befitting a strong drama.

"The Miracle Woman" is deserving of large audiences, and as this picture comes to the Capitol well recommended through every fan paper published, its merits should be the means of lovers of good screen drama filling the Capitol tonight and tomorrow.

Russian Farms Have Expanded

Moscow—Soviet Russian, world's largest agricultural region, now measures its state farms alone in terms exceeding the combined farming acres of France and Germany. Only the United States has a large agricultural area than this one Soviet classification.

State farms, distinguished from the "collectives" and individual farms in that they are operated directly by the state, numbered 4,-ranges and undeveloped soil.

230 at the end of the first six months of 1931 and embraced 167,750,000 acres.

The extent of progress toward socialization of the land is seen in a comparison with the close of the second year of the five year plan in October, 1930, when the total state farm area was about 100,000,-000 acres.

Present state farm acreage actually under cultivation, amounting to about 22,500,000 acres sown to all crops this spring. The uncultivated portion embraces livestock pastures.

The area of collective farms, intermediate step between individual and state operation, showed an even larger growth. Their number jumped to 213,000 from 52,376 in 1930 and accounted for more than half the total acreage planted this spring.

Collective farming is a term designating a variety of enterprises involving joint cultivation of the land. They differ from state farms in that they are consolidations of individual holdings strictly operated by the peasants.

Under the system of socialistic development total abolition of individual farm holdings is contemplated eventually, with "collective nation" the initial stage and state operation the final step.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 1. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

A great ocean liner was nearing France. Aboard her was Tarzan of the Apes, returning home to his African jungle. Thinking, rather sorrowfully, over the past few weeks, he wondered if he had acted wisely. For he had renounced his birthright and the woman he loved. To a man to whom he owed nothing.

Tarzan's thoughts drifted from the past to the future. He tried to look forward with pleasurable sensations to the scenes of his birth and boyhood. But who now would there be to welcome him ip the fierce, cruel jungle where he had spent twenty of his twenty-two years? Only Tantor, the elephant, could he call friend.

The others would hunt him or flee from him, as had been their way in the past. Not even the apes of his own tribe would extend the hand of fellowship. Civilization had become distasteful to him. He looked for the old jungle life. Yet he looked with little relish upon the future he had mapped out for himself.

As he mused upon this, Tarzan saw, reflected in a mirror, four men at cards. Suddenly he was all attention, permitting no detail of the picture to escape him. Sharp words arose. Springing up, one of the players leaned across the table, striking another full in the face. Then the others closed in between them.

Women's Interests in the Home

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

The Usher's Duty

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

1. When two women attend a formal church wedding and there is only one usher at the door when they enter, should the young woman follow as the usher escorts the older woman to a seat, or should she wait until the usher returns and escorts her to her seat?

2. What would be the correct procedure if two older women were together? Miss J.

1. When there is only one usher at the door when two women enter, it is correct for the usher to offer his arm to the older woman, and for the younger woman to follow.

2. The usher often has arm to one, and the other follows.

Visiting at the Hospital

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

We have had quite a discussion about the following: Is it correct for a married or single man to call on a married or single lady friend from a hospital?

We will appreciate any possible information on this subject, using married or single subjects, or both...

Mrs. P.

Yes, this is a thoroughly correct and human thing to do, but of course the lady would first ask permission to come to the hospital. Then when the visit is paid, he should be announced to the nurse, and the nurse announces him to the patient. She stays for a very short time. All very formal, and very thoughtful and very kind.

A Letter to a Teacher

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I would appreciate seeing in your column the correct from for an "excuse" to be sent by the mother to a teacher in a public school for the child's absence.

M. S.

Something like this is correct;

My dear Miss Thornton:

Mary was ill yesterday, and I thought it best for her not to come to school. Will you excuse her absence, please?

Very sincerely yours,

Mary Smith Browne.

(Mrs. Arthur Browne)

Rising on Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

1. Recently I was introduced to a woman just a few years my senior, and she at once apologized the introduction with a handicap. She was seated at the time of the introduction. Was it proper to remain seated while I shook hands with her or should I have stood up?

2 Please advise what is proper in the same instance when a gentleman is being introduced to a lady?

2. When leaving this same couple again shook hands. Was it proper for a female seated then?

O.

1. Since she shook hands with you, it would have been less awkward if you had stood up.

2. The lady remains seated.

3. Yes, but it would have been more gracious to rise.

Leaving a Visiting Card

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Will you kindly tell me whether or not to leave a card when calling on friends who do not have servants who open the door?

For instance, we recently moved into a new neighborhood and two women called on me (the first call) one afternoon when I was out. left cards as I have one servant. However, as I am about to return the calls and they do not have servants and will like to answer the door themselves, should I say, "How do you do, Mrs. Blank, I am Mrs. So and So, your new neighbor" or should I present my card to the lady of the house?

Or should I leave a card before leaving?

— M.S.

Do not leave your card when you are making this call.

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

If any of the mature passengers riding on the beauty wagon have fallen into hidden ways in trunks and secret places, it's time for them to log 'em out, dust them off and get them ready for action. Quite little petals everywhere the female head, and the grandmas think back to those old days when the sisterhood took to cornstarch; milk and beaten eggs were thick and luxuriant were those to which they were naturally attached. Oil, however, is returning. Not fat as of yore. No! Considerably sensitized, however, only the width of two fingers.

During the late, lamented swimming season, the dear beauty took to too nail polish, a bright rosy pink being the prime favorite. How the remainder of her cheek has become a habit. The same firm which compounds a new but feisty compounds a nail white which comes in pencil form. Used the same as a metal nail cleaner, it removes discoloration, leaves a nice clear white line. Worth trying.

This is the season when skin on hands and face goes suddenly dry. Needs consolation from the cold weather. Good idea to sweep away surface dust and make-up with a soft handkerchief, no metal of cleansing oil. Then get busy with the cream, warm air and a complexion brush. After heavy sprinkling. Let remain on over night. In the morning there will be freshness.

Blonde babies will find that blue shadows on the eyelashes doesn't make such a bold face as the black. Keeps brown in used. Then a bright blue like those eye shadows should be stayed with which threw blue dust in our eyes and messed up the face generally. Brown is conservative and fairly dark. They are effective.

When the complexion shows flakiness it indicates that a mild state of dermatitis is present. Better then to avoid lotions containing alcohol and go to creams that are more or less absorbent.

Thomas Edison Laid to Rest Anniversary of Invention

52 Years Ago Incandescent Light Was Invented

MANY PRESENT

West Orange, N.Y., Oct. 21—This is the fifty-second anniversary of the incandescent lamp—and the funeral day of the man who invented it.

With the first steps on today's dawn, the body of Thomas Edison was moved from the vine-wreath-laden library, where, in life, so many masterpieces of his genius were created.

The bronze casket was taken, under escort, to Greenwood, the Edison home, for private funeral services at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon. Only the closest friends were invited to join the family, yet the list of those numbered more than four hundred.

The burial at Rosedale cemetery was, like the service at the home, arranged to avoid ostentation or pomp.

President Hoover, pushed with affairs of state and with preparations for the arrival at Washington tomorrow of Premier Laval of France, was unable to attend the funeral. Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Hoover, however, travelled from the Capital for the services.

Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, the two survivors of a famous trinity, arrived here today.

Twenty-five thousand persons passed by the bronze casket in the half-light of the library yesterday. Other thousands had preceded them Monday. Mr. Hoover, Thursday with Mr. Ford to the last "good-bye" to their friend and crony, was among those who stood for a ninety-second moment before the bier.

Mrs. Mary Miller entered the room in which the body of the inventor lay. He wanted it that way, she said. It is to shield the memory of his last sight of his friends—there in the library at the Edison home.

The Rev. Dr. Stephen J. Herben, a former Methodist minister and a friend of Mr Edison, planned on an informal funeral service at the home. There was no prayer and a reading of the Nineteenth Psalm—which all of our years are three score and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon gone and we fly away."

There was nationwide response to the suggestion by President Hoover in a statement yesterday, that all electric lights be turned off for two minutes at 10 o'clock Eastern Standard Time this evening honoring the invention of 52,000,000 people upon the vital part of their lives of a single Edison invention.

Railways Lost Fight For 15 P.C. Rates In the Freight Rates

Conspiracy Charge In York Township Quashed

Toronto, Oct. 21—The charge of conspiracy against the elected councils facing prominent York township Liberals, which was to be appearing for trial, was ordered quashed yesterday by Judge Denton Kelly. Charges of bribery, fraud and corrupting money also face the eight men.

Those on trial are Basil Holden, vice-president of the Toronto Brick Construction Co.; D. K. C. Stathearn, former township treasurer; Ernest G. Westbury, ex-Reeve of the township and Mr. Armstrong, Wm. McQueen, J. J. Little, Isaac G. Woolner and A. E. Baker, former councillors.

The conspiracy count was quashed because it was laid under section of the Criminal Code of Canada containing six alternatives and if was not set out under which sub-section the accused men were charged. His lordship suggested to the Crown an amended bill might be submitted to the Grand Jury on this count.

LIVE LIZARDS SEEN IN COAL

Coast Miners Believe Them Relic of Dim Age

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 21.—Out of the past has come a relic of the pre-glacial age so amaz'ng as to be well-nigh incredible, and awarding in scientific interest the claim that the seed from King Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb had aforded.

At Hudson's Hope, British Columbia south of Rocky Mountain Canyon, in the northern section of the Province, and in the vicinity of the British Columbia section of the Peace River District, a seam of coal was unearthed by natural erosion. Turning out a block of the seam, two miners came upon two lizard-like creatures in length.

Released from their age-old tomb, the two creatures amazed their discoverers by stirring and showing signs of life. They appeared to be instantly, but the other, clinging tenaciously to the coal formation in which it has been imbedded for centuries, has been shipped to zoologists at Ottawa for examination.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—"It is impossible by any animals to be saved," said Professor B. A. Kenzley, head of the Department of Biology at the University of Toronto, on hearing the description of the lizards. "That type of story is ancient."

Asked how, then, it could be that the lizards were found in the coal, supposing the tale of the miners to be correct, he said: "Animals exist. "Maybe living animals, who had been in the earth remain in the seam came into view when it was disturbed."

Drayton Advises on Buying Permits

Toronto, Oct. 21—Persons who cannot afford to buy a liquor permit are strongly advised against attempting to purchase it, Hon. Peter Heenan, chairman of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, announced yesterday that permits for 1932 would be available on and after October 26. Vendors were instructed not to sell liquor to persons in needy circumstances, he said.

Sir Henry's statement accompanying the announcement was made as follows:

"The 1932 permits will become available on Monday, the 26th inst. My very earnest advice to those buying permits is not to buy more than the purchaser can well afford. The two dollar bill is the one dollar, which they cost, as the case may be, and also the many desirable purchases of liquor.

"The above instructions to vendors contain the following: Liquor must not be sold when the financial standing of the purchaser is such that the sale must be followed by a diminution of the comforts of life in the family.

"In a time of depression, such as the present, it is all the more necessary that this principle should be observed.

"Many municipalities and relief societies have adopted a rule that those requiring relief, having permits, must either surrender their permits for cancellation, or for safekeeping, until the applicant again becomes self-supporting. Such municipalities and relief societies have furnished the board with a list of their applicants, which enables the board to refuse to issue those so circumstanced can make no further purchases.

"To those in needy circumstances I repeat, 'don't buy a permit unless you can afford it—you will not be able to purchase under it—don't throw your money away.'"

INGROWING OF TEETH BLAMED

Trapper Suffers Untold Agony. Police to Aid

Ottawa, Oct. 21—Two aching teeth, each one a couple of inches long, and growing along the roof of his mouth, were a just cause for the mental depression of Charlie Carbeau, a trapper in Tobagrin Creek district of northern British Columbia. An aching, decayed stump is enough for the average man. But for a whole year, Carbeau, remote from the centres of civilization, operating in a territory where dental surgery is never mentioned let alone practiced, suffered the agonies which unrelieved toothache alone can produce.

Trappers and natives in the Liard area believed him insane; and Carbeau believed himself insane for proper sleep had not come to him for over 12 months. Unable to endure the pain any longer, the unfortunate man took to hiding in the bush living like a wild beast. Turning out a block of the seam, the miners came upon two lizard-like creatures in length.

Released from their age-old tomb, the two creatures amazed their discoverers by stirring and showing signs of life. They appeared to be instantly, but the other, clinging tenaciously to the coal formation in which it has been imbedded for centuries, has been shipped to zoologists at Ottawa for examination.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—"It is impossible by any animals to be saved," said Professor B. A. Kenzley, head of the Department of Biology at the University of Toronto, on hearing the description of the lizards. "That type of story is ancient."

Asked how, then, it could be that the lizards were found in the coal, supposing the tale of the miners to be correct, he said: "Animals exist. "Maybe living animals, who had been in the earth remain in the seam came into view when it was disturbed."

LINKED THREE CAPITALS IN EPOCH FLIGHT

Flew From Ottawa To Mexico City Washington In 12 Hrs. 36 M.

A BIT GROGGY

Major Doolittle Claimed Average Speed of 204 Miles Per Hr.

Mexico City, Oct. 21 (AP)—Major James H. Doolittle, noted American flier, was taking a day off today after having flown yesterday by flying from Ottawa, Canada, to Mexico City, by way of Washington, D.C., in 12 hours and 36 minutes, linking three capitals.

Major Doolittle landed his swift plane, which he called his "Speed-ster," at Valbuena Field at Fiverstelhuac at 4:36 p.m., Mountain Standard time, which is 6:36 p.m. at 4.40 a.m., Eastern Standard time, and stops in Washington, Birmingham, Ala., and Corpus Christi, Texas.

He calculated his average speed for the flight at 204 miles an hour, and said he was making 235 miles an hour some of the flight, from Washington to Tampico, were covered in 54 minutes.

Greeted Vey Destyed

A round of flying about 40 minutes at Washington, he said. The fog kept him from landing at Bolling Field, where his supplies were waiting, and he was forced to head at another field and make emergency arrangements. If he had been able for this incident, he said, his time would have been about 11 1-4 hours.

The weather was fine, and he saw no trouble. He was not made a "groggy," he said, by a leaking exhaust pipe, which admitted some carbon monoxide into the cabin of the plane and he complained with the fact, that he had not been able to keep the night before, and had eaten nothing all day, made it a "hard trip."

A crowd of about 500, including many Americans who knew him, Mexican army officials and a representative of President Ortiz Rubio, welcomed him at the field.

He whipped around three times before landing, "brushing the runways in the bright sunshine. Colonel Pierre, chief of the Mexican air service, who made a stop-stop flight from New York to Mexico City last year in 14 1-2 hours, was one of the first to greet him. They spoke alternately in Spanish and English, the Major explaining to Colonel Pierre, that he understood the Spanish. He said he planned to return to St. Louis tomorrow, after a rest.

THUMBS DOWN ON THIS BOUT

Will Not Sanction Bout Between Carnera and Uzcudun

New York, N.Y., Oct. 21—The New York State Athletic Commission has withheld official word on a heavyweight bout between Primo Carnera and Paulino Uzcudun on the ground that it would be a "step-ladder" affair.

Listen to William Muldoon on the subject:

"In the future we will insist that heavyweights must be well matched physically as well as in other respects. Carnera should fight men his own size like Victorio Campolo, Arthur De Kuh, and Jose Santa. We are going to see more step-ladder matches, where one of the principals needs a soap box to reach the boy's chin. I was against the Walker-Sharkey match for that very reason and I am dead against my better judgment."

Carnera and Uzcudun were matched for a ten rounder at Madison Square Garden Nov. 13 for a theatrical charity sponsored by Daniel Frohman. Uzcudun, despite his lack of height, gave Primo a close battle, when they met at Barcelona a months ago.

Jimmy Johnston new general manager for the Garden, now hopes to persuade Campolo to take Paulino's place against Carnera.

The "Bluenose" perhaps the most famous schooner that ever sailed the waters of the Atlantic Ocean ((this week (held) her title) the Queen of the Fishing Fleet, and her right to hold the International Cup, which she has had in her possession since 1923. Yet reaching the end of her career, was defeated. But her title was not at stake. This year, her task looked from the beginning almost hopeless, for she is against a new, and specially built speedy schooner, new, and specially built schooner, built especially to lift the cup, although she is no doubt a fishing schooner, as well as one of the most modern. But ten years of hard work on the Atlantic seaboard have not overcome the water in the same manner that the "Bluenose" did in her prime. But ten years of hard work on the Atlantic seaboard have not slowed her down. But this week, with a picked crew, Captain Angus Walters, and she has soaked up a lot of water. But winner or loser the Captain, and she has soaked up a lot of water. But winner or loser the Captain, and the "Bluenose" is to what will probably be her last race. FRANK FRISCH MOST VALUABLE

Received Players' Award After Knocking at Door Many Years

New York, October 21.—Frank Frisch, captain and second baseman of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, after rapping at the portals, three previous times in vain, has crashed baseball's hall of fame as the National League's "most valuable player" for 1931.

Announcement of Frisch's selection by vote of a committee of baseball writers was made yesterday by William H. Slocum of New York, President of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. The Association is perpetuating the baseball "most valuable player" poll which was officially dropped by the National League in 1929.

GAME REGULATIONS

Sportsmen who plan to take rod and gun into the woods and streams of Ontario this Fall are advised by the Department of Game and Fisheries to read up on the laws which must be observed in the hunting and fishing season. Wardens are said to be particularly alert this year and infringements of the provincial regulations have a habit of seriously detracting from the enjoyment of the excursion.

There are 33 regulations covering the entire range of hunting and to make these facts easily available for all, the department has issued them in a pamphlet which may be had free of charge upon application to Donald McDonald, deputy minister, Queen's Park.

The regulations are as follows:

Deer

To employ a guide unless he is a resident.

To carry a loaded gun in a motor car or other vehicle.

To use dogs for the hunting of fox, without a permit.

To have poison in your possession for taking fur-bearing animals.

To ship out of province, or send to a tanner, any pelts without a permit.

To use any contrivance whatever other than a firearm when freezing out deer in the taking of rabbits.

One Deer Per Head

To take more than one deer or moose per license or a cow moose at all.

To keep fur-bearing animals or game birds in captivity without first securing a license.

To molest or destroy a den or habitation of any fur-bearing animal, other than wolf.

Ban on Amusements Nov. 11 Urged by Legion President

Morning of Armistice Day Should Be Solemnly Observed

Toronto, Oct. 21—Remembrance Day should be regarded and kept throughout Canada as a holiday entirely and not scrupulously than Dominion Day or Christmas Day, according to Lieut.-Col. J. J. Picking, provincial president of the Canadian Legion in Ontario. It was a day when all business activities should cease and every Canadian, adult and child, should turn their thoughts in the sacrifice of view Canadians who gave their life, Col. Picking declared.

The Legion president's conception of the proper observance of Remembrance Day is that the forenoon should be given over entirely to acts of tribute, such as the adornment of war memorials with poppy wreaths, as preliminary to commemorative ceremonies at 11 o'clock, when the two minutes of silence should be universally observed. No theatre should be opened before the noon hour nor should there be in the forenoon any sporting event or other form of entertainment to detract in any way from the solemnity of the occasion.

In order that the significance of the day should be fully understood, it is expected that books of statistics will amplify the official proclamation by calling upon their people to observe the day in proper spirit, refraining from participation in anything that would conflict with the true sentiment upon the eleventh hour. It is also hoped that all educational children should be properly informed on the previous day.

The Legion believes that veterans' re-unions, banquet, field days, etc., should take place in the place in the afternoon and evening.

CAMPAIGN IN LAST STAGES

Efforts Are Redoubled On Election Contest In Britain

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—Speakers on a thousand platforms redoubled their efforts today. The swiftest, yet most complicated of British general election campaigns, ends with the election going to the polls just a week hence.

And as turbulence reigns from the south of England to the Clyde-side, an outstanding impression is the bitter opposition Labor voters are showing the National-Laborites, those ministers or candidates who have forsaken the Labor party to aid the National Government.

Brent against Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is retiring from the House of Commons, a barrage of strongly-worded attacks have been directed following his radio address in which he castigated the Labor party. Now with Chamberlain, Conservative Minister of Health, does not agree Mr. Snowden's interpretation of the National Government's attitude on tariffs. Sir Stafford Cripps, former Solicitor-General, who is campaigning with Labor, described Snowden's speech as a tissue of falsehoods. Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, says the government is "stooping to the lowest depths."

Returns to Own Riding

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald has returned to the fray in his own riding of Seaham, and the Prime Minister has, for probably the first time, included the question of trade agreements with the Dominions as a necessary part of attempts to restore Britain's adverse balance of trade.

David Lloyd George, veteran Liberal leader, convinced the election will result in a party victory for the Tories, is leaving the scene shortly, taking a trip to the Mediterranean to restore his health. Mr. Lloyd George revealed yesterday that although he had expressed willingness to join Mr. MacDonald and Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, in a joint effort to restore stability without an election, he abandoned the call to the Prime Minister the evening after he had talked with Lloyd George.

Up in Glasgow Sir Oswald Mosley, wealthy Socialist who leads his own "new party," succeeded last night in getting something like an orderly hearing, after unfruitful attempts earlier. True, the police locked the people inside that were permitted to hear him, but Sir Oswald, bitter critic of those holding his care for transforming parliament from a "debating club into a workshop." He had the familiar experience of a police escort to his hotel afterwards.

Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born newspaper magnate who is aiding the Conservatives, had a fine hearing at a monster meeting in London.

Food Expert Finds White Bread Attack Unjustified

So much has been said about the value of whole wheat bread, some of it correct and some exaggerated, that it has been overdone by the extremists and the pendulum is swinging back again to a truer variety in bread, according to Dr. R. E. Lee, research director of Standard Brands Limited, in a talk before Canadian bakers.

"Periodically," says Dr. Lee, "the lighting, for which a wheat bread breaks out like an epidemic, runs its course and dies out. No one can justly attack bread, be it white or brown. Both have a place in the diet. Flour is one of the most commonly digestible foods we have. All varieties of bread are good, but one would not think an white bread the articles of those who advocate the use of only whole wheat bread.

"A diet including too much bread to the exclusion of the nutritional remedies that food materials are not as completely absorbed as when different kinds are the elementary tract at a normal rate. In the bake shop just around the corner."

FINEST GIRL

by Thomas Carter Todd

She breezed into the editorial room; unknowing that it was like a lion's den into which she entered. One roaring lion against a whole pack of soft hearted hounds.

One of those news hounds reclined at ease with his feet on his desk. He never had what could, for his deadline was long since passed. The paper was off the press.

The advent of the girl caused the keeper of the afternoon news to blink and arise swiftly, fumbling to straighten his tie. It was her eyes. Dark and cool. They played tricks on you.

"Where's the editor-in-chief?" the girl asked, and then, an engaging smile fluttered over her face, she added in friendly fashion, "I'm looking for a job."

The reporter didn't see her worn pocketbook. No mere man could see below those eyes. For he was her slave on the spot. What if the city editor was on the night shift? He would have climbed to heaven for that girl's smile.

"Lordy," he groaned to his pal who came in as he returned, "the nicest about ten minutes with Brent."

For Brent had red, hair and a nasty disposition. And Brent was city editor. They called him Brent behind his back. Although you could hardly blame Brent for being that way. He was married once. And been treated pretty raw. What a devil that particular kind of a woman is. And now he hated all women.

So he drank. And treated like a dog. And was still yoking enough to be good looking and poor enough to be shabby. But what a bear. The reporter sighed.

The Old Man brought her around and performed the introductions. Her name was Priscilla Main and she was hired. Noticing the way she held her chin up and looked you straight in the eyes, dispelled your surprise. Miss Main was okay.

She chose a machine and fingered some notes. The Old Man wasn't letting her wade any time. He turned more reporters had straggled in, summoned by the city editor, they watched her pityingly.

At length she had her copy done ten long lines.

"Where to put it?" she asked of the nearest news sleuth.

"On that hook," but he took it for her.

"Fellows," they quickly had their heads together, "we've got to help her. She's new. And she won't last five minutes." Brent was a regular tiger. Even her looks are against her with him."

She looked as if she could do things, if she had a chance to learn how. Brent gave you no chance. You sank or swam with him. For he was a newspaperman. That's why he was a good newspaperman.

"We'll help you," her coterie of admirers promised.

She gave them all a grateful look. Then Breen came in. His hat was jammed any old way down on his head. What did he care. There was a cigar in his mouth and a scowl on his face.

He stalked to his seat and yanked the afternoon copy off the hook. Here was on top. He yelled. She came in record at her without looking up.

"What's the idea of turning in stuff like this?" he said to Finger back at her. Whereupon his pencil dug into other copy before her rejected sheet and returned to her desk, and after some whispered advice, made the required changes. Stuff there was a little glint in her eye.

It was not till the next morning that Breen actually set eyes on her. She had on the same dress. Neat, but not new. He didn't blink. He glared.

"Find out about that road job, why it's taking so much," he snapped at her. Like so much dirt under his feet.

Determinedly, she set forth. One or two reporters, hastily snatching at hats, followed. She took their friendly advice and went her way alone.

An hour later she laid copy before Breen. He glanced at it.

"Rotten," and he crumpled it into a ball and flung it into the waste basket.

Her face went white.

"Don't you think you're pretty much of a cad, Mr. Breen?"

He leaped to his feet, his face red. "You—you—" he choked, then sputtered furiously. "You're good! Get out. Beat it!"

He had no right to fire her. But she didn't know that. Her face was as white as a sheet. There were sudden tears in her eyes. But she looked straight at him for all of that.

"Very well," she said, in an even voice. And then without warning reached across and slapped his face with the palm of her hand.

Then she turned and, with head held high amid a deathly silence, walked out of the room.

Breen stared after her, his own face pale, except for one spot that was already a fiery red. Then abruptly he grabbed his hat, rammed it down on his head, and rushed out. Only he went in the other direction from her. The boys made sure of that.

"Lordy, what a gorgeous smack." Sam grinned and the others chuckled. The tension in the editorial room seemed to have vanished, at least temporarily.

Half an hour later the door opened. Breen came in, determination written on his face. At the moment the Old Man was passing through the editorial room. Breen went straight to him.

"I'm fired," he said, and a gasp ran around the room.

The Old Man blinked.

"The devil you say."

Breen nodded his head.

"I'm a cad and a fool and I'm just finding it out. So I'm firing myself. Good-bye."

Somehow the boys didn't hate him quite so much in that moment, for the Old Man, he was in a trance. Breen was gone.

Two years later Sam was in the state capital covering the inauguration. In front of one of the banks he ran into Breen getting out of an expensive car. Sam stared.

But the former city editor pulled the unexpected. Catching sight of Sam, he came over and gripped him by the hand—and grinned in friendly fashion.

"What—what—?" Sam was struck dumb by the man's very evident prosperity.

"Oh this," Breen beamed, "I—I'm in the real estate business. My wife and I Making out dandy."

"Your—your wife?" Sam gasped.

"Yes—you—you remember Priscilla Main. Finest girl I ever met. Come to dinner, Sam."

OTTAWA CONTROL OF AVIATION UPHELD

Privy Council Decides Against Provincial Challenge of Ottawa

Aeronautics Not Like Navigation and Shipping Control

HIGH FUNCTION

Cases of Emergency Where Dominion Empowered To Act

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today allowed the appeal of the Dominion Government of Canada against a decision of the Supreme Court of Canada at the reference of the question of whether the Dominion or the Provincial Government have jurisdiction over aviation matters in Canada.

The Supreme Court had decided the Dominion may control such aeronautical matters as are involved in international affairs and such aerial activities as the Dominion Parliament engages in; but ruled the provinces had jurisdiction to license and regulate on aviation matters within their own boundaries.

The supreme tribunal today, however, upheld the Dominion government's contention to supreme jurisdiction over aviation matters in Canada. The judges' decision incidentally upheld the validity of Dominion control of civil aviation which had been challenged by the provinces.

Sovereign Powers.

While Ministers should be jealous in upholding the charter of the provinces, Judgment said, it must be no less heroic in mind in the defence of the British North America Act was to give the Dominion parliament those high functions, inherent sovereign power by which jurisdiction of legislation might be secured on all questions of national concern to the provinces as members of a consolidated whole.

There may be cases of emergency where the Dominion is empowered to act for the whole of Canada and also be cases where the Dominion is entitled to legislate for the whole in reason of the plain terms of section 132 where Canada as a whole having given an obligation is given the power necessary and proper for performing such an obligation.

Provincial Powers.

The Lordships do not think that aeronautics can be brought within the subject of navigation and

TORONTO WINS APPEAL UPON JARVIS FINE

Issue Clean-Cup Says Privy Council Decision

CITY BORE COST

Ontario Court of Appeal Ruling Upset Upon Appeal

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—The long-standing dispute between the Province of Ontario and the City of Toronto over the fine of $60,000 paid by Aemilius Jarvis in a case arising out of sale of provincial bonds, was finally settled today when the judicial committee of the privy council allowed the appeal of the city.

The judicial decision today upsets the ruling of the Ontario court of appeal, which had decided by a three to two vote in favor of the province. The Dominion Government took a hand in the battle, supporting the city's case because Federal Jurisdiction provides, concerning Ontario, that fines and penalties shall be paid over to the municipalities where the municipalities bear the expense of administering the law. The Privy Council decision therefore incidentally upholds the validity of the Dominion Legislation.

Clean-Cut Issue.

The controversy between the province of Ontario and the City of Toronto over the Jarvis fine, the judicial committee presented a clean-cut issue. That the sovereign had the unrecognized right to receive fines imposed on convicted persons might be accepted but the general principle but it is not an absolute nor unqualified one. It is only those which are "unappropriated" and belong to the crown and the disposition of which is left to the discretion of competent authority otherwise directed.

"Their Lordships reach the conclusion that the judgment appealed against should be set aside and that the judgment of the Province of Ontario is entitled to claim fines as 'royalties' extend to penalties as have not been otherwise appropriated.

Prerogative Right.

"The learned judge proceed on the general principle that any prerogative right in favor of the crown is only passed from the Province of Canada to the Province of Ontario at union was a right only to fines. Fines as might not be otherwise appropriated by the Dominion parliament in the exercise of its exclusive legislative power in matters coming within criminal law."

The decision of their Lordships is naturally of great interest to all municipalities. In the Jarvis case the court paid the fine to the province of Ontario, the city bore the cost of administering the law in the case won the first appeal. Mr. Justice Riddell, in the Ontario court, was quoted as saying: "Let the city bore the cost of administering the law in the case won the first appeal. Mr. Justice Riddell, in the Ontario court, was quoted as saying: "Let the city bore the cost of administering the law in the case won over by the government." Asked by Mr. Justice Riddell what was the price the witness stated it had cost to fine level, the elevation there were no mosquitoes and the mosquito was rich and virgin, which would make the fine sufficient.

Diet is Mightier Than Tooth Brush

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 22.—It's the nourishment you get from your food, not the tooth brush you use in brushing it, that counts in keeping teeth sound.

Dr. Weston A. Price was awarded the Paschard Medal for his researches into the influence of diet on the teeth at the Convention of the American Dental Association here.

Los Angeles Trunk Mystery No Nearer To Solution

INSANITY CAUSE

Los Angeles, La., Oct. 22—The strenuous police hunt for Winnifred Ruth Judd, wanted for the Phoenix trunk murder, continued throughout the West today, but the belief grew that the woman was fatally here or had committed suicide.

Although, many reports that alleged persons resembling the hunted woman had been seen in various Californias near San Diego, Central California, points toward Sacramento, officers generally believed she might not have left the city.

The search was pressed while officers prepared for an inquest over the bodies of the victims, Mrs. Hedvig Samuelson and Mrs. Agnes La Rue, which were shipped here in trunks claimed by the latter.

On the theory that Mrs. Judd's body might be found in some out-of-the-way place, police looked over the beaches and hills around Los Angeles. Volunteers peered into deserted shacks and searched among the bushy undergrowth in canyons near the city.

Her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, and her brother, B. J. McKinnell, both expressed the belief that she was not be found alive.

Many theory of Mrs. Judd were interrogated. Guards were placed at their homes. Dr. Judd said negative would seek and from sympathizers.

"All evidence shows it was a case of insanity—but there was something that caused the mind to perform such a ghastly crime," Chief Detective Inspector D. A. Davidson." Whatever that was that lead to the slayings is a mystery of what is still undetermined.

One more team is needed to round out this grouping in order to give them a balanced schedule. In the older grouping, under nineteen years, four churches entered teams as follows: St. Michael's, St. George's, Bridge Street and Jadeans. All teams in this group appear to be well supplied as to players and competition will no doubt be keen. The girls' section of the league was represented by teams from not only three churches, St. Michael's, St. Thomas and Bridge Street. Two other churches represented at the previous meeting did not have a delegate present last night it is not definitely known whether they wish to enter teams or not.

Just as soon as these two sections, the ladies and juniors, have got started out the schedules will be drawn up and the teams started on their way to the Church League championship.

ly to keep the home. He told the court he bought the property in 1919 from Mrs. Ackerman who had been done on the property.

To Mr. Lynch he admitted being on the island in 1924 and that he was time approximately fifteen years ago. He was not able to state what was on the island at the time it was expropriated but that he received rentals of $250 during his ownership from Mrs. Ackerman. Payne showed that twice since Mr. Payne received ownership, the island had been rented for three times bringing $190 and another time $100. The witness admitted that he was not in financial difficulties both times he received rentals and was not able to pay the taxes, but after-three dollars, he had funded. Asked as to how he arrived at the valuation placed on the island, Mr. Payne stated that the fact that it had been bought upon which to build a home for his family was worth that much to him.

Charles B. Meyers stated he knew the property in question for a number of years and that he had paid about $240 for the property. He figures cattle on the property for six years and that the cattle were worth was 18 acres and there was a number of trees on it sufficient to keep a family three years in wood.

Mrs. Norman Hall has returned to her home after undergoing a successful operation at Belleville General Hospital. She is greatly improved in health.

His also stated there were twelve acres of the best land in Hastings County on the island and that it was especially adapted for fruit growing, early vegetables and late corn, the reason given for it being good fruit land was from the fact that land close to water makes the best.

He also showed there was between 1,000 and 1500 cords of washed gravel and plenty of stones and fill to beautify the island and that it was a most summer resort. Asked by Mr. Butler what his valuation was for the island $5,000 was a fair price.

Wilson Hurley and R. E. Wilkins, both land surveyors, produced blue prints of the island, showing an area of 18 acres and they were both agreed as to a fair valuation being $5,000. This stated the evidence for the plaintiff and Chas. Payne called Thomas A. Hurley as the first witness. Mr. Hurley was in the real estate business and was on the property at the time of expropriation and stated to counsel the buildings on the island, when he saw the property in 1923. He described the condition of the soil and also the buildings on the island. William R. Wilson, resident engineer for the Department of National Defence, stated there were no docks nor buildings on the property when he visited the island in 1923 and that there was no road from the mainland. Judge Anderson stated that $500.00 was a good price for the island as the land was practically all under water and it was just as good an island as Mr. Walder's stated he paid $10, to Chas. B. Sprague, acting as agent for Mr. Estes, for the property in 1918 for the island but this statement was flatly denied by Mr. Meyers. Mark Sprague and George Wallbridge were also called and considered $500 a good price for the property. Mr. Sprague stated to the court that he tried to purchase the property in 1916 for $600 but would not take it when he discovered that a road from shore of the island could be built to the mainland. The court declared it had no value as a summer resort and that people were not asking for islands in the Bay of Quinte. This closed the evidence and adjournment was made until Thursday afternoon.

Scholars are Told of Street Dangers

The schools of the city have been visited this week by Mr. P. B. LaTrobe of the Ontario Safety League who comes to Belleville every year with motion pictures dealing with safety first subjects.

Appalling figures found in records of the Ontario Safety League for the year show that 303 boys and girls were killed and 12,000 injured through preventable accidents. Thousands of these were responsible, chief of these being automobile accidents in which one hundred and twenty-six were killed, ninety-three drownings were recorded, Forty-three children were killed by accidental burns and scalds and thirty-eight by falls from high places. These are only a few of the causes of accidental deaths.

In an interesting way Mr. LaTrobe puts before the children suggestions for safety and accident prevention. His motion pictures tell the story of what has happened to children who have not been careful and of what chances would be prevented. Besides visiting the public and separate schools of the city, Mr. LaTrobe last evening showed his pictures at the Ontario School for the Deaf.

GUNS BOOM AS LAVAL ARRIVES

Former Peasant Boy of France Welcomed In United States

New York, N.Y., Oct. 22.—Premier Pierre Laval, who worked on the Dirrevoet farm at Jonchi in the heart of France, arrived today to talk with President Hoover about methods of smoothing world-wide economic ills. Laval and New York gave him one of the greatest ovations in the history of the city.

Thousands banked Battery Park cheering wildly, from a boom spoiled, and big guns of Fort Jay thundered.

Washington, D.C., Oct. 22 (AP)—Quick agreement today marked the day toward the meeting in its capital of two of the leading figures on the world's troubled stage—President Hoover and Premier Laval of France.

Before them lay a range of subjects vitally affecting the economic debts to disarmament.

Their meeting among the conversational possibilities was the possibility of their country's cooperation to relieve the economic strain on the nations.

Today's Conference

The necessity for attention to banking and credit was the topic included more than a friendly greeting and a show of the usual formalities in the private office of the White House.

Treasury Secretary Mellon, Secretary Stimson, Secretary Lamont, Sprague and George Wallbridge were also called and considered $500 a good price for the property. Mr. Sprague stated to the court that he tried to purchase the property in 1916 for $600 but would not take it when he discovered that a road from shore of the island could be built to the mainland. The court declared it had no value as a summer resort and that people were not asking for islands in the Bay of Quinte. This closed the evidence and adjournment was made until Thursday afternoon.

St. Andrew's W.M.S.

Mrs. Seymour, president of the St. Andrew's W.M.S. occupied the Chair at the monthly meeting of the society which was held in the church parlors on Wednesday evening after the singing of the opening hymn, Mrs. Ashley read a Scripture lesson and made some appropriate comments thereon. Prayer was followed by a prayer in which Mrs. Morrice led. An interesting feature of the programme was the presentation of an "In Memoriam" booklet in memory of the remembrance of the late Mrs. John Bell Hamilton. Mrs. Bell on behalf of the society accepted the memorial and thanked the society for it. The booklet was read by Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Mantle, Mrs. Bell taking the first part and Mrs. Mantle the second.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Alexander Wilson, Provincial President. "The month of October," she said, "is saturated with thanksgiving, and certainly we in Canada have much for which to be grateful for. We are thankful that we have an unchanging God, an unchangeable Saviour. We are also be thankful that there has been given to the Church women of young women's auxiliaries. The opportunities for service are wonderful. We should be thankful for the privilege of being born and bred in the church, and for their love and loyalty. Even in poor Saskatchewan, where conditions are only about $100 less than they were last year, the Church's reason for gratitude it is a matter for thanksgiving that the women only one is a member of our Auxiliaries.

By a standing vote a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker on motion of Mrs. A. Moore, seconded by Mrs. J. Fargey. When the offering was taken, Mrs. Wilson, Dr. Seymour led in a dedicatory prayer. Mrs. Perry then announced that an anonymous donor presented the Society with a beautiful Bible to the president and to this Mrs. Seymour suitably responded. The meeting was brought to a close with the serving of refreshments.

Trustees of Dead and Their Principles

Halifax N.S., Oct. 22.—"We who are trustees of the memory of the dead must be true to the trust we have, and this trust we must no fail," declared Major John S. Roper, Dominion President of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., in a "message for Remembrance Day" which he expressed the hope that all of Canada will join with the Legion "in bringing men and women gather together in thanksgiving the land to pay tribute to their dead."

The message makes public reference to the meeting of the Executive of Canada for "a noble example in attending safely during the past year as a sacred national day of remembrance."

Tabernacle's Annual Supper

When friend meets friend it is good to meet and when friends meet friends around the festive board, it is an occasion of much joy and gladness. Such we are compelled to be indeed true at the Tabernacle supper which was held in one hundred and fifty members of the congregation sat down to a most sumptuous supper which had been provided by the ladies of the congregation. The gathering was termed a congregational supper—a real family affair and those who were present at the present most earnestly felt 'at home' and the supper was one which certainly proved to be an unqualified success. The ladies who had charge of the supper were given. Solos were rendered by Mrs. Hubert Hamilton and Mr. Al Skillman, much to the pleasure of those present. A mixed quartette also delighted everyone with their selections. Mrs. M. P. Duff, in her usual pleasing manner was the accompanist. The quartette was composed of Mrs. Hubert Hamilton, Mr. Alex Horton Brown, Mr. H. S. Wilson and Mr. Al Skillman. A piano duet by Miss Reesie Barlow and Miss Ruth Hamilton was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. F. Nicholson gave an interesting talk on the activities of the church, and on the anniversary services of the church which are to take place in November. Mr. Leon Walmsley, the church treasurer, gave an interesting and informative financial talk to the church people on the financial part of the program was a talk which was given by Miss Ella Gardiner on the early history of the history of the Tabernacle. During the course of the evening Mrs. Hamilton heartily entered into by all. The Rev. Mr. Ellis, the pastor, brought the happy evening to a close by a few words of appreciation to the life of the congregation and to the splendid supper which others are to be held on Sunday.

YOUNG - KEEN IN Y CAMPAIGN

Zest of Youth Demonstrated By Membership Committee

All the attributes of youth—energy, optimism and enthusiasm were greatly in evidence Wednesday noon when the "host" age groups, which are shouting in a membership campaign, gathered around the luncheon table at the Y. M. C. A. The purposes of the luncheon was to receive reports from the various team captains as to the progress which has been made during the first week of the campaign for new "teen" age members to the Y. M. C. A., where fifty boys and girls were present and it was immediately apparent that they are greatly interested in the work which they have in hand. Keen, friendly rivalry exists—each team is determined to win if at all possible.

These boys and girls are enthusiastic over the benefits which they receive through their membership in the association and it is their aim to have others of their age enjoy these benefits and in so doing aid the association which makes the obtaining of these benefits possible.

HEALTHY SIGNS

Some healthy signs are appearing in England—the reduction for the second consecutive week of the total of unemployed and the reopening of the cotton mills in Lancashire. The Montreal Gazette sees particularly in this latter evidence of a brightening economic outlook. "A few days after the country went off the gold standard, foreign orders for Lancashire export began to increase. Two more cotton mills in the country have resumed operations this week, one after being closed for four years and the other after a shutdown of 18 months. In addition a big factory in the Manchester textile district, in order to meet a rush order of goods for export has shifted from a basis of 48 hours per week to fifty five hours, the demand for output assuring a continuance of overtime until the end of the year. All this means work for many hundreds of men and women who have been employed for many months, and it is accordingly important to that extent the drain on the dole. Moreover, increased activities in the textile trade will not only improve the total industrial situation in Lancashire—and already the owners of ships, in the Manchester Canal and at Liverpool and Birkenhead, hitherto more or less idle, are primed for increased business—but they will inevitably have beneficial industrial repercussions throughout the country."

"The political significance of the impetus to Lanchashire's textile trade may be, as an inhabitant of it have come about in anticipation of a protective tariff being part of the policy of a government whose return to power is regarded as a foregone conclusion. Nevertheless, it is symptomatic of trade developments that may be expected from a stable national administration pledged to adopt fiscal measures which are essential to improve the internal situation in Great Britain, to put more men at work and to restore the country's balance to the point of safety."

BUSINESS ACTIVITY

Canada's position in spite of the decline and slump is one which gives Canadians every reason to be proud of the position the Dominion occupies. The Toronto Mail and Empire contrasts Canada with the United States in respect to business activity and says:

"Our oft repeated statement that Canada is better off to-day than the United States is confirmed by visitors from that country. A Chicago manufacturer and philanthropist called at The Mail and Empire office the other day. Having motored through many states of the neighboring republic, he said that he found conditions much more prosperous in Canada than in his own country. In Toronto, he declared, conditions appeared excellent in contrast with what he had observed in the United States cities he had visited recently. In fact, he saw more building in progress here than in any—he might almost say, all—of the cities of his own country through which he had passed. He marvelled at Toronto's well-kept homes and gardens. All of which is encouraging and stimulating to patriotic Canadians. All we have to do is keep a stiff upper lip, peg away at our several jobs, and good times will return."

FORCING CHILDREN

"In the November issue of The Parents' Magazine is a short article reproving fathers and mothers for urging children beyond their strength", states the New York Times. "It is by Mary Lou Cochran of the bureau of juvenile research in the Yale Institute of Human relations. She has seen a good deal of what she calls "mental sickness" among children, and has come to the conclusion that when Tony is truant from school, when Mary is slyand disobedient, when Johnny is brutal to his younger brother, it is likely to be because the parents are asking too much of them in the way of good results. It is natural for parents to be ambitious for their children, but it is too hard on the youngsters. They start out willingly enough as a rule, but soon discover that they are being urged to attempt more than they can do. Only one can be the best in the class at school, and the others are shamed into competition which they know is hopeless. In college they meet the same conditions intensified, and after they enter the business world their fathers expect them to surpass or at least to equal the money-making powers of the Jones boy.

"It is putting too much blame on a single factor to lay all juvenile rebellion and delinquency at the door of parental ambition, but there are many cases of youthful unhappiness resulting from a mother's or father's insistence on unattainable success.

If Miss Cochran's article is filled with typical instances easily paralleled in every one's observation, could be read by those parents, some relief might [illegible] impossibly high standards. More than academic or other conventional success, boys and girls need the habit of succeeding. It does not matter if the sense of satisfaction comes from being the best reader in the class or from using carpenter's tools skillfully. "Getting ahead" is less important than enjoying work and play within the capacity of the child. Parents who may recognize tendencies of their own in some of the cases described by Miss Cochran should consider her suggestion to stop driving, and let their children follow some of their own inclinations."

FOR A NATIONAL THEATRE

What is needed, however, if we are to have our own national theatre in Canada, is Canadian drama. It must be admitted that up to the present the output of this has been both slim and—with a very few exceptions—of rather indifferent quality. But with the impetus of a national theatre movement, there is no reason to think that we shall not in time develop a healthy Canadian drama, racy of the soil, exploiting Canadian ideals, portraying Canadian history, visualizing Canadian hopes and fears, and in every healthy sense expressive of the national life and the national spirit of this Dominion. The one essential to this is public support. If the ideal of a national theatre is worthy surely it ought to win this, even as other worthy national causes have won it and retain it today.—Montreal Star.

ELECTIONS AS THEY ARE

The cables bring evidence that Britain with its centuries of civilization and culture behind it does not take its politics with a marked degree of calm deliberation. Ramsay MacDonald has been hooted down in his home constituency of Stephen. Sir Oswald Mosley who is an amateur boxer and who carried a background of football players, with an occasional prize fighter mixed in, provides a mild riot about three times a week. Just recently he was hit on the head with a chair and the next day was summoned on an assault charge. Nonsense. It is only fair to add that the alleged assault was not committed on the chair. Even so great a personage as Lord Beaverbrook has been rudely interrupted and forced to beat temporarily, to discontinue his few brief remarks.

All of which may add to the popularity of the radio as a means of disseminating political information. In a bomb-proof studio even Sir Oswald Mosley might possibly get his views over provided his opponents did not go on a radio smashing crusade or find a way of installing a gas attack more deadly than the Mosley propaganda into his chosen retreat.—Toronto Telegram.

PRACTICAL TELEVISION

While television receiving sets are on the market in Britain, and can also be constructed from component parts at home (which is prohibitive cost, it may still be a few years before each household is in possession of a combined television-radio set. The second, in England where television has been developed to the greatest degree, the time allotted in one day's broadcast is only one and a hour, so that, although the television receiving set is not an article of luxury itself, it becomes a luxury with so little use in the day. The day of its increased use will come, all the more quickly when the field of which he is enlarged with certain clearness. Even within the last year, this enlarged field of vision has been demonstrated—scenes at the Derby were televised last June—and now Mr. Baird in New York has begun at broadcasting pictures in an eight-piece orchestra.—Ottawa Citizen.

The steady ticking of a clock,
Immeasurably sure,
While curtains drawn, the bolted lock,
The ruddy firelight's lure;
A kitten curled before the blaze,
All purrs and frolic blent,
Bestowing with coy kitten-ways
The charm of its content.

White roses in a slender glass
To mock cold winds' refrain,
As in review spring memories pass
And linnets nest again.
One waiting by the hearthfire's glow
Within the quiet room;
Without, an old world garbed in snow,
But here, spring's light and bloom.

"TALL STORIES CLUB" met recently in the tallest building in New York city, the Empire State. Each member had to tell the tallest story in his repertoire and a movable microphone made it unnecessary to rise from the banquet table to put the stories on the air. "Believe It or Not Ripley", was there, besides Sir Hubert Wilkins, Floyd Gibbons, Jimmie Doolittle, swiftest of the airbirds, Sea Devil Count Luckner, and others, with Lowell Thomas as director of ceremonies. My what a party! and the lucky ones who listened in sure got an earful. One of the stories related to a bear hunt in Alaska where the hunter was the hunted and ran until he came to a tree where the lowest branch was twenty feet high. With the bear a close second and the beast's hot breath searing his neck the hunter jumped for the branch twenty feet in the air. The hunter was relating the story with his audience hanging on to every word and an impatient one breaking in with the question, "Did you catch the branch?" "Not going up", said the hunter, "but I did coming down."

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, nine thousand motor vehicle licenses have been issued in Belleville this year, while at Picton, Tweed, Napanee and Campbellford nearly nine thousand more have been issued, a total of eighteen thousand motor vehicles (automobiles and trucks). Estimating the total valuation at the low average of $500 per vehicle the stupendous sum of nine million dollars is shown to be invested in motor vehicles in Belleville and near vicinity. On a recent Saturday it was estimated that two million dollars worth of automobiles were parked on Front and nearby streets in Belleville. All of which is another proof of the assertion oft repeated in this column that Belleville is the best, most prosperous and progressive city in Canada, and that goes for the whole world, and the centre of the richest district in Canada, year in and year out, with a steady growing prosperity and no periodic booms with subsequent deflation.

"THE TRAIN OF TOMORROW" is the title of an interesting article published in the Sperling Arts magazine. The author reconstructs the passenger train of today into the train deluxe and commercial sense of tomorrow by beginning at the front where he would have two windows for eyes, heated by inhaled wires against ice and wiped by windshield wipers. The engineer sits comfortably in an airplane type seat. In the two intervening years he has practically see that all-is well to the rear of his train without turning his head. He touches the control with his finger tips. The smoothly running long train attains a speed of 150 miles an hour. The author speaks of the present locomotive, which most of us have come to believe as the last word in scientific development of steam, oil and electric traction. "Look at the engineer craning his neck out of a side window at the REAR END of the enormous machine he is driving! Tradition has taken such a hold on steam locomotive design that no builder has yet had the courage to put the engineer up front where he can see the track. The one exception is the Union Pacific's locomotive which was built to run backwards. [illegible] DWH shrd abr

Little Benny's Note Book

Sunday morning just after breakfast just before lunch time pop sat down in the living room with the Sunday paper on his lap, and he started to pick up the different parts of it to decide which part to read first, and he picked up the financial part and threw it on the floor, saying. When the cat's away the mice will play.

Meaning that as it is home she never leeves him throw the Sunday paper over the floor on account of her having to pick it up unles she's satisfied to see it laying there, with she never is, and pop kepp on throwing diffrent parts of it on the floor with a happy expression, such as the real estate part and the ladies fashions part and the automobeel part, throwing some of them over his head and some in back of him and some in frunt of him.

Making the floor look as if it has been snowing newspapers, and pop put his feet up and started to read the sporting part, being the only part left, and every once in a while he looked over the top of it and a round the edge of it at all the paper on the floor, saying, Fy gullies I'm hamsted.

How do you mean, pop? I said, and he said, I'm hamsted by the idea that I'll half to clean all that up again with my own white hands. Of corse I could order a slave to do it, but instead I'll just let that up again with my own white hands. Of corse I could order a slave to do it, but instead I'll just let that stay

by TOM GILL

"I wonder, You know, I strongly doubt that you will find El Coyote in your grasp this trap up there."

"Perhaps not, but forty or fifty of his best men will and that's probably all his eighth. And it's almost certain that out of one of them we'll learn something about El Coyote if we use the proper persuasion."

Bob nodded. "I think you're right. With most of his band captured, El Coyote's identity can't long remain a secret." In the midst of rolling a cigarette he asked, "What will you do with these men when you get them?"

"I've been thinking of that. We are capturing them on Mexican soil. Most, if not all of them, are Mexicans, so I'm not entitled to them myself—to the Mexican authorities—except one or two who may care to give us information. Those I'll set free—always provided their tale checks up to El Coyote."

"And the rest go to the Mexicans." Dollhead Dan Hamilton inhaled his cigarette while he tapped with his quirt on the side of his boot. "That means death. Fifty of them. The pick of the band. Death and a damned good chance of torture."

"Pete El Coyote out of business, doesn't it, Bob?"

Gravely the rider nodded. "Completely out of business. For a while at least. Yet I'm wondering if it's one-half as good as if you had captured El Coyote himself. For, consider. Texas passes. El Coyote gathers another band, and then it's all to be done over again."

"Well have one devil of a time getting another leader of the border sees what happened to this one. But I'll grant that I'd rather have El Coyote than the whole mob that's bottled up in this canon."

"You mean that?"

"Of course. There's no question. The boy I'm after is El Coyote, not his men. That's who I've sent word to get. But why talk about him?"

"I think, major mb I can make a trade."

Quizzically the major looked up. "You mean we might trade those men for the bandit himself?"

"Exactly."

"How the devil could you guarantee any such thing?"

"Oh, easily, I might, for instance deliver up to you El Coyote even before you let the men go. That would be guarantee enough, wouldn't it?"

The major's eyes sparkled, then again looked doubtfully up at the grimly smiling man. Don Rob had so many little jokes one could never be sure. But to be the captor of the border's most famous bandit—to get him! If Bob really meant what he said.

The major plunged. "Bob, if you can hand over El Coyote, I'll let every other damned bandit go his way, and I'll quit the country by day. But what I want to know is, how in God's name can you get me by the other man bring in El Coyote?"

"Any other man couldn't, major," Bob answered slowly. "Only I can. For you see—and here he carefully crushed the life from that cigarette between his fingers—you see, I happen to be El Coyote."

CHAPTER XXXII.

The words died back into silence. Mutely the major raised his head. Something in his brain fought back against the stark reality those words disclosed. He looked to see some twinkle of jest in the man's saddened gray eyes, or a gathering smile about the tight, straight mouth. A soldier can't up and say, blurt out impatiently Blount waved a hand back. Again he looked appealingly at Bob, then at last the old major's shoulders stooped and in his face the light of victory died. This, then, must be the end of those years of friendship.

He raised his eyes wearily to the towering walls of granite while slowly comprehension came. The killer had been brought in. Now at last the long-coveted success was his. But the taste of victory was bitter as alkali in the old soldier's mouth and once again, as if from some great distance, he heard Bob's voice and felt his hand knock his shoulder.

"One plays and sometimes loses," the quiet voice was saying. "That is the best and worst of all these earthly games. Some consolation, though, to realize at the last I could not have done differently. Yes, it's something to know that, but perhaps hard much."

The major raised his gray head. Added years seemed to have gathered about him. "Bob," he said, and the voice was husky, "I've known you a good part of a lifetime, and now you're asking me to believe you've been hunting all these past months. It's you the whole border has been after."

Slowly Bob nodded. "I'm asking you to believe just that. And I'm giving myself up just when I might have won, uit as the border country was ready to follow me. Even now I might win, but," he looked up the canon, "I can't let those poor devils be turned over to the mercy of Paco Morales's tools."

Blount's hand touched the major's shoulder. "Come, let's face it. Life can't be so serious a matter at our age, old friend—and death still less. I've had my share of years and of playing in the saddle myself."

Bob gently fondled his horse. "But before I go with you, I'd like once more to talk to my men. Will you write a word to get me by the soldiers?"

major fumbled in his pocket. Mechanically, as in a daze, he wrote on a card and gave it to Bob. He tried to smile, but only a pitiful quiver passed over his lips. His huddled figure, suddenly grown old, looked more like that of a captive than conqueror of the border's farfamed bandit.

"Give that to the sergeant, Bob," he muttered. "I'll wait here."

At the line drawn about the fugitives' retreat, Don Bob passed the card to a wondering sergeant.

"They'll tell you more, sir," the soldier warned, but without answering Bob rode across the rock-strewn canon and straight toward the boulder field that guarded the entrance to the bandits' shelter. There he stopped and, raising his voice, called, "Manuel."

Almost at once a swarthy figure detached itself from among the strewn boulders.

"Senor!" His voice was filled with amazement. "For the love of God, how come you here?"

Bob rode forward. Leaning forward in the saddle he gripped the Mexican's hand, and together they rode back to where the rest of the band crouched, alert and ready. Briefly he looked down at them, as one might look upon a group of children who had erred, but toward whom one could feel no anger.

"Why did you lead them to this trap, Manuel?"

"Senor, we were thirsty, and two of us were sick. And, as you know only in this canon is good, cold water and grass for the horses. And we did not think—"

"I know. It does not matter. And yet for a cold drink of water the history of the border must be changed. For a moment's folly you find yourselves faced with a common full of cavalry. But let that go. I bring you good word. You are free men again. Once more half an hour the American cavalry moves down the trail, leaving you free."

Manuel crossed himself. "Free! But senor, it is a miracle." He laughed and looked about him. "None but El Coyote could do that, eh, my children?"

Bob raised his shout of rejoicing with an upraised hand. "You are right, Manuel. None could have done it but El Coyote, yet even for El Coyote it was at a price."

The long, close fellowship between those two men made Manuel guess the answer. His smile of exultation died and in a tremulous whisper he asked, "You gave yourself up for us!"

"What else? I offered El Coyote in exchange for his band. There was no other way. It was a good trade. Without you I could have done little, for you are the best of those who have come to me. It was better so. And yet,"—his clenched hand tightened on the saddle-horn—"we were so near victory."

For a time in the gloom of that granite recess he looked at them. Fearless, impulsive, dogliks in their loyalty. Each one of them he had known—the history and the hopes of each. They had faced death together, they had kept and the power of Morales. Yet, it had been a good game, and a high one of proud pride and affection for these strangely assorted men showed now in Don Rob's troubled eyes.

They stood silent, helpless before the disaster that had overtaken their leader. Uneasily they looked at one another, their faces flushed in pain. He had been their protector. He had led them to revolt. He had laught them to hope, and now he was going away to face—sons dared even guess.

Manuel's voice trembled. "Must it be this, senor? And is not there to fight our way out? Come, stay with us and, together, when darkness comes we will fight our way to freedom and then we let them take you. Without you what are we but helpless children? Do not go from us, senor. We have need of you, father."

But Don Rob shook his head and smiled. Then for the last time he spoke. "Together we have pulled a trigger against the enemy of either your country or mine. To do less would have been to defeat to the cause. But my going does not mean defeat. Rather it is victory for you to carry on. You are the hope of the borderland. Be men and no one can make you slaves. Heed for the liberty that alone makes life bearable and you will never need me or anyone. You will be enough, each of you, for yourselves. And now I go. There is much I would say to each of you, but the words would bring me pain, and here there is enough pain. You have been faithful and I shall always hold in memory. Protect the weak and make the strong respect you. If I could, I would stay with you always, for you are men, and life with you was good. And now"—Bob held out his hand in a little gesture of parting—"adios, children."

Like statues they stood about him. Like motionless, sorrowing statues they watched their leader and turn away. Above them the wind intoned a low requiem, and from the branches of the mountain firs. The sun sank, and twilight shadows across the canon, and not until the last echo of his parting died away did these men move. Then, blinded with tears that would not be held back, old Manuel made the sign of the cross.

"May God deal gently," he whispered brokenly. "He is the lover of God be kind."

Already the major had ordered his men down the trail. He gave no reason for this sudden cessation of the search, and the puzzled faces of his men were a stolo reproach that, in his new affliction, the gifted soldier did not even notice. When Bob passed him he was already sitting his horse, impatient to be gone and to end to those intolerable thoughts.

Then the major rode down the canon, each unwilling to begin the task that had to come—the task that could lead to but one end. So in silence they rode ahead of the main body of savvy and men. By late afternoon, they emerged upon a level desert trail, the major began.

"Bob," he said, "nothing in life has ever hit me like this. And yet it's knocked me. It's going to change all—everything in life. The men who looked up to you, the leading part you took in everything Verdi did. They'll all stick by you, every man. And yet, what can you do? There must be something we can do, something I've not been trying to find, but this thing—it dulls me. I find myself wishing I had never followed that trail. And yet I had to, didn't I Bob? Lines of suffering were deep on the old soldier's face.

"You did right, we all do," Bob answered gently. "It the thing that seemed best to you. That is what I did, and what Morales is doing. All of us do the things we think best according to our little lights and clouded understandings. And the outcome is often strange to look upon. But as for me—there can anyte do? You can do nothing now. Nor I." He smiled at a sudden thought. "Have you ever watched them playing roulette over at Mendoza's? You make your bets, and when you lay your piles of gold on the red, the little ball sometimes stops at black. Well, it's too late then to say, 'I made a mistake.' One simply smiles while the croupier sweps away that little pile of gold."

But the major was already turning over reins. "Bob, suppose I hand you over to the Mexican government. There's nothing to prevent that, since you were caught on Mexican soil. Then every man of us will get Morales to say the word that will free you. You could repay him every head of stock you ever took. Your ranch would be more than do that. But if we bring you to trial in the States it means a long federal action and prison. Bob, for a long term. Perhaps life."

Bob raised his head and looked at the sunlit world about him. "Two years of prison would be life for me. Yes, Morales would have the power to release. He would be the only one with such power, but he would never do it, and I can't say I blame him." He shook his head. "No, let's not give the old Nimrod that last satisfaction. I couldn't take my pardon at his hands. But I do ask this. There are arrangements to make, I want to see that every man of mine is made safe as safe as anyone can be in this trade country. I've already put a note at the bank providing for something like this. I want That man Hamilton to be my an equal partner while I'm away; and if I die I'm leaving the world to him. He'll be a leader among the ranchers in five years. So I let it be known you have captured a couple of days before you El Coyote."

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 2.

{Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.}

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

As the card-sharp tried to sneak away, he saw the exit barred by Tarzan's tall figure. Struggling and striking without effect, the fellow found himself in the ape-man's grasp. It was Nikolas Rokoff's first experience with the muscles that had brought his savage owner victoriously through encounters with Numa, the lion, and Terkoz, the great bull-ape.

Dragging the villain back to his astonished victims, Tarzan related the card trickery he had seen reflected in the mirror. Then releasing his prisoner, he thought no more about the matter. But from this incident Tarzan was to find he had made a desperate enemy, for Rokoff was one of the worst scoundrels in all Europe.

Next day the liner docked. Arriving in Paris, Tarzan went directly to the apartment of his friend d'Arnot, who was overjoyed to see him. Never could the naval lieutenant forget that but for Tarzan's wondrous strength he would have died at the stake in the cannibals' village of far-off Africa.

The two friends spent the next few weeks enjoying the sights of Paris. One evening Tarzan went to a music hall. During a dancing act he suddenly caught a glimpse of evil, black eyes fastened upon him. He had an uncanny feeling he was being watched. Had Tarzan but known it, he had been followed often of late, but never

By Helen Follett

The brisk, keen, tonic with an active mind and a sunny disposition, that certainly helps her youthful appearance. She is aware of herself, and is content with the results. Being brisk, she walks briskly. Being brawn, she holds up her chin, looks the world in the eye without batting an eyelash; goes about the business of living with zest. Her activity produces vigorous circulation which makes for good digestion, sparkling eyes, fine facial tissues and other elements of beauty.

There are various names for flat cysts that decorate the forehead. The old fashioned name was beau catchers and before that they were called, quite frankly, a rum smack. Any thing but an elegant expression. Now they are simply singlets of collodion cysts. You make them by using bandoline and plaster of Paris, the alabaster brew you do them in circles and hold them firm and steady with a little metal clasp until they dry.

For wrinkles across the forehead, rather, to be rid of them, anoint with a heavy cream and treat with a vigorous rotary motion of the finger tips. Follow by rubbing crosswise with flattened fingers; one would then create in fabric. The ice rub stop the cream in effect; the skin doesn't mean that ice shouldn't also be used after the emollient has been removed.

When the hands show large veins, keep them out of hot or cold water, which is anything. Hold the hands high in the air now and then. Rubbing on the hands should be treated with applications of castor oil; they don't like it and, in that respect show good judgment; usually does. The odd-time mixture of glycerine and rose-water is effective for doing away with sunburned hands. Always do watch out that you use a bland soap.

Pads of cotton dipped in ice cold witchhazel, placed over the eyes at night, will diminish puffiness of long standing. To form breath and soul orbs. In the morning, bathe with cold water.

To capture the dress note of the day, the feminine frame should be slender but not flat prairie. There should be a normal bust, but only a suggestion of hips. A lovely head is of prime importance, though few women give a thought to that detail of accidental perfection. Correct carriage hides many a defect but alas, natural grace is a beauty asset that one seldom sees nowadays. When women wore trains, aiving their draperies over their arms, walking was something of an art. Mesdames of the present day have a part in the program of bringing up gals the way they should go.

Pure henna in powdered form contains no mineral elements and does no harm to the hair; its use does not disqualify a permanent for contact with the permanent waving machine. Henna compounds are dyes, henna being used as a carrying agent. The pure Egyptian herb gives brown hair a rust cast. It is mixed with boiling water to form a paste, and is permitted to remain on for five or ten minutes, after which the hair is shampooed.

Night-growing nanny-go-rounders who wake little bed at the hour of dawn are creating beauty troubles for themselves. Restful sleep is necessary for health and good looks, and anyone can break health laws without making payment. Loss of sleep takes shimmer from the eyes, causes the skin to lose tone, plucks roses from young cheeks and does havoc to the general nervous system.

Oily hair demands a weekly shampoo with a bland emitted soap and quantities of running water. The slightest amount of soap scum left in the strands increases oiliness. Use a black comb and note if there are grey deposits. If there are, follow the shampoo with a lemon rinse, the juice of two lemons being sufficient for a quart of water.

If by chance you forget to buy cold cream, use the cream that the milkman leaves. It is a delightful cleanser and skin softener.

Some seamen build a quiet house
By fields of every clover,
Where sunshine-salted bees carouse
And call their voyaging over.

A garden plot, to them as wide
As all the ocean's tilting,
The memory of turning tide
And lonely-hearted settling.

But I go on, though nights be pale
With rain and winds be wailing—
There are no many seas to sail,
So little time for sailing.

The Child Who "Doesn't Care"

by Constance Cameron

Before you have lived very long, you certainly discover that the most bewildering, baffling stumbling block of unable aries when you run smack up against indifference. Love, hate, revolt, and all the other positive qualities can be figured out, but when an individual is "when you are interested, just "doesn't care" you get a decided "at sea" feeling.

And when the person who "doesn't care" is a child for whom you are responsible, it presents indeed a serious problem.

Fortunately children usually DO care, care intensely either for or against a thing—any thing. But when love, when scoldings, tears and threats are met with the stolid and the remark, "I don't care." It is high time the parent investigation to discover what has made a child indifferent.

Interest usually is a good cause, and the cause generally concerns some part, some point on which the child has FAILED. Indifference is always a shield, even with grown-folks. It is a big job to find the sore spot for it is usually buried so deeply as the child knows how to bury it.

For example, Lucy had become a problem in discipline both in school and at home. Her marks fell, she was punished at school for bothering other children, she was talked to very seriously at home, but she just "didn't care."

A long talk with her teacher disclosed the fact that the arithmetic in that grade had been apparently far beyond the child's mental capacity. She just had no idea what it was all about. Failing, day after day, she had wound so thoroughly imbued with the idea of failure—not only in that, but in everything—that she had put on her "don't care" armor with unhappy results. Outside tutoring was kindly, understanding woman brought her through the arithmetic situation nicely and with that victory all the rest of the situation righted itself.

It isn't always arithmetic, of course, but it is always SOMETHING in which the child has failed—that arouses the protective "I don't care."

Find the one thing and set it right, and the rest will take care of itself.

"PRIDE"

by Ethel Willis Hewitt

Mick's strong, brown hands clasping the arms of his chair showed white at the knuckles. From the corner of the big couch, Aida smiled across at him. So far, she had succeeded in hiding her pain.

"But, the life on a rubber plantation is no life for a woman—it's it's—impossible," Nick said flatly.

"Others have made a difference once! You don't love me, or—" Her voice dropped and her eyes were misty. Nick didn't miss any of it, not a bit. He got to his feet suddenly.

Maur, life native house boy padded in softly with iced drinks, sat them on a little table at the corner of the couch, and skidded out again. Nick drew Aida up from the couch, not too gently.

"Can't you see you're crucifying me?" He looked down at her, his blue eyes softened. After all she was only begging to be with him.

"Do you think I'd be happy here for me? Haven't you any idea what they endured in the last war?" he asked thickly.

The girl didn't answer. For a moment her sweet, flushed face was very close to his, then she turned suddenly, and looked out through the wide window to where coconut palms were waving like great plumes against a very blue sky.

"I only thought we could be heaven—here with you," she said stubbornly.

Nick put out an arm and drew her up against him.

"Aida—don't. I've got at least four years here before I'll be half over in the plantation. Your father is generous at that. I can't—my dear, I can't marry you before I have something to offer. Don't make it harder for me, sweetheart. Don't—"

His voice thickened, and he caught her close between his hands, and then on her wide, sweet mouth.

Even then he knew she would have her way. What weapon can a man use against that look in a woman's eyes, if he happens to love her? And there were those trunks. There must be a dozen of them. Nick had wondered when they were being unloaded from the steamer at Bandon, the day before, if Peter Langhorn were bringing his whole family to live on the plantation.

Aida's eyes were misty.

"Nicky, I'm afraid your pride goes deeper than your love for me."

He stopped her with a kiss—the first since her arrival. It did something to them both that left their little world all a tremble.

"I'll still think—I'm sure I'm right!" he laughed to cover his confusion.

"I'll still think—well, anyway, you're not considering my pride, I can't go back with Dad. Think what everybody'll say, mother and dad side-stepped everybody! She hid her face against his breast.

He crushed her here with his big hand, thrilling to the feel of it, or the softness of her pressed close to him as if she belonged there, and trying to see how the thing would look to everybody back home. If he only knew and she knew of world by goods—but all that wasn't getting anywhere.

"You don't mean you've told 'em we—" he stammered suddenly.

Of course she had. How else could she have managed all that baggage? He felt stunned, but he was conscious of a sort of wild sweet joy at her nearness. He wanted her—how he wanted her. But he wanted to well—do like her decently, when he had something to offer. She'd proved his worth. He'd tell Peter Langhorn he hadn't dreamed of it this way, he'd tell him. Though the open window he saw him, with two natives, coming up from the plantation, a sturdy, splendid figure. Nick set his jaw tight. He wouldn't have him think that—but then if he tried to explain, there was Aida to think of. She must have found the last year—the waiting, as hard as he had, or she would not have come to him like this. She was being honest with herself — honest with him. His arms tightened about her suddenly, and he knew that this thing they shared was stronger than pride.

He looked down at her, his heart in his eyes. Now he dared her.

They were very quiet, caught in that small, final threads surrounded. He wanted to tell her, how wonderful she was, but the words stuck somehow.

Aida's tear went over, slid down her cheek. Nick wiped it away with a big, clumsy finger, while tender things rushed up that he couldn't say. He couldn't hold out against her right or wrong, he was here—had been from the first. Did it matter what other people thought? They'd be four years here with only each other, they wouldn't question his right to marry Peter Langhorn's daughter. Money, after all did it count as much as that? It a matter of pride—silly pride at that? Four years of waiting would rob love of

Beatrice Fairfax Letters

CALLED HER A PEST

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend and I were on our way to meet another girl, also a friend of mine. Suddenly, the girl I was with said: "Well, where are you going to meet the girl?" That question hurt me very much and I so informed my friend. She replied indignantly, "As long as I feel that way about her, I believe it's my privilege to express my feelings." Was she right?

C. F.

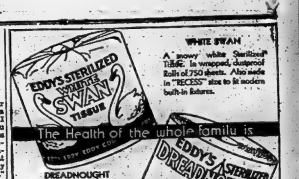
It seems to me a mistake to take this so seriously. Your girl friend may just have been in a bad temper at the time. I'd try and forget it.

SHALL I WRITE TO HER?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

About six months ago I was introduced to a girl who lives out of town, and I have grown to care for her very deeply. Sometimes I wonder if she has forgotten about me. Would it be all right if I wrote her a letter?

E. D.



It would be quite all right if you wrote her a letter. When they read the lapse the body should be kept warm, are placed on the head, and the doctor summoned.

REVIVAL IN COTTON SOUTH

Lanahireman Hopes to See Price Touch 15 Cents

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 22.—Hope for improved conditions in the cotton south was held out here today by James Duckworth of Lancashire, Eng., who said textile manufacturers in his community had increased from per cent since Great Britain abandoned the gold standard.

Mr. Duckworth is attending the Rochdale Methodist Conference as a lay leader in the United Methodist Church of England. He is a Justice of the Peace at Lancashire and a shareholder in several textile mills there.

"It is not the fault of you people in the south that conditions are as they are in Lancashire," Mr. Duckworth said. "You are not to blame because cotton is selling around six cents a pound and thirty cents would return again to at least fifteen cents a pound and thirty cents if possible, because if this was the case there would be a greater demand for manufactured goods and we, therefore, would benefit.

"The Rochdale instance of Lancashire and in fact with cotton manufacturing in all the districts is that we have sold much machinery and the cotton industry as such India and Egypt and Africa which formerly used to buy cotton goods are making their own textiles. As machinery people have profited, we the cotton industry have not.

"It is gratifying that this improvement of recent days has come about whereby our manufacturing has increased about ten per cent and a dozen of our vast mills are in operation, due to the abandonment of the gold standard. I hold the hope to you that there will be further gains in the future and then we can buy more of your cotton and give you more to do."

COPPER CUTS TO BE DRASTIC

Meeting of Producers Likely to Agree on Slashing

New York, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—A movement for drastic slashing of copper production is gaining momentum as producers from Canada, European countries and the United States continued today their informal discussions.

According to the Journal of Commerce, Canadian producers, the Belgian, South African and the United States copper magnates, are willing to curtail production.

"Co-operation of the large Canadian producers in the plans for reduced world output will in all probability be forthcoming, it is reported today," says the Journal of Commerce. "The International Nickel Company of Canada has a large copper production, it is considered less importance than its nickel output in the paper proceeds. "The company has been operating as low a rate as major United States companies for the past few months, according to reports.

Noranda Mines, Limited, also produces a large volume of copper and this company along with other smaller Canadian concerns are understood to be willing to do their part.

In arriving here yesterday, Colonel Dan, representative of the Union Miniere du Haut Katanga, company holding some of the richest copper producing properties in the world, the Canadian attitude would probably decide the success or failure of the conference.

Today it is learned two of the largest copper companies, namely the Kennecott and Anaconda, are willing to participate in the plan to reduce surplus stocks of copper by closing their mines entirely for several months.

This attitude, however, says the Journal of Commerce, is at variance with the intentions of officials of the Katanga Union. Yesterday Emil Francqui, governor of the company, arrived

Governments Offer Double Sums Raised in Relief Donations

Both Governments Will Match Voluntary Funds

COMMUNITY EFFORT

Amounts To Be Raised By Taxation Still To Be Equalled

Brantford, Oct. 22.—To encourage the raising of funds through other civic community organizations, to take care of direct relief, thereby lifting a heavy burden off the taxpayers next winter, the Federal and Provincial governments will contribute each a dollar for every dollar raised by such means. All expenditures from such moneys must be certified by municipal authorities.

This message was brought to the campaigners for the Brantford Community League objective for $75,000 for Brantford, by Hon. W. G. Martin, Minister of Public Welfare for Ontario. It means that if Brantford raises $75,000, the total available funds for civic relief will reach $225,000. This considerably heartened the campaigners, who were further encouraged by announcement that subscriptions and pledges to date totalled $50,534.14.

The government, however, also will contribute, Mr. Martin explained, to cities where moneys needed are raised by taxation.

Taking the Brantford Community League and the system devised here as a model, the Minister declared that the formation of such associations of citizens, acting through the municipal authorities and with their sanction would be encouraged throughout Ontario. He heartily commended this effort to raise needed moneys without adding to the tax burden of the municipality as a whole.

In the present temporary crisis, Hon. Mr. Martin declared the Province was playing its part in good earnest, as evidenced by the Northern camp project and the grants for relief works to 150 municipalities, totalling some $12,000,000.

Appeal of Brantford Effort.

Referring to the Community League plan, the Minister said: "The government is particularly proud of your effort here, and for the expenditures from the fund for direct relief, the province will pay its third. We hoped that the Federal government also would agree to pay a third, on this basis, and our hope has been realized. In telephone conversation with Ottawa this has been confirmed. And as a government, we are recommending to other municipalities that they organise as you have organized."

Quoting Right Hon. R. B. Bennett as saying that the present depression was but an interlude between peak prosperity and future greater prosperity, the Minister pointed out that although an envied nation, Canada, too, had her burden to bear at this time, and made an eloquent appeal for those who were able to assist to the utmost the good citizens while, in the fell clutch of circumstance, were unable to help themselves.

Brantford's contribution now totals more than $50,000, it was announced at the meeting.

Statement by Minister.

Prior to leaving his Queen's Park office yesterday, Hon. Mr. Martin gave a brief explanation to the press of the government's policy of direct relief that he announced during the evening in Brantford.

"The Ontario government," said he, "is anxious to assist in every possible way and to distribute of direct relief being given without adding to the tax rate, which in the final analysis is taxing those whom it is desired to help," he announced. "The governments are prepared to each give one-third of the cost of direct relief, regardless of how the money is raised. There are some municipalities which find themselves unable to raise sufficient moneys owing to financial considerations and in these cases direct relief will be given in the form of food, clothing and shelter.

"We are very glad to observe that citizens and service clubs are banding together for the raising of fund on a similar basis to the patriotic raising during the war years," continued the speaker. "The government is anxious that the tax rate be not increased because of direct relief expenditures."

Methods to Be Followed.

Regarding methods to be followed in the expenditure of direct-relief moneys, Mr. Martin stated that where such civic committees were formed, the municipality would undertake the expenditures and the merchants would present their vouchers to the civic officials who would, in turn, forward them to the Ontario government, after they had been O.K.'d by the relief officer and the treasurer. The vouchers would then be sent to Ottawa for approval and the moneys would be paid to the municipality, one-third from each government.

Charity drives, such as Toronto's Federated Community Service, and Catholic Charities appeals, would not be included in the arrangement spoken of by Hon. Mr. Martin, wherein Brantford is to get so far every one raised in its drive for improvement funds. Brantford's appeal, Mr. Martin explained to The Globe, is of a special character, for unemployment relief only.

GUIDES ENTER STORY CONTEST

American Guides Compete Against Best in N. B.

Fredericton, N. B., Oct. 22.—Characterized by Ilo chipiakor, W. O. McGeehan, well-known New York sports writer, as an "amateur lying contest," an international competition in story telling will be an added feature of the annual meeting of the New Brunswick Guides' Association next year.

The American sports writer is anxious to have his star story tellers from the United States plied against the best New Brunswick has to offer, and already plans are under way to have two guides come from the Republic to the annual guides' meeting in Fredericton next year.

Mr. McGeehan recently spent a holiday fishing in this province, and after returning to the metropolis wrote of some of his experiences with guides in his daily column. He takes the ground that all guides are rather proficient at lying, when they start to describe some of their experiences in the woods.

He writes that he has heard guides lie from Labrador to Florida. Some of them are picturesque, some of them just plain ones. They tell you about the big moose and the big salmon or the big tarpon or the clouds of wild geese flying so close together that you do not have to shoot at them, but just put your gun and the geese fly at the barrels and dash their heads out and fall at your feet.

After listening to one of the oldest guides in the northern section of the province relate some of his thrilling experiences with bears McGeehan says that at this point his jaw dropped and he said to him:

"We have better liars to the south," he said.

It was then decided that the only way to settle the matter was to have the New York sports writer bring back a representative for his country in the contest which it has been planned to stage at the next guides' annual meeting.

The writer says he handed the committee head the name of John Strickland, of Brunswick, Georgia.

Mr. McGeehan said that the last time he saw Mr. Strickland he assured him that he had retired from competitive lying, so his appearance will be something in the nature of a comeback.

"The event will be open for amateurs, only, and there will be one judge from the United States and one from Canada. It has been agreed that Mr. Richards, premier of New Brunswick, will act as referee."

MUSIC

Recital by Brilliant Young Belleville Pianist Will Be Treat

An event of special interest in Belleville musical circles is to be given at the Belleville Collegiate, Tuesday evening, October 27th by Empson McCormick, a talented son of this city. He will be assisted by Rhoda Byers, soprano, who is also a former resident.

As an artist at the piano and by his true musicianship, Empson McCormick is establishing himself in the musical world.

Signs of inherent musical ability were displayed at an early age and at seventeen he entered the Toronto Conservatory of Music. After ten year's study he passed the A.T.C.M. piano examination obtaining the highest mark in the Dominion.

In 1930 his first public recital was given in the Conservatory Hall, Toronto, and on the strength of his performance was awarded the Heintzman Scholarship by Dr. Ernest Macmillan. During the past year he has played many triumphant engagements and in June was granted the Licentiate degree from the Associated Board of the Royal College and Royal Academy of Music, London, England.

There is a universal appeal about his playing. His programs are always interesting and he is very willing to include in his repertoire the latest and best of modern compositions. Critics declare he says the "Variity" of his Mar Rhoda recital "possesses such an admirable technique and such a depth of feeling."

IDEALIST IN DIFFICULTIES

Humane Authorities Have To Care For Messenger

Southampton, Oct. 22—Mrs. Sallendra Nath Ghose and her two children who are bearing a message to Mahatma Gandhi from the United States, were detained by immigration authorities when the Empress docked at Southampton, but only for three hours. When she arrived, Mrs. Ghose, wife of the President of the India National Congress of America, told authorities she was practically penniless as she had spent more than she expected on the voyage. Mrs. Ghose explained she had arranged to sail from New York on another ship, and had cabled London for money to be placed at her disposal at Southampton. At the last moment, however, she decided to sail on the Empress, and her financial arrangements were askew. Southampton authorities decided to detain her until they had communicated with her friends in London, and meanwhile they presented her and her children with a meal. Immigration officials obtained her story and she was allowed to proceed to London.

Comic Opera Trial Planned in Spain

Madrid, Oct. 22—The responsibilities Committee of the National Assembly decided today to try Alfonso former King Alfonso of "high treason" against the Spanish State on the grounds that he fostered the dictatorship of the late General Primo de Rivera. Other high officials of the Dictatorship will be similarly accused.

The committee expects to confer with Premier Manuel Azana of the Assembly in a few days, to elect a date on which to read the accusations before the deputies.

The charges include recommendations that the Assembly act as a trial tribunal and render a verdict.

The first baby show in the United States, and probably in the world, was held at Springfield, Ohio, October 16, 1854.

No Outbreak Of Fire in Wentworth

Hamilton, Oct. 22—For the first time in a week, there was no outbreak of fire in Wentworth county last night. The firebug, who is alleged to have caused the blazes which have destroyed ten buildings in about ten days failed to strike. Farmers kept vigil through the early hours of morning, but their wait was in vain.

Attention appeared to be no nearer a solution of the mysterious fires today. James McConnell, 38, farm hand, who was arrested and questioned Tuesday following a fire, was released.

Brilliant Student Barred From Normal

Saint John, N.B., Oct. 22.—A brilliant student of Mount Allison, Mary Wright, of Hopewell Hill, Albert County, second highest in New Brunswick in the recent examination of Normal School Entrance Examination, is her quest for success. She's too young!

Her youngest years is the age restriction, and she will not be fourteen until September 24, she has slightly more than two years to wait before she can take the benefit of passing the entrance test—although she was second in standing.

Much of the credit for her surprising progress to date is said to be due to her instructor, Clyde Keith, principal, who took a helpful interest in her when he discovered her consistent ability. Last year Annie won the Lieutenant-Governor's medal for highest marks in Albert County. She has attended the same school all her life.

TAX ON BACHELOR GIRLS

Amherst, N.S., Oct. 22.—A tax on bachelor girls every year of $300 per year in the town of Amherst was suggested recently by Mayor Rogers at a meeting of the town council. Mayor Rogers urged that the unmarried women in the town earning their own living were on the same plane as young men and should certainly pay a poll tax. The suggestion caused a sensation and it was decided that Mayor Rogers and Town Clerk R. D. Crawford, as delegates to the annual meeting of the Nova Scotia Municipal Union, refer the issue to the attention of this body.

Mrs. S. C. Read, Hamilton, Provincial President, presided and introduced Col. Wood, referring to his historical research work and his connection with the Boy Scout movement in the province of Quebec.

Singer Charges Fire Underwriters Violate Law, Boycotting Jews

Member Says Property Owned By Jews Difficult to Insure

HIS ONSLAUGHT

Declares Gentile Owners Are Affected By Action

Toronto, Oct. 22—Charging the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association with being a combine in restraint of trade contrary to the Criminal Code, E. F. Singer, K.C., member of the Legislature for St. Andrew's, opened an attack on fire insurance companies last night in an address before the Mercury Conservative Club, in which he declared that legislation should be made possible for Jews to obtain insurance on property which they own and which now—few could not obtain insurance if a building be owned and occupied by Jews.

Backing up his onslaught with original documents which revealed that fire insurance companies would not accept risks if Jews were concerned directly or indirectly, Mr. Singer declared that this was the alleged discrimination into three categories:

(1) That it is very difficult to obtain a policy on property occupied by Jews even though owned by non-Jews.

(2) That mortgagees and investors of money who have loaned money out security of business on business properties find that when their properties are sold by people of the Jewish faith, the fire insurance policies protected by such mortgages are arbitrarily cancelled.

(3) That Jews have refused to give credit because of the fact that Jews find it difficult to obtain fire insurance.

Racists Further Case

"This is a matter for co-operation, and not for animosities and prejudices," declared Mr. Singer, "and in the last session of the Legislature, it was my duty to call the attention of the government and the people of the province to the prejudices which prevailed against foreigners in this country in connection with automobile insurance, and I was happy to see that, after some negotiations, the companies realize their mistake and undertook to consider automobile insurance, not on the basis of race or religion, but on the basis of personal risk.

"I had thought that all insurance companies, those dealing with insurance against fire and theft, would fall in line and adopt the same principle. Unfortunately, that has not taken, and I am now in a position to prove my statements that certain fire insurance companies will not underwrite risks where the owner is Jewish faith are concerned.

"This matter is not limited to people of the Jewish faith, but affects the entire business world," continued Mr. Singer, "as serious results follow when a company writes letters to its agents stating that they will not accept risks on Hebrews, but it becomes doubly serious when non-Jews are injuriously affected in their business relations because of atrocious discrimination.

"It is a well known fact that the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association will not allow its agents to advertise their connection with any non-tariff company, on penalty of being refused connection with the underwriters' association. If this is not restrained by force, from which the public has been suffering, then I am very much mistaken.

Assail Asthetics

"Just what procedure will be taken to bring about a change in the situation I cannot say at the moment, but it is a question as a member of the Legislature in the interests of the province, and as a citizen, to bring the matter to the attention of the proper authorities. If one, refuse to allow religion to be made synonymous with citizenship and while I have no objection to any company refusing a policy on personal grounds, I have objection to the refusal of a policy to a man because he happens to be a Catholic, Bulgarian, Italian or member of any other nationality.

"I have here a number of letters from fire insurance companies in which they refuse applications for insurance," continued the member for St. Andrew's, "and I will read one. I return herewith a number of applications covering property owned by Hebrews. I could not write these lines for you unless I had definite knowledge that there were no Hebrew names on any of the properties, or likely to be."

"Has it come to this," asked Mr. Singer, "that a Hebrew who rents his property to a Hebrew is unable to cover his property with insurance? And does it mean that non-Jews, in order to insure their properties to Jews at the risk of having their insurance cancelled?

"Another letter written by a fire insurance company of the same agents contains the paragraph: 'I herewith return the above applications marked as declined as it is a Hebrew persuasion. I regret to advise you that I am unable to accept the line if such is the case. As a matter of fact my companies have entirely discontinued writing Hebrew business, and I have just received official advice in this particular connection."

Vaccination Favored To Prevent Diphtheria

Paris, Oct. 22.—The commission of experts appointed by the legislative committee of the League of Nations to study the question of anti-diphtheria vaccination, which met in London in June, which has presented the findings to the International Hygiene Congress, being held in Paris, reported today. The report is based on comparative studies of diphtheria vaccinations followed by a program planned at a meeting in Paris in July, 1930, and a study of various documents during the last few years.

The commission approves vaccination against diphtheria and finds it reduces mortality and acts as a preventive. The reaction sometimes resulting from vaccination is relatively harmless and should not interfere with propaganda in favor of vaccination, the report says.

It is hardly doubtful that all these things are connected and related to the Soviet Five Year Plan. State against "Frankenstein" that has been created and which has now become if left unchecked. Collective farms obviously are a step forward toward the Soviet goal of socialism. As compared with individual peasantry, who, on the other hand, they are organized groups of peasants, ostensibly for the peasant mentality—that is, by increasing the productivity of labor in the interests of urban consumption.

Individual peasants might be "greedy capitalists," but they are greedy capitalists, but it is harder to deal with peasant groups organized on collective lines. The general shortage makes them resort to force. The drive on the Soviet Press is making vigorous attack on what it calls Japan's imperialistic designs in Manchuria.

Dr. Arthur Schnitzler Austria's Noted Author Stricken While at Work

Vienna, Oct. 22. — Dr. Arthur Schnitzler, one of Austria's most prominent literary men, died suddenly yesterday of apoplexy. The playwright, poet and author of numerous novels, who was sixty-nine years old, had not been ailing, and was about to dictate a new drama to his secretary when he was stricken. In Dr. Schnitzler, who was a physician before he turned exclusively to writing, modern Austrian literature loses one of its great representatives. His works were known to young and old in both Austria and Germany, and his novels and plays were translated into virtually all languages.

PEASANTS ARE REAL PROBLEM

Collectives Refuse to Give Up Grain for Money

(By Walter Durant in New York Times)

Moscow, Oct. 21.—There were five important items in the newspapers yesterday and today, each presented separately as if unconnected, but almost startling coincident phases of the same affair. There is no press censorship, and one has little information from official quarters.

First, yesterday the formation of a "committee of reserve" was announced, the president of this committee is V. V. Quibeshoff, member of the Communist Political Bureau and president of the State Planning Commission, vice president is M. Yagoda, second vice president is Joseph Stalin's private secretary Poskrebishev, and member of the committee is a prominent army commander, Budyenny.

Today the reads of the Tractor Factory in the Stalingrad Textile Centre issue statements to the effect that collectives have been making reserves of grain, other foods and clothing for their own use, instead of fulfilling their sales quotas to State organizations, which are responsible for feeding products for urban needs and for exportation.

Deem Ukrainian Reds Ousted

Fourth, the Ukrainian section of the Ukrainian Communist party is reported to have ousted from the party a dozen important and local officials connected with the grain and cotton and inflicting severe blame upon or removal from their jobs of the Ukrainian Commissar for the aforesaid State mobilization of reserves, which is blamed for its lack of resistance to the "Kulak" counter-attack on the part of collective farms to make their own reserve arrangements and withhold their supplies to the State.

Finally, there is announcement by Premier Molotoff strongly condemning the recent practice of the industrial workers of moving to and between factories—iron for leather factories for furniture—which intends to discredit Soviet money and interferes with the organized system of financial and accounting relations between which goods is carried out, according to the State plan.

It is hardly doubtful that all these things are connected and related to the Soviet Five Year Plan State against "Frankenstein" that has been created and which has now become if left unchecked. Collective farms obviously are a step forward toward the Soviet goal of socialism. As compared with individual peasantry, who, on the other hand, they are organized groups of peasants, ostensibly for the peasant mentality—that is, by increasing the productivity of labor in the interests of urban consumption.

Individual peasants might be "greedy capitalists," but they are greedy capitalists, but it is harder to deal with peasant groups organized on collective lines. The general shortage makes them resort to force. The drive on the Soviet Press is making vigorous attack on what it calls Japan's imperialistic designs in Manchuria.

FIELD KITCHEN FEEDS NEW ARMY

Not since the days of the World War has a field kitchen been established in expansive Hyde Park, London. A modern counterpart of Kitchener's Army, the kitchen is here to dole out rations to London's unemployed. Note the men with their cups, crowding about the field kitchen during pool for their issue of soup.

RUSSIA STAYS ON SIDELINES

Japan May Have Good Reasons to Protest Soviet Interest

Moscow, Oct. 21 (AP)— Soviet Russia is remaining on the sidelines as an interested observer without open commitment as to her own policy regarding the conflict between Japan and China in Manchuria.

Moscow's deep interest in the Japanese occupation of parts of Southern Manchuria is inconsequential, but thus far no official expression has been given to Russia's position in the affair, notwithstanding the realization that Russia's economic interests may be involved.

Observers agree that the Soviet Union is much too occupied with its own gigantic tasks of industrial construction to desire any interruption which participation in the Manchurian situation might entail.

On the other hand, any open ownership of valuable Soviet coal and oil concessions in Sakhalin give rise to a belief in some quarters that Russia has very definite interest to protect Russia's interests in Manchuria, including the Chinese-East Railway.

For these reasons, no one here believes reports published abroad, that Russian troops are being concentrated on the Manchurian border, and these reports have been denied officially.

Meanwhile, the Japanese Ambassador has conferred frequently with Soviet Government officials, and it is said here that the Soviet Press is making vigorous attack on what it calls Japan's imperialistic designs in Manchuria.

FORM AGREEMENT ON ROUTING

RAILWAYS IN CANADA MAY

Toronto, Oct., Oct. 22—A special despatch to the Mail and Empire from Ottawa today says:

"An agreement covering the routing of freight and express in certain sections of Canada may be the next step which the C.P.R. and C.N.R. will announce in their joint economy campaign.

"Negotiations for co-operation along this line were reported yesterday to be under consideration at railway headquarters in Montreal. Only a meagre outline of the proposal was available in the rumor mill circulation, here. The object is understood to be the consignment of freight and express by the most economical route, thereby effecting certain parts of the country. Regardless of which road carries it.

The announcement from Saint John, N.B., of an agreement where by the Canadian National would give the Canadian Pacific all Atlantic freight and passenger traffic coming to the publicly-owned road, was hailed here as the first major result of the co-operation which the joint committee is considering urging on the roads to reduce expenditures all around.

Ocean Flights Yet In Stunt Class

New York, N.Y., Oct. 22.—Trans-Atlantic flights still are in the stunt era and have not advanced a bit since the first recognized spanning of the North Atlantic eleven years ago, according to Dr. Archie Mitten Owens, British electric executive, the first accredited navigator to cross the Atlantic. He made the trip in a plane piloted by the late Sir John Alcock in 1919. He is here to attend the friendship dinner in connection with the conference of the Society of Engineers, at the invitation of Owen D. Young and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

"It is my opinion that the present safety of planes has never been 'examined' before. In fact I do not see what can be done to improve the present type of planes, without changing their construction" he said.

MESSAGE IN BOTTLE FOUND

Six Years in Waters of Ocean is Found Off Norway

Saint John, N.B.—On November 17,1924, the wife of the captain of the three-master schooner "Susan B." abandoned as a derelict in a terrific storm in the North Atlantic penned a little message containing the story of the disaster, put it in a bottle, and hated it to the waves.

On November 1930, the daughter of Captain Clifford Bishop of the Susan B., to whom the letter was addressed, received a letter from a man in Norway, saying that he had picked up the bottle on the shore of a little Island called Flekvoy, on the coast of Norway.

The man finding the bottle and extracting the message, forwarded the latter to the United States address given in it, and in many years it is held by Vera Bishop as an interesting momento of the sea disaster.

The bottle, as a useful ocean carrier of news, has now been displaced by radio and wireless communication, but in days gone by it was often the sailor's only means of sending out this story of the disaster.

A strange story likely lies behind the wanderings across the Atlantic of this bottle as it rode the billows of the storm-swept ocean for six years to be finally picked up on the rugged coastline of Norway. Many a tale of adventure, romance, tallous sea in darkness and storm, of the desperation and of the waves, man will never know. It will be a long time, too, before the traditions of its kind, it delivered its message.

Microscope Shows Flaw in Marble

Washington, Oct. 22.—One little flaw revealed by the magnifying glass has caused the rejection of a ton-ton block of marble for the Lincoln Memorial, Dr. Arthur Keith, geologist, declared as a prospect this proposed structure will last for more than ordinary merit."

Brig. Gen. Louis Mark, Assistant Quartermaster General of the army disclosed that such is the perfection standard of the memorial and ordered the replacement of the block on which will rest a fifty-ton statue of Abraham Lincoln.

"On almost any other project," he said, "the block would have been approved. Because the tomb of the Lincoln memorial is unique, and because it is small and the material observed will be able to get close to it, I felt we must have as near perfection as possible."

The Colorado firm who supplied the marble has consented to the replacement.

The report further intimated that the developments of the Noranda property had been the deciding factor in the proposal.

LISTING IDLE PROVES HARD

Many Now Employed Have Provided Against Future Dismissal

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—Proof that scores of drifters registered in had no intention of seeking work and that thousands of other men, thinking they might be victimized during the Winter put themselves on the list as a precaution against being driven Federal authorities to the conclusion that their attempt at registration by compulsion has been a failure. Publication today of December 1 unemployment's letter to the National Council of Welfare by the Minister of Labor admitted as much, came as confirmation of an impression which is known to be widespread among officials here.

It is regarded as lamentable that the registration was so much misused. "It simply means that a lot of people have been cheated by the many who misrepresented themselves."

Among farm laborers, it is reported, the registration is also not working at the time of registration but who, in the normal course of events, would be looking for jobs in the Winter.

Farm employers generally expect Winter unemployment and lay aside money in the hope of getting over them over. This ear. It appears many of them took the additional precaution of registering as unemployed before they were out of work. Accordingly, it is said, there was an equally large proportion of such misrepresentations.

Checks were made in some of these cases and also as regards drifters. It is said in many cases that it was found, registered in each city in which they stopped and that they worked their way east in box cars.

So many of these cases were found that officials were obliged to admit that the registration was unsatisfactory as far as it was aimed at presenting the administration with a complete census of the country's unemployment. Consequently it has been suggested for Canada to go back and await the completion of the count of workless made in connection with the census in June.

GOLD STRIKE HAS MERIT

Geologist States The Possibilities of Development Are Great

Toronto, Oct. 22.—Reporting on the recent discovery of gold in Swayze Township, Northern Ontario, Dr. Alfred Bruce Scott, consulting geologist, declared as a prospect this property has more merit and is more than ordinary merit."

Dr. Scott, in his report form an estimate of the importance of this discovery at the early stages of its development, says that the find is not yet, no indication of the length of the ore shoot, or the ultimate production. The samples assayed point to a close relationship between the pyrite and the gold values."

The find has caused a rush of prospectors and mining men to the township, which it situated 34 miles north of Kelso, on the Canadian National Railway and 18 miles northeast of Ridout, on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

OVERHAULING OF SCHOOLS IS UNDER PROBE

Exams Not True Test of Students' Gifts, Says Falconer

RADICAL STEP

Students Stunted By Matriculation Tests

Toronto, Oct. 22—Agreeing in part with others that the true ability of a student could not be seriously judged by written examinations, Sir Robert Falconer, president of the University of Toronto, declared yesterday that Ontario's educational system is changing. It would have to be a radical change and it is being brought about by tinkering.

Sir Robert addressed the students of St. Andrew's College at their annual opening day, after Rev. Bruce Macdonald the headmaster, had called attention to the "terrific intimation" in regard to matriculation regulation which is hanging over the province. The Orkke Archbishop Mell McNeil, who also spoke at the meeting, made emphasis on mere examination results was a "perversion of the educational problem."

The subject introduced by Dr. Macdonald brought out a variance of opinion but all three speakers declared that the ability of a student could not be satisfy judged by written examinations.

"We are stunted throughout the whole process by matriculation examinations," Dr. Macdonald declared. "There is no hope for the school for this bad lack of confidence. The present matriculation regulations has been given up by the university and handed over to the province. The situation can only be met when the public of Ontario ceases to indulge in the fetish worship of examinations.

Challenge People of Wrong Ideas

"Those who are criticizing the Ontario Matriculation Board, now blaming the department of education, (The people of Ontario are as fixed in thinking this huge octopus swallow us up."

He referred to the gigantic task of reading papers for the entire province. Last year 100,000 papers were examined, and this year there were more than 8,000 applications for re-reading.

Sir Robert agreed with Dr. Macdonald that the student could not be estimated by this test, as such tests were incapable of gauging the character of the student. "To get at the things which really matter, we must have a more searching discernment," he said. "Students are not to be unduly cast well in examinations. This is a good principle, and I hope that the departments must have sincerity as well and this quality must be backed by such a method.

The matriculation problem does not merely resolve itself into the passing of examinations. It goes deeper than the examination hall. The whole of our school system has to be changed, he declared. We need a radical change, but we can not get at it by tinkering."

BANNING OF TEXT BOOKS TO EIGHTH YEAR

Dr. H. D. Brunt Expresses View at Convention

LEARNING WORDS

Montreal, Que. (By The Canadian Press)—Rural grammar should not be introduced before the sixth year of school, it was agreed at a recent convention here of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers at Quebec. A committee studying the teaching of English recommended many drastic changes designed to aid children in mastering their mother tongue and to make the task a much happier process than heretofore has been the case. Although Dr. H. D. Brunt, chairman of the committee, believed children in the first seven years of school should not be bothered with text books on composition, grammar and spelling, the committee as a whole did not agree with such a wholesale abolition.

"Spelling is a mere tool, a purely skill subject, almost barren of thought-arousing material and of aesthetic interest," said Miss J. E. Boyce, who urged that spelling should be dropped from the first two grades, excepting what the pupil learned incidentally. Another great time-waster is the frequent failure of teachers and administrators to distinguish between the the child's reading and writing vocabularies. We all read hundreds of words daily that we rarely or never use in writing. It is this lack of discrimination that results in spelling lists at the end of reading lessons, spoiling the literary appeal of the selection. We all read and use in speech many words that would puzzle us to spell if suddenly challenged. We need to spell when we write and at no other time.

"Each child should learn the words he finds difficult, working out his own list. As soon as a child has acquired the mechanical art of reading he should be taught to use the dictionary for spelling as well as for meaning.

Grammar teaching, the committee decided, should develop the sense of right and wrong in conduct of language. What children need—as was "legrues", not grammar—is language enriched by grammar, not grammar exemplified by language.

"The disrepute into which school grammar has fallen has been doubtless caused by the exaltation of nomenclature and definition over construction and application," it was said. "For example, pupils have learned a definition of pronoun in the abstract but have not learned how to use relative pronouns in practice."

The committee felt that children should be taught to use books as tools. The present method of emphasizing the importance of oral over silent reading was criticized. Silent reading involves a distinct skill, necessary for speed. "Much of the outcry against homework, overcrowding of curriculum, pressure of work, and cramming is due to the fact that pupils do not read enough," the committee said.

Oral reading had an entirely different purpose. "Good oral reading is an artistic achievement, like good singing or drawing, and should be so taught. It was said.

In the teaching of literature the chief aim should be appreciation and enjoyment rather than an intensive course should be offered stated the committee.

$5,000,000 Garden City Development

Montreal, Que.—(By The Canadian Press)—Construction has begun of an ambitious $5,000,000 garden city developed in the Town of Mount Royal. The ultimate number of cottages to be erected is 1,200.

To meet the convenience of the families now occupying their own homes a block of four stores with the second storey used as a hall is now under construction but off one of the main streets. All streets are well paved and lighted. A place of worship and a Sunday school have been built, and arrangements are now being made for a day school to take care of the 150 children of the community. Though the development is within 30 minutes of the centre of the city, either by bus or by car, the administration have not lost sight of the community idea of the project.

The scene that presents itself to the visitors' eyes is viewing the site of the development, crossing over from the bottom of Cote des Neiges Road on to the property, is that of a typical English village, of the better class. There are single and semi-detached houses built in the Old Country style; each one surrounded by a privet hedge, walled in with shrubs and flowers, and with a tree in the centre. There is a home like and restful atmosphere about the place with an air of quiet prosperity everywhere.

IRON AGE CEMETERY

Pritzwalk, Germany—Excavations in the woods near Eggersdorf have revealed the existence of a cemetery containing urns of the iron age.

More than 30 well preserved urns with bones were found. All signs indicated the burial place in question had to be a cemetery for Germans and children.

A primitive crematory also was discovered. Numerous pieces of iron and flint stones lay scattered about the furnace.

The largest seabird now existing is the albatross.

Thirteen persons were fasting trial as the result of a religious riot at Port Glasgow, Scotland.

AMUSEMENTS

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Belle

JOAN CRAWFORD HAS ANOTHER FLAMING YOUTH ROLE IN "THIS MODERN AGE"

That even the gayest of society, the pleasure-mad, ultra-mod ern parties of care-free youth, real lers is the final and dominant factor is the theme of the latest Joan Crawford starring vehicle, "This Modern Age" which opened at the Belle Theatre yesterday, (Wednesday) for admiring audiences.

In this Parisian picture, Joan Crawford, who has become the epitome of flaming youth on the screen has even a greater chance than ever before to play the happy-go-lucky girl born with a silver spoon in her mouth. As Valentine, the young lady living with her youthful mother, Pauline Frederick, and playing with her as if she was of her own generation, Miss Crawford lives a life in which restraint is a thing unknown.

She has never known a really serious moment until she meets Bob Blake, played by Neil Hamilton, a young American of high and mighty ideals who falls in love with her and tries to make her give up her life of revelry. Until her meeting with him she has been pleasantly wound with another American boy of the typical play-boy spirit, Monroe Owsley. He is not the marrying kind and cares only, ostensibly, for the pleasure of the moment.

Bob's Bostonian parents visit in Paris and come to learn of the gay life their prospective daughter-in-law has been leading. Bob who knows that Valentine's mother has been stepping high wide and fancy with a rous bachelor, insists that Valentine give up her friends and tells her that her mother won't do. This is too much for the girl and she breaks with Bob. Later she accedes to her play-boy friend's request and goes with him to a hotel in Brittany.

It is the Mother's frantic attempt to prevent her daughter from making the same mistake she did which brings about the striking climax.

Junior featurettes preceding the presentation of "This Modern Age" include a two-real comedy cn called "Pest from the West" with Charles (Chic) Sales. Vaudevilles premier clown comedian, Heinie Kane in "Lesson in Love" which will teach every girl how to get her Man. A Complete Round of Golf with Bobby Jones describing every shot, carefully as he covers the course and Metrotone News presenting interesting items from near and far completes a fine program, and one that every patron of the Belle Theatre will enjoy.

A BARRAGE OF LAUGHS IN "PARDON US" NEW LAUREL-HARDY LENGTH COMEDY

There were more pre-views and re-editing of Laurel and Hardy's first feature-length comedy "Pardon Us" which will open at the Belle today, for two days, matinee daily, than of any other feature ever made—and there is a reason. When Laurel and Hardy started this picture they planned on making the biggest and the best and funniest feature comedy yet on the screen.

There were no hit-and-miss methods in the making of "Pardon Us." The finest mens have planned and carried out for a legitimate reason. There were long story conferences at the beginning. After each pre-view Laurel and Hardy personally supervised the cutting and changes; slow spots were taken out and additional "hot" spots added. It was pre-viewed several times until the film finally reached a point where both stars said "O. K."

It was a big job, but it was worth it. Two-reel comedians can either make or break themselves with their entree to feature-length comedies, but not Laurel and Hardy. They were too wise for that. Consequently the smallest item was worthy of their undivided attention. Harold Lloyd has the reputation of being his own severest critic, but Laurel and Hardy have pressed him on this angle.

The Navy Department has acquired a $90,000 lump of radium whose rays will help the naval research laboratory to discover hidden defects in vital parts of warships.

At The Capitol

'TOO MANY COOKS' AT THE CAPITOL

Bert Wheeler has some excellent advice to give to love-nest builders. He says, "If you are planning building a home for your future wife and yourself, and your 'honey-bird's' relatives arrive on the scene with plans and specifications, give them full play. It will make 'em happy and avoid tiffs between yourself and your lady love. Then, when the house is built, why, pay for it and give to her relatives and move into an apartment!"

Bert Wheeler plays the harrassed bridegroom in "Too Many Cooks" at the Capitol today and Friday, and Dorothy Lee is the bride.

This couple are billing and cooing, by paying the bills, when up pop fourteen of wifey's relations to inspect the house in their honeymoon home. What can one fellow do against such odds, other than leave it to them? This is what really happens when the final surprise tale, which "Too Many Cooks" is literally popping, brings to a satisfactory close the comedy-drama you will like so well.

Roscoe Ates, an eccentric stutterer, is also included in the cast, so that additional fun can be safely expected.

"Thanks Again," a new type of comedy and "Animal Fair", a clever, very amusing cartoon are also on the program.

Silverware Gift Night

Tonight, being Silverware Gift Night, each lucky patron will be presented with an EPNA article of silverware. Each week brings the complete fifty-two piece set nearer, so that lovers of the set are advised to attend regularly each Thursday Gift Night.

180 Miles of Rail Is Laid in Congo

Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa—After ten years of effort and toil 180 of the 330 miles of the track of the Brazzaville-Congo-Ocean Railroad have been completed.

The line runs from Brazzaville to Pointe-Noire through dense forest and mountains. Hitherto nearly impenetrated by man, presenting one of the most difficult tasks ever undertaken by railroad engineers. Although the road is only 330 miles long, 35 viaducts had to be built and 17 tunnels cut. Another obstacle was the scarcity of labor. Now 13,000 men are working on the construction and it is hoped the job will be finished soon.

Tunisians Make Houses in Sand

Tunis—Tunisia has perhaps the strangest cave dwellers in the world. They are found south of the coast on the fringe of the desert, and in their efforts to escape the heat they have dug dwellings for themselves in the sand.

The traveler crossing the plain of Matmata comes across what appears to be wells, and is surprised to hear sounds of talking and children's laughter coming up from the earth. Looking down, he discovers in the half light a small courtyard and tunnelled rooms. The bottom of the well-like cavity are complete dwellings.

Access to these underground dwellings is through a slowly descending tunnel, and when the habitation proper is reached it is found to be beautifully clean and cool. Down below the surface lives the whole family, and there are stables for their animals.

Christopher L. Sholes invented the typewriter in 1867.

CANADA STILL FIFTH TRADER

Decrease in Imports From Overseas Via U.S. is Notable Feature

Ottawa, October 20.—Canada maintained her relatively high place among the leading trading countries of the world in 1930 despite a material decrease in her import and export trade, according to the Department of Trade and Commerce. The report states that last year, as in the two preceding years, Canada stood in fifth position in total trade and total imports, but in exports dropped from fifth to sixth position, British India moving up from sixth to fifth position.

In the capita trade among world trading nations Canada has risen in export trade per capita from seventh position in 1913 to fourth position in 1930, while on the other hand, she has moved down from fifth position in import trade per capita to eighth position. In 1913 Canada had an unfavorable trade balance equivalent to $20.61 per capita, while in 1930 she had an unfavorable trade balance of only $10.38 per capita.

In products and exportation of many staple products, Canada ranks high among the principal nations of the world, says the report. In the production of printing paper, nickel and asbestos she leads the world, occupies second place in the production of gold, in output of wheat and zinc she occupies third place, and fourth place in the production of automobiles, copper and lead. In export trade however, Canada leads the world in the export of wheat, printing paper, nickel and asbestos, occupies second place in the export of automobiles and wheat flour, and fourth place in the export of wood pulp and rubber tires. Canada also ranks high in the world's export of many other staple products, such as lumber, and timber, fish, copper, barley, cheese, raw furs, whiskey, metal farm implements, pulpwood, cattle, raw gold, silver, rye, coal, rubber footwear, leather and hides.

Embarrassing Moments

W.C.T.U. Notes

The Women's Christian Temperance Union held its regular meeting at the Y.M.C.A. at 3 p.m. on October 16th and was opened by the singing of a hymn, the repeating in unison of the Pledge and Prayer by the President, Mrs. Farnsworth.

The programme was in charge of Mrs. Boyd's group, Mrs. Morris conducted the devotional exercises, reading Psalms 37 and associating with it an old Scotch allegory, "The River and the Road," then leading in prayer.

After the reading of the minutes various items of business were considered. Mrs. Farnsworth introduced Miss Arbuckle, Superintendent of Social Contests, and the latter favored with a pleasing interpretation of Paulina Lindsay's "The Appeal." It was decided to have a meeting on Wednesday afternoon of school children to see lantern slides and hear a talk by Miss Duff and the artist candidates of suitable ages for the contest. Mrs. Morris, Supt. of Temperance in Sunday School, reported on the success of efforts made to get the pupils in the S. S. to read the lives of Nansen, Sir Robert Peacevery, Timothy Eaton, Dr. Grenfell and other prominent men, who gave their reasons for abstaining from the use of alcohol the children being asked to answer questions based on the reasons given by these men. Prizes are offered by the local union, as well as by the county and provincial unions.

The President commended Mrs. Baker's work in Scientific Temperance Instruction and called on Mrs. Baker to explain of what it consisted and of the prizes to be awarded.

All regretted the enforced absence of the Treasurer, Mrs. Stonberg, on account of illness. She had sent the main items of her monthly statement. Mrs. Perley reported the success of the dinner served by the union to the Hastings Teachers' Convention, and the sum added to the finances therefrom.

The Mothers' meetings were commended and an appeal made for warm clothing and shoes for work.

The President then welcomed Miss Rosamond Duff, Field Secretary for the Y's and L.T.L.'s, as the speaker of the afternoon. Miss Duff had just come from London from the Provincial Convention, but said she would not trespass on the material of the report of the delegate, Mrs. Pearsall. She reminded all of the pledge and the definite purpose to work for the banishment of the liquor traffic from Belleville, our county, our province and Canada. Mention was made of the picture post cards offered for sale to tourists to advertise Canada, in which the case of liquor was not shown, and noted as a leading inducement to visit Canada. Candies containing rum can still be bought in some stores and the pretzels or salt bought in some restaurants lead to liquor parties.

Miss Duff told what the W. M. S. in some localities are sending petitions to the government recommending that the liquor shops be closed for the Winter on account of the hard times and unemployment.

Miss Duff mentioned that the price of one bottle of whiskey is $2.35 and stated that she had figured out just what food one could buy in Toronto for that sum, asking each one to figure it out according to prices in Belleville.

Another deplorable fact is the great increase of illegitimate children. Miss Duff said that in the Infants' Homes in Toronto the number of such children had increased enormously.

The instanced some of the terrible tragedies that are stalking through the land because the liquor business is in possession proof, she said.

Turning to a brighter picture she said that in Renfrew county the W.C.T.U. have taken as their slogan, "Renfrew County dry in five years," and are organizing systematically for that purpose.

Twenty-five local unions have been formed this past year and a number of X's have been received. Miss Duff mentioned particularly the pageants presented by the Y's at the world's W.C.T.U. and instanced the good work of the three Y's in Ottawa and the one in Picton.

The Dominion Convention meets next June and a campaign is to be carried on to get large numbers of young people to sign the Patriotic Roll before that time. Fifty thousand young people in Canada some of age every year and it is worth while to win them for temperance and to work "for God and Home and Canada."

Miss Duff's special work is for young people and she is speaking in the Sunday Schools and Leagues hoping to awaken interest in the Y.W.C.T.U., which used to be a power for good in this city.

St. Paul's May Be Primatial See

Toronto, Oct. 21.—"The story that St. Paul's Church may become the seat of the Primate of Canada is surmise," R. W. Allin, registrar of the Diocese of Toronto, told The Telegram. "If it had any origin it probably came of the suggestion from Chancellor Riesle, of Halifax made during the General Synod that the Primatial See should be in Toronto."

If, however, St. Paul's Anglican Church does become the seat of the Primate it would be taken over by Archbishop Worrell, or the reigning Primate, Mr. Allin said. The dioceses of Ontario and Toronto would not be affected, he added.

"The successor to Canon Cody would probably be raised a dean," Mr. Allin said. "There would have to be some other way to find a rank to take care of the services."

BOY THRESHER KILLED

Peterboro, Oct. 21.—Edward Leslie, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Leslie, Peterboro, died in Nicholls Hospital late Tuesday afternoon from injuries received when a tank wagon passed over his body. The boy was engaged as tank man with a threshing outfit and was on his way to get a load of water when going down a steep incline the wood which he was using as a seat slipped off. He fell beneath the wagon and the heavy tank passed over his body. He was immediately rushed to the hospital but death followed shortly after his admittance. Coroner Dr. W. H. Young has ordered an inquest.

INOCULATION OF CHILDREN

Port Credit, Oct. 21.—Appearing before the Peel County Council, M.O.H. Dr. A. B. Sutton strongly urged the inoculation of public school children against diphtheria. He pointed out that since the last inocular about five years ago the village had been remarkably free of the disease.

In addition to public school children, Dr. Sutton favored extending the service to those under school age, to obviate the necessity of having it done every year.

Treatment will only be given after parental permission. The doctor pointed out that no ill effects, beyond a possible sore arm, followed inoculation, and this had been largely eliminated by weakening the anti-toxin solution and giving three injections instead of two.

At an English seaport where the tide levels about 30 feet there is much as 30 feet an inventor obtains power to do 50 horse-power by capturing the water in tanks and using its fall to operate a turbine.

Policeman's Lot, Is It Unhappy?

Quebec, Que.—(By The Canadian Press)—A policeman's lot is not a happy one.

A member of the Quebec provincial detective force seemed to be in exceptionally gruff humor when standing outside of the Court of Sessions here recently. Asked by a reporter just what was the matter, the detective gave the following explanation: "During the past week I have been working on a case which originated in an isolated country village along the north shore; and believe me I had some job.

"After plowing about the country ten days I finally accurred all the evidence I require and succeeded in rounding up twenty-seven witnesses.

"After all this work I returned to town only to find that the accused had pleaded guilty in the meantime.

ISSIONARIES HELD CAPTIVE

ev. R. W. Porteous and Mrs. Porteous Tell of Experience

Montreal, Que. (By The Canadian ress)—Captured by Communists in China in the spring of last year, held in close unity for 24 days under conditions of great hard-ip and suffering of death, night ad body before they released with-ut explanation, Rev. R. W. Porteous and Mrs. Porteous arrived ere yesterday and told newspaper ep-ters the story of their experiences.

Mr. Porteous was held for ransom by them for an interview during recent visit to Montreal.

In the latter part of March, 1931, the Christian world was stir-red by the news cable from China of three missionaries, Rev. R. W. and Mrs. Porteous and Miss M. Kerr, working in the city of Nanchow in the west of Kiangsi province had been captured by the Communist army under Gen. Peng Teh-huai. Miss Gemmail was re-leased after a few days but Mr. and Mrs. Porteous was held for ransom. They were hurried up a mountain trail into the interior, continuing the march sometimes until midnight as Government troops were in the vicinity and their captors did not wish to en-counter any of the soldiers. When the captives were exhausted, they were allowed to rest in one of the towns in a temple, where they lay on bench in their wet clothes, or several times they had fallen into water in the dark.

They were moved on from place to place, often through the rain and through mud ankle deep, and across mountain streams. One evening, late, the guard held a hurried consultation, after which the prisoners, already fatigued to the point of exhaustion, were or-dered to get up and go on. At the head of the party a man was carrying a large sword, which he kept flashing before them. Seeing this the prisoners believed they were be-ing led to execution, but after a little the man reached Hee-fang, the common meeting place of the Soviet Government, which was to be their home for a month. Hee-fang, the stronghold of the Communist, where the people were very foreign and anti-social, they were flanked over to the Soviet Government and were housed in a prison in the district.

Other missionaries and Chinese Christians used every effort to ob-tain their release, but it was over three months before the demands of their Communist captors could be sufficiently satisfied to permit them to depart. Mr. and Mrs. Por-teous reached Montreal in a state of emaciation, Mrs. Porteous weighing only 85 and Mrs. Porteous 91 pounds, but they are fully restored to health and are eager to return to their field of work in China.

Asked if she was not a little a-fraid to return to China while con-ditions there are still unsettled, Mrs. Porteous said, "If I can help to undergo another such experience I should be given grace as I was be-fore."

The prayers of hundreds of thousands of Christians were not answered in order that we should be comfortable," declared said Mr. Porteous; "there is work for us to do in the East."

The work at the station at Yuan-chow has been carried on since the white missionaries were driven out, by a Chinese pastor, Rev. Su-Yen and his native helpers. This Chi-nese pastor happened to be away from the station when Communists arrested the missionaries. Otherwise he would have shared their fate.

Pictures Prove To Be Masterpieces

London—A provincial art dealer carried two pictures into London the room and announced he had been offered about $35 for the lot.

"I think that's a good offer for the frames," he said, "but can you tell if the pictures themselves are worth anything?"

Examined by experts the pictures were found to be 18th century por-traits by the American artist, Gil-bert Stuart. The dealer had pur-chased them from an American living in England. Put up at auc-tion, one picture sold for $4,500 and the other for $7,875.

Stuart was one of the celebrated painters of his day. He came to London as a student of Benjamin West and painted most of the no-table American and British poli-ticians. He died in Boston in 1906

"Name Your Terms"

by H. Louis Rayhold

"I am afraid darling. It is no earthly use" and Charley Dumont's face was the picture of despair. "Your father has made terms so easy for old Williams and so hard for me that there isn't a chance of my buying the business. Why do you figure he did it that way?"

Clare was troubled but received on frankness. "Dad used to want me to marry Ben Williams and naturally he'd rather the store would belong to his son-in-law than an outsider. I think, too, that he feels that Ben has had more experience and that, consequently his money would be surer" "$3,000 is a lot of money when you've only got $675," said Charles. "It isn't a lot of money when you have your real security and borrow the money. A large part of that $3000 is for good will alone.

"If we could use that $675 or a part of it" Clare was slowly thinking her way, "to make my father change his mind, would you be game to do it, even if it was like throwing the money away?"

"I'd do anything in the world, Clare, to put myself in a position to go to your father and tell him I want to marry you." There was no mistaking the young man's earnestness.

The two of them planned and schemed until, nearly midnight, and when Charles picked up his hat and went home he was com-mitted to spending a certain amount of his savings for an enterprise that night, or night not, serve as a lever to budge the employer's in-tentions.

Three years ago, Charles Dumont had accepted a position in Rain-bridge's Shoe Store. He had look-ed upon it as a temporary filler-in. Then, proceeding to fall in love with Clare Bainbridge, who had a casual habit of flitting in and out of her father's store, he had stayed on.

Recently there had arisen a rum-or that Mr. Bainbridge was plan-ning to retire and to sell the busi-ness.

In a rashly impulsive moment Charles had gone to his employer. "I'd like to purchase your store," he told him. "I've $675 down and the balance in monthly payments of $250 each."

But Bainbridge had refused. "Williams is considering buying," he said, and I am willing to let him have it on terms. He knows the business from the ground floor to high boots. If you could scrape together $3000 as down payment, you might have a chance. Otherwise not"

On the day following the one when Charles and Clare had put their youthful heads together, a certain unusual activity occurred in a store two doors below. A store which had been vacant for sev-eral weeks. Painters were in and out. A carpenter's truck was parked in front.

In Bainbridge's Shoe Store Char-les made but a single comment but that one comment traveled rapidly about among the clerks. "It's true," he inquired, "that a branch of the National Shoe Stores is opening up two doors below?"

The query even, found its way into the office. "Yes, if they ar-reticted Mr. Brainbridge testily, "it's absolute news to me."

But that evening he opened his paper and found an entire page devoted to large advertising head-lines. "If you are interested in Better Shoes, Watch this Page. Quality to Amaze you. Prices to Delight you."

Next day Charles asked Clare, who was lunching with him, how her father had taken the adver-tisement. "He had very little to say," was all she could tell him.

"What I am afraid of is that it will put your father's back up and that he will decide to fight. Then, when he finds out it was all a bluff and that I was the practical joker, my name will be mud. He'll have about as much use for me as a fire fly a nail"

Because of this apprehension, Charles was slightly upset when he was summoned to the office. "Mr. his employer about to tell him all deals were now off?

"Young man," said Bainbridge, "Williams is scared at the pros-pect of competition. He has come to me and told me he has changed his mind about buying the business. He proposes I agree to accept the offer of $675 down and the rest—"

Charles interrupted him sadly. "I haven't that much any more, Mr. Bainbridge, Sandow—" he drew a deep breath then continued res-olutely. "I wouldn't want to en-tack on a venture which has been tensed. I decided to force your hand by making you think a new shoe concern was starting in below. As a matter of fact, I paid for a month's lease on that store, hired those painters and carpenters. I ran the ad in the STAR. I don't believe that's all, sir. Oh, yes, there is one thing more. Clare and I love each other and want your consent to marry as soon as I've found some job paying enough to get married on"

It was the longest speech that Charles had ever made, but, having made it, he felt better, in spite of a certain worry as to what Clare would think about it. Perhaps he had lost out, not only on a chance to get a start in business, but with the girl he loved.

Then he noticed that Clare's father was smiling. You'll do, young man," he said. "What this business needs is someone not too conservative to try anything in an emergency? I suspected some thing of the sort when I saw the store is yours on your own terms on the day you marry, and my blessing goes with it."

Swiss Hotels Hard Struck By Slump

Geneva.—The German financial crisis and the world depression have struck Swiss hotels a heavy blow.

Germans ordinarily the most num erous foreign travelers in Switzer-land, are down by tens of thous-ands this summer, and thousands of Swiss hotels are nearly empty.

Other tourists also are less num-erous this summer. Hotels are competing keenly for the compar-atively few travellers who are visit-ing the countries take and mount-tain resorts, and vacationers who know the ropes are getting their rates.

Hangs Cat From Beam in Stable

Southampton, England—A tipe of about sixty dollars was imposed on a farmer here recently for hang-ing a cat from a beam in his shed. Unable to pay the fine he elected to go to prison for six weeks.

The charge against him was brought by a veterinary surgeon. The defendant, who denied cruelty said the cat stayed in his house and fought with his own mouser.

It is said of Germany that im-mediately after the war it was the custiod of industry in the very blood and spirit of the people which saved her and set her on her feet.

LIVES LOST IN GOLD QUEST

Nomad Tribe Bring in Skeleton of Pros-pector

Canberra, Australia—A nomad tribe of desert blacks has brought the skeleton of "possum" Lasseter to the outskirts of civilization and there ends a story of an attempt to secure gold from the arid heart of the Australian continent.

There have been many reports of good gold in the central Aus-tralian desert; some gold has been found but many lives have been lost.

Lasseter's expedition was the most spectacular and best equipped, but it ended, like others, in death. A little more than a year ago Las-seter struggled out of the interior with a story of gold in the dread Petermann ranges and a company was formed to equip an expedition.

Two aeroplanes, a camel team and a tribe of blacks conspired in placing stores of food, water, and gasoline along the route to the range. Lasseter was left at the most distant base to await the main party. The first aeroplane crashed and the pilot barely escap-ed with his life from the wreck. The second plane met with a similar fate and its crew was rescued after peri-lous.

Through all this Lasseter, waited. Finally he tried to make his way out of the "great thirst" and per-ished.

The only clue to his claim is a map, supposedly drawn in the possession of his widow.

BANK FAILS TO OPEN

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 21—The Mon-ongahela National Bank failed to open here today. Deposits de-creased more than five million dol-lars between June 30 and Septem-ber 15, the date on which the last statement was issued The Septem-ber 30 statement reported depos-its of $15,845,536 and resources of $20,236,267.

"Hare and Hounds" Protest is Heard

London—Midnight "hare and hounder" along the banks of the Thames in the beautiful but staid neighborhood of Ranelagh and Rich-mond has aroused residents to de-termined action.

One London banker complained recently that the flower beds on his lawn had been ruined and the lawn itself damaged by young London society people, clad only in bathing suits, who indulged in nocturnal hide and seek on his premises.

"I have since left my two Alsat-ian hounds on the lawn at night," he added. "There will be quite a warm welcome awaiting the next lot of hooligans who try to land at my private landing stage."

The game is described as scm-thing like a paper-chase. Three "hares" in a boat are given two min-utes start after which the "hounds", also in boats and punts, start the chase. The "hares" endeavor to land on a lawn and hide their tools and themselves.

Riparian residents complain that this has led to misuse of private boathouses, inlets and those beau-tiful lawns which stretch from the river bank to well kept homes. The charge is made that many London society girls, without pretension of skill at oars, joining rowing clubs merely to participate in this new game.

Rare Bird Brought To London Zoo

London—The London zoo has just received one of the world's rarest birds—a bustard, which seems to have changed little in its phys-ical character since prehistorical times.

The bird has two sharp claws on its wings. When danger threatens it dives from its nest into the river and uses the claws to climb back. When full grown it resembles a small pheasant, with a long tail, and the neiling looks distinctly like a reptilian. Its home is South Amer-ica.

Suit of Armour Made of Tins

Canberra, Australia—To make a last stand against a treacherous tribe of Australian blacks, an Australian gold miner, hammered out several empty water tins and fashioned them into rough armour.

But he died of thirst.

Old Hal Lasseter, discoverer of several rich Australian gold mines, was hdvance scout for a party searching the central Australian desert when he met death recently. His body was found later near a scribbled diary.

He described how his camels had bolted with the water supply leaving him perched on the fringe of the desert. He grew weaker and weaker and made friendly overtures signals to the blacks, but they merely peered at him and offered neither food nor water.

"I have fitted armour across my dying stomicher, "as these are their favorite place to spear a man. They are treacherous devils.

Knowing he was armed with a rifle, the blacks waited until he accumbed before stealing what re-mained of his equipment. He was credited with knowing more about central Australia than any other white man.

PLEA FOR UNITY OF LIBERAL PARTY KEYNOTE OF ADDRESSES AT THE LIBERAL CONVENTION

Resolution For a Year's Moratorium On Farm Lands is Passed

ATTACKED METHODS

Liberal Leader States All Must Return to Policies of Adam Beck

By J. P. SANDERSON
(C. P. Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 22.—The curtain went down here yesterday on the annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association. Delegates from all corners of the province returned to their homes after deciding many questions pertinent to the affairs of the party.

A year's moratorium on interest on House properties and farm lands was suggested in a resolution, which was passed at the meeting shortly before closing. It called upon the provincial government to declare a debt holiday for twelve months similar to that put during the war. It would prevent foreclosures against small property holders and farmers. declared Hon. Peter Grey of West York its sponsor, and at the same time protect the assets of the loan companies.

Inevitable Hydro.

Backing up the demands of Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, the association went on record as favoring a judicial investigation, of the administration of the Hydro Electric Commission. The motion, made by Hepburn himself was passed amid cheering, should be conducted in the partisan manner and be sweeping in scope.

In a last minute rush, several resolutions were passed by the association, including one deploring the trade and tariff policies of the Bennett government. But amid the hearty resolutions was a voice that warned the party against being besides resolutions it necessary before it could recognize the conditions of the people of Ontario. Col. A. T. Hunter of Toronto, called for more concrete forms of appeal to the public and suggested establishing a finance committee to study present economic conditions and the future of industry.

In Canada it was a matter of conjecture, said Col. Hunter, in advocating the economic committee.

"If we venerable druids of political life keep mum in committees and passing resolutions we will resemble that other uninteresting animal conspicuous—the grand army of the Republic, historically interesting but exceedingly pathetic," added Col. Hunter.

Need For Unity.

A plea for unity within the ranks of the provincial Liberal party featured an address given here yesterday by Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., the Liberal leader. Admitting he had not experienced "the degree of co-operation to which he is entitled," the provincial Liberal Leader exorted the Ontario Liberal Association to cement the breaks within its ranks and present a united front.

Mr. Hepburn was one of several speakers who addressed a luncheon the closing exercise on the program of the association's annual meeting. Dan Spotton, Toronto, former Minister of Trade and Commerce, making one of his first public appearances since his recent severe illness, also addressed the luncheon on his plea for unity. Some men, declared Mr. Mackenzie, permitted themselves to be "bigger than the party." One of the biggest problems facing the Ontario Liberal party was "bickering and back-biting within its ranks."

A united front was necessary if the Liberal party expected to recapture Queen's Park, proceeded Mr. Hepburn.

"If we can detach the liquor issue from the party we back into power as a united front, I do not think the Conservatives can stand up against the dictatorial rule of the administration at Toronto," he added. He had no intention, he declared, to carry out war against the government forces as suggested by Attorney-General W. H. Price, Mr. Hepburn reiterated.

Retrenchment in government spending would be the main plank in the Liberal party's onslaught against the Ontario government, announced the Provincial leader. We must keep the full searchlight on the doings of the government."

Turning to the appointment of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen as a Commissioner for the Hydro Electric Commission, Mr. Hepburn termed him a "$10,000 paid propagandist" and "I am not attacking Hydro," he hastened to add "but rather the administration of Hydro. We must return to the original idea of Sir Adam Beck—construction and distribution of power at cost."

Separate Charges Against Councillors

Toronto, Oct., Oct. 22.—Defence counsel won another point yesterday at the trial of eight York township figures on charges of conspiracy to defraud and bribery. The charges are based on a total of 16 counts originally but on motion of Peter White, K.C., appearing for one of the accused, Mr. Justice Kelly ruled out the charge of conspiracy. Mr. White sought to have the charge of conspiracy to defraud postponed until after the bribery charges had been heard. This was not allowed, but Justice Kelly decided to separate the charges and hear the conspiracy to defraud count first.

The case is continuing.

EMPLOYER SHOT IN MISTAKE

Hired Man Fired When He Saw Man at Window

Kingston, Oct. 22.—Mistaking his employer for a burglar, a farm hand known as Ali was shot and wounded Bruce Saunderoook, Colborne, Ont., at 1 a.m. on Sunday yesterday. Saunderoook is in hospital with three bullet wounds and wounds in the face.

Fishing Vessel on Fire Near Halifax

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 22.—The small fishing schooner Killarney M., owned by Halifax interests caught fire off the harbor this morning and requested the help of a tug from the Department of Marine. A boat was sent out from Halifax to her assistance.

"The Katherine M.'s position was given as three miles north-east by north of the Sambro lightship. Fire was reported near the dories and were standing by but it was not immediately apparent whether the tug, which was spraying the burning hull with water would be able to save the vessel.

Clergyman "Gets Busy" Collects Cauliflowers

Montreal, Que.—(By The Canadian Press)—A short time ago a Montreal clergyman was in the country when a farmer told him that the market was so glutted with vegetables that it was not worth while harvesting his crop. The clergyman remarked upon the duty of there being such a condition in the country, while he knew that there were thousands of unemployed in the city who would be glad of the crops which the farmers were unable to sell.

"All right," said the farmer, "I will give you the first load of cauliflowers if you will take them away."

The clergyman came right back to the city, rounded up a few cars and method of distribution and eventually reached the Bonaventure Unemployment Relief Committee and got a load to them.

The result was that a number of unemployed men went to the fields where the crops were brought in several loads of cauliflowers to an empty building and from there were were distributed to the needy. Farmers on families went on to vegetable diet the next day.

Flute, Silent in Dark Vault 26 Years, Discourses Music

C. C. Dickens Retrieves Instrument From Dark Recesses

BUILDING STORY

Laid away in a dark vault—alone —with no friendly hands to caress it —no master to breathe within it, and silent to send forth the sweet melody of which it was capable—gone, apparently for ever, the mingling of its silent notes with those of other instruments at pending exquisite harmony—a flute, a lovely flute, has lain during the past twenty-six years on a shelf in an old abandoned vault in the store recently visited by the Sinclair Company. Today, however, after this long period in obscurity and inactivity, it is once more in the lovful hands of its master and, what is pleasure, it is letting forth its silver notes of joy in the tuneful manner of days gone by.

The happy possessor of the long-lost flute is Mr. Charles C. Dickens, who through all these years has never forgotten his favorite instrument, upon which he used to play his part in the leading Belleville orchestra of his day.

Twenty-six years ago, Mr. Dickens was a salesman in the Oak Hall clothing store, which at that time occupied the place of business recently vacated by the Sinclair Company. Business returned one morning from a boat trip to Rochester. It was time to go to work and on reaching the store he placed the flute, which he had taken with him to Rochester, in the vault for safekeeping, intending to take it home that evening. However, after he went by and he neglected going so, within a few weeks' time after his return from Rochester, the Oak Hall business was removed to the store next door and the Sinclair Company took possession of the place, into which they moved from a few doors up Front Street and in which they conducted a very successful business until the time of going out of business a short time ago. In the meantime, one of the new tenants the door of the old vault had become jammed and as Mr. D. V. Sinclair did not desire to make use of it, no serious effort was made to open it. Shelving was erected over the shutting it off to view and in time the knowledge of its existence was forgotten by practically all.

Mr. Dickens, however, had not forgotten, and when alterations now in progress were commenced, he spoke to Mr. Wm. Forth, the contractor, and Mr. Pepper agreed to endeavour to rescue the long lost flute. So it came about that a few days ago—from the depth of darkness, the flute was brought forth into the light after the passing of over a quarter of a century. There was sufficient dampness in the vaults to keep the cornicrib and after a thorough cleaning and polishing it is as good as ever, although it is a little over one hundred years old.

Mr. Dickens is greatly pleased to have his 'old friend' again and at times in the evenings—gentlemanly seated in an easy chair—he plays over the tunes of his instrument and together they travel back in his memory and take their place in the orchestra of twenty-six years ago.

Edison Held Thinking Was Key To Long Life

Inventor in His Rules for Living Said the Brain Must be Kept Busy At Some Interesting Work

New York Oct. 22nd—Edison recorded mental activity as the key to long life, he stated in a letter in 1926 in reply to questions in the New York Times on his rules for daily living.

The questions asked of Edison and his replies were as follows:

Q.—Have you any rule of diet have you followed? A.I reduced my weight to where I thought I should be by diminishing the daily intake of food, and thereafter kept my weight constant by regulating the quantity of food. Not one person in 10,000 will do this.

Q.—Do you believe this "early to bed, early to rise" makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise?" A. This rule appears to be sound.

Q.—Have you ever followed any system of exercise? If exercised? A.—No special exercise is necessary if the food is diminished in proportion to the lessening of the amount of exercise taken.

Q.—Have you found alcohol or tobacco harmful to the system? A.—I think that people should not befuddle their brain with alcohol. It is difficult to think straight with it. Tea, coffee and tobacco apparently have no effect on healthy men when used in moderation.

Q.—Are we living too fast at present to reach a ripe old age? A.—We are living more rapidly. Progress is worked the longer will the average person live. Retiring from an active mental life is a dangerous thing.

Hungary Hangs Man For Robbing a Bank

Alexander Ondi, 21, Who Was Born in Texas, Dies Two Hours After Conviction

Wireless to The New York Times

BUDAPEST, Oct. 22.—Alexander Ondi, 21 years old, who was born in the United States, was hanged here today for robbing a Hungarian bank last March. He was executed at dawn by clock and executed at 6 in the yard of the Palace of Justice, where he was tried.

Joseph Bonya, a fellow-criminal escaped the gallows because of his youth but received fifteen years imprisonment.

Neither bandit had killed, or wounded any one while robbing the bank of $10,000 or during their escape, but were convicted under martial law established in Hungary after the bolshevist regime. Ondi committed the act in May, Today's execution was carried out at Szolnok last month by Miklos Matuskka—who confessed his crime only two days ago in Vienna—and was executed for capital punishment.

Both Hungarians admitted the robbery. Ondi told the court he was uncertain whether he was a Hungarian or American citizen. Bonya said he committed the crime for the purpose of getting into the hands which both bandits wore.

JURY FAILS ON AGREEMENT

Magistrate Maxwell of St. Thomas, Dismissed of Charge

St. Thomas, Ont., Oct. 22.—Action against Magistrate G. F. Maxwell for $50,000 damages, brought by four laborers for alleged false imprisonment, ended last night when the jury failed to reach an agreement. Mr. Justice Rose who charged the jury. The jurymen deliberated for more than five hours.

In his address to the jury, Justice Rose said the evidence indicated that the four men were convicted erroneously. Although they were guilty of breaking and entering, he said, they were not shown to be responsible for the damage to the freight car on the Canadian National Railway in which they were arrested last April 16. He found the case hinged on whether or not the magistrate had acted 'maliciously in sentencing them to two months in jail with recommendations for deportation.

Magistrate Maxwell has been police magistrate for Elgin county for almost 18 years.

Spirited Bids For Swordfish

Glace Bay, N.S.—The business depression has not affected the swordfishing industry, if current quotations offered for the catch of swordfish fleet are any indication of the prosperity of the industry.

A boat with a crew of three aboard recently arrived with six fish, the largest averaging 600 lbs. and for the catch the men aboard this vessel averaged about $80 apiece for the trip.

The arrival of the fleet with fares believed to be the largest of waterfront causes a scene of considerable excitement, spirited bidding takes place between the different dealers, and in a particular last case one hundred dollar bills changed hands no less than three times, to finally sold out in thirteen and one-half cents a pound.

Over a dozen one hundred boats are now engaged in following the swordfish industry here and this number will be increased soon by fleets from the southward. The swordfish are still in deep water the boats having to steam almost 100 miles out of shore to meet with any success.

LEAGUE NOT CLEAR, VAGUE

Soviet Commission Sharp In Criticizes League Documents

Moscow, Oct. 22.—(AP)—Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, sharply criticized, then he called a last of precision and clarity in decisions of the League of Nations in a statement issued to the League Secretariat at Geneva today.

The Tsargran stated that Russia is willing to adhere to the armaments truce suggested by the League. Assembly last September provided other conditions are fulfilled.

"The absence of clarity and precision in the decisions of the League of Nations," Litvinoff declared, "is almost unbelievable." Litvinoff said, "is one of the reasons for the anti-war movement occurring in Manchuria.

"My Government is ready to accept when the necessary clarity and precision has been given to the conditions mentioned, making it clear that all countries shall suspend armaments on an equal footing.

The most beautiful memorial is a fragrant memory. — LeBaron Cooke, writer.

Briand May Demand Jap Withdrawal from Province
Adjournment of Consideration to Nov. 12th Favored
WAITS ON LEAGUE
(By P. L. Lipsey, Associated Press Staff Correspondent)
Geneva, Oct. 22—Aristide Briand, French Foreign Minister and acting President of the League Council, called a public meeting of the council for 4 o'clock this afternoon to consider a report from Japan on the situation at Manchuria. It was on this occasion that the Japanese might decide to approve the proposal and Briand said that the Chinese representative would not be able to accept it without returning it to Nanking.
Japan Waits
Tokyo, Oct. 22 (AP).—Having received and answered the note of the League Council regarding affairs in China and Japan calling attention to their obligations under the Briand-Kellogg peace pact, Tokyo today awaited action from Geneva on the five fundamental points under which Chine to recognize in principle the withdrawal of Japanese troops from Manchuria.
It was announced that Japan had answered the League in a similar note, which was formally delivered by Charge d'Affaires Edwin Wilson, Washington, and sent on by reply to Washington.
Washington Note
The Washington note was understood to be similar to that which, the 13 other signatories of the Briand-Kellogg pact previously had sent.
The five fundamental points, which had been reported to be satisfying with indignation but were also described as a reasonable solution at Geneva, where the League of Nations Council is awaiting the Far Eastern crisis, were announced in Tokyo last night.
1.—Japan and China shall mutually pledge non-aggression and non-interference in territorial integrity.
All forms of anti-Japanese propaganda, including the anti-Japanese boycott, shall be abandoned.
3.—China shall give assurances for the safety of Japanese lives and property in Manchuria.
4.—Japanese troops shall be reached eliminating competition on the railway line in Manchuria.
5.—China shall recognize existing treaty rights, including the question of Japanese and Korean land leases in Manchuria.
Tokyo heard reports that Governor Chang Hsueh-Liang of Manchuria would accept Japan's demands in the hope of interesting Russia in profitable trade with Manchuria, the mercial interests of Manchurian economic consensus in Peiping.

T. A. EDISON LAID TO REST

Buried in Rosedale Amid Flowers and Friends He Loved

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 22.—Thomas A. Edison lay today in a simple grave in the shadow of a great oak tree in Rosedale cemetery.

His burial yesterday belied on the fifty-second anniversary of his perfection of the incandescent lamp.

Last tributes over his body was paid as he lay in the drawing room of the spacious Victorian mansion in which he lived for many years. Surrounding him were the friends and flowers he loved.

Listening in a room upstairs, to which the ceremony came by concealed amplifiers, were his grandchildren, Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone; Mrs. Herbert Hoover; a very few close friends.

At Rosedale cemetery a newly filled grave marked today the resting place of he who was Thomas Alva Edison.

He was buried late yesterday as dusk closed in upon the mourners —the aged widow, who kissed the casket as it was about to be lowered into the grave, then placed upon it a white rosebud; the wife of the President of the United States; close relatives and friends of the inventor, and a few of his longtime laboratory associates.

Four hundred of his friends crowded the drawing room— Mr. Edison always called it "the parlor"—of Glenmont, the Edison home for the simple funeral service in mid-afternoon. The Rev. Dr. Stephen J. Herben read the service and spoke the prayer; and there was music of Bach and Beethoven.

Mrs. Edison, Mrs. Hoover, Henry Ford and Harvey S. Firestone were in the family group in a room upstairs listening to the services which were carried to them by specially installed amplifying apparatus.

The streets leading from the home to the cemetery were crowded with people. State and city police cleared the way.

Mrs. Hoover returned at once to Washington. Mr. Hoover had been unable to attend, held in Washington by pressing affairs of state.

Two elderly mourners at the grave were William H. Meadowcraft, Edison's secretary and companion for fifty years, and Frederick Ott, a brother of Joseph Ott, one of the life-long associates of the inventor.

Both had been at the funeral of Joseph Ott but an hour earlier. They had left school on learning of Mr. Edison's death Sunday morning.

Stirling

ST. PAUL'S ANNIVERSARY

St. Paul's Anniversary services took place on Oct. 18th and 19th. Rev. A. J. Johnston, B.A. D.D. of Victoria College Toronto was the speaker of the day. The Church was tastefully decorated with yellow Mums and ferns. Large congregations both morning and evening greeted the speaker whose discourses were thoughtful and timely. The morning text being "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him" There were three ways in which we could approach Jesus in a pleasing manner that He could apply the text to each of us. Rev. R. W. Rowland presided over the service In the Morning the choir of 25 voices under the direction of G. L. Clute sang an Anthem "God of Mercy" Mrs. Jack Butler sang "The voice in the Wilderness." Messrs Way, Bamforth, Jones and R. Patterson sang "Have you forgotten God" very effectively. An appealing feature of the morning service was the presentation of a beautiful solid leather edition of the New Testament for use on the Pulpit by Mrs. Ernest Morton in memory of her deceased husband.

The evening text was Deut. 33. 18, pertaining to Zebulin and Issachar, and touched on the depression of today.

The Choir rendered two pleasing Anthems, "Miss Rosie Conley sang "Lead Kindly Light"; G. L. Clute sang "Like as a Father" and the Male Quartette together with Miss Betty Conley sang "Where He Leads Me" The Choir rendered again the verses and Miss Conley humming the tune. Miss Conley assisting the Chorus while the quartette hummed it, this was a very interesting number, the voices blending beautifully.

The offering for the day was $1550.00

ST. PAUL'S CHICKEN SUPPER

St. Paul's chicken supper was the best ever; the menu was all that could be desired over three sittings at the tables which were tastefully adorned with candles yellow marigolds, while the people were eating, Rosebush Orchestra augmented by Mr. T. Furnival rendered much appreciated music. At 8.15 p.m. the regular programme was put on which was unique in that there were no speeches by the visiting ministers and as the writer heard one minister say, it was a great relief to sit and listen to the program untrammeled by the thought of what he should say in the line of a speech.

The choir rendered a fine Anthem, "Oh Lord of Hosts" Mrs. Butler taking the solo. Miss Dayman, teacher at Wellman's recited "The lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine" in an impressive way, one could not help thinking that if more such readings were given at our Young Peoples meetings, the temperance problem would be more widely advertised, she was most heartily encored as indeed every number nearly was, also Charlie Allen rendered an Organ Solo "Liebesfreud" which delighted the audience as did a duet by Misses Mina and Izetle Dyacup of Wellman's "Take up thy Cross" Miss Lorraine Scott of Bethel gave a beautiful piano solo "Chopin's Prelude" followed by Betty Conley singing "The Slave Song".

Mrs. E. W. Rowland recited very effectively "David's lament for Jonathan" Mr. Furnival played very sweetly "The lost Chord" this was followed, judging from the applause by the most pleasing number on the program "Sweet and Low" sung by Misses R. Patterson, H. Jones, J. Bamforth and P. Way, the closing number was by the choir "The Day is Past". The contributions for both days were over $1100, and a surplus of $451.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Donnell of Hamilton and Mr. E. T. Williams and Miss Lucy attended the Queens Varsity game in Kingston on Saturday and report of Thanksgiving and a good game 8-3 in favor of Queens.

Miss Marjorie Harrington, B.A. of Wellington, visiting friends in Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rannie of Menie were dinner guests of Miss Hume on Sunday and attended St. Paul's Service.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ingelson, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Meiklejohn and others attended St. Andrew's Burnbrea Anniversary morning service.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Donnell of Hamilton, former editor of the "News Argus" spent a few days this week-end with Mr. E. T. Williams.

Little Misses Helen and Amy McTaggart, formerly of Thomasburg are staying with Mrs. T. M. Matthews for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hay of Campbellford spent Thursday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. John Stiles they were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stiles who spent the afternoon with Mrs. R. W. Meiklejohn and others.

Miss Emma Meiklejohn and Charlie Allen motored to Kingston on Tuesday to see Rev. R. C. Tait or St. John's Church. Campbellford who is seriously ill in Kingston General Hospital.

The Masonic Order put on a very successful banquet on Thursday evening for which St. Andrew's Church catered in their usual efficient manner.

False Advertising Charge Sustained

Toronto, Oct. 22—Convicted of false advertising, the firm of G. Thaddeus Hall, operating a chain of drug stores in Ontario centres, was fined $300 and costs by Judge Emerson Coatsworth.

Prosecution of the company followed appearance of an advertisement in which wedding rings "originally sold for $5.00" were offered for sale for 98 cents. Evidence submitted by Crown Attorney Alfred Shaver was that the rings were admitted into Canada at a value of six and a half cents each.

3 YEARS IMPOSED

Unique Event On "Old Ironsides"

Providence, R. I., Oct. 22.—To the small list of names of Rhode Islanders whose forefathers once sailed on the frigate Constitution, add that of Mrs. George F. Sawyer of 22 Fort Avenue, Edgewood. Perhaps no one in the entire United States shares the distinction Mrs. Sawyer holds. Her grandmother was born on Old Ironsides during the time her great-grandfather was sailing master of the famous warship.

It happened during the period when the Constitution was at the Washington Navy Yard, prior to the War of 1812. Mrs. Sawyer's great-grandfather, and father of the baby born on Old Ironsides was Nathaniel Harriden, who was sailing master of the Constitution from November, 1799 to February, 1805. He was on board the historic craft during the bombardment of Tripoli forts held by the Barbary pirates. He was made a Lieutenant on March 3, 1807 and Commander on April 27, 1818. He died on January 9, 1819.

Harriden's daughter, who was Mrs. Sawyer's grandmother, used to tell her own children of the circumstance of her birth aboard America's most famous man-of-war. It happened when Mrs. Sawyer's great-grandmother was on board the Constitution attending her officers' ball. The master is explained now as being unbelievable, for attendance at officers' balls in in Washington has always been a social compulsion. No officer's wife would decline to attend such an affair if able to walk.

Mrs. Sawyer, whose home is on Pawtuxet Neck overlooking the bay, has a prized oil painting of his grandmother, the remarkable Harriden baby, painted when she was a middle-aged woman. The picture hangs in a room of Mrs. Sawyer's house, facing the water.

Tulsa World States Charles Curtis Will Become President

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 22—A report that Vice-President Charles Curtis might resign to become czar of the American oil industry was reiterated last night by the Tulsa World, despite a Curtis statement at Washington that the story was "pure nonsense."

The World said it had "information direct and reliable" that the vice-president would resign before Christmas"—if the American Petroleum Institute approved the plan at its annual meeting next month.

19 Churches Leave "Regular" Union

Toronto, Oct. 22—A total of 19 churches were named yesterday as having ceased to co-operate with the union of Regular Baptist Churches of Ontario and Quebec, when Rev. W. E. Atkinson, secretary, at the annual convention of the organization, included in the list seven, six of which formerly belonged to the union are Hiawatha, Orchard Church, St. Thomas, Ont.; Oxford Street, Woodstock; and Hope, London, Ont.

Their loss was "by no means a deadly blow," said Rev. Dr. T. T. Shields, president of the union and minister of Jarvis Street Church here. "It seems to me we are in a better position to carry on the work of the Lord" he said.

NEARLY LOST JOB

Berlin, Oct. 22 (AP)—Keeping his uniform trousers in pawn for nearly four month nearly cost Recruit Sergeant Ictor Lehmann his job.

He managed to get along by borrowing trousers from colleagues who happened to be off duty—until one day the whole police force was called out. The sergeant had to report in civilian trousers and was dismissed immediately.

THE WEATHER.
Moderate southerly winds, fair and warm; Saturday, generally windy, mostly fair and warm; probably a few light scattered showers.

Tension Eases in Island After Series of Riots

Nicosia, Island of Cyprus, Oct. 23 (AP)—Seven planes of the British Royal Air Force arrived here today, bringing one hundred and fifty soldiers from Egypt to assist in putting down the Cyprian revolt. The distance of five hundred miles was flown in seven and a half hours.

The arrival of the troops and determined action by land authorities had the effect of easing the tensity of the situation and Governor Sir Ronald Storrs said he considered the situation was now well in hand and further reinforcements would be unnecessary.

Additional troops which were ready to leave Cairo, Egypt, will not be brought here, he said. Motor trucks left with provisions for military posts in various parts of the island today and were not disturbed.

The cruiser London arrived at Kyrenia today and the cruiser Shropshire at Limasol. The destroyer Acasta was at Paphos and the Achates at Famagusta. It was not expected that any more vessels would be sent here.

HOW TIMES CHANGE

One hundred and fifty years ago, Lord Cornwallis, leader of England's redcoats in the United States Revolution, was about the most unpopular man on this continent. But here's another Lord Cornwallis, descendant of the famous general, who has been welcomed to the United States to participate in the sesquicentennial of the British surrender at Yorktown, Va. The distinguished visitor is shown wearing the insignia of his rank as Deputy Grand Master of the Masonic Order in England while visiting a Philadelphia lodge.

UNDERTAKER CLAIMS BODY

Letter Tells Story of Suicide Plan of F. Tremaine

Hamilton, Oct. 23.—The following letter was received this morning by G. G. Guernsey, funeral director:

"Dear Sir—Will you claim my body and see to the funeral? I want to be buried at Stratford—Frederick Tremaine, 66 Dundurn street east."

Mr. Guernsey communicated with the police after reading the letter and hastened to the address given. The front door of the house was open. Hanging by a rope from the bannister was the body of Mr. Tremaine.

The letter was written and posted around six o'clock last night, and doctors believe Mr. Tremaine had been dead for about ten hours. He had evidently sent the message and then carried out his plans to take his own life. Police are investigating. Mr. Guernsey says that Tremaine had been known to him for many years, and was a man of means. He was about 75 years of age.

Goodwill Ship from Down South Reaches St. Lawrence

Australian Ambassadors of Trade Come With Ship

PREMIER TO SPEAK

Quebec, Que., Oct. 23 (CP)—Laden with a varied assortment of Australian goods, the Goodwill ship Canadian Constructor was reported on her way up the St. Lawrence River today and will probably be due late this afternoon. The vessel has been Australia's Trade Emissaries who will demonstrate the Australian cargo to Canadian buyers as part of the scheme to broaden trade between the two Dominions.

Premier Bennett will speak from his office in Ottawa to the directors of the vessel upon his bridge by means of radio telephone as the Canadian Constructor nears Quebec. The voice of the Premier over the latter will carry an official welcome to the goodwill ship and her Ambassadors of Trade and Commerce.

Among the passengers on the boat are many gifts to Canada. The kangaroos are reported to be good sailors, withstanding the long sea voyage from Brisbane with forbearance. The ship left Brisbane on September 10.

After a brief visit in Quebec the vessel will proceed to Montreal. Though the Australian trade commissioners will leave the boat here and travel to Montreal by train to attend a dinner there tonight.

Flight As Memorial To Five Dead Air Heroes

Rome, Oct. 23. (AP)—In memory of the five men who died during an Italian formation flight to South America last winter General Italo Balbo plans to head a squadron of planes from Orbetello to Bolamo, Portuguese West Africa, in December. On December 6 the day he and his pilots will be at Bolamo to dedicate a monument to the five men who were killed there last January 6 in the takeoff of the South American fleet.

8 Million British Electors Bewildered With Many Issues

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

London, Oct. 23. — Five million Liberal electors will decide election day, next Tuesday, with bewilderment.

In the last parliament the Liberals held the balance of power in the new parliament, their vote may large ly determine the character of it, and its attitude towards the vital issue of tariffs.

Yet there never was such a confusion of Liberal voices as in the campaign now rapidly drawing to a close. There are the National Liberals, definitely pledged to support the National Government. There are the Liberals in action who are pledged by hostile to the government, or else pledged to neutrality, in the election by supporting it. There are some Liberals in the Simon Simon Lord Liberal Protectionists. Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, titular leader of the party, completed by ill health his campaign by radio and records, is left with little more than a family group.

In 213 constituencies Liberals—of all shades of opinions as to tariffs—will vote to choose between Conservative and Labor candidates in straight fights.

Trucks of Same Firm in Accident

An accident occurred on the Belleville-Trenton highway, about two miles east of Trenton, Friday morning about nine o'clock. Two trucks driven by employees of the Winters Transport Company, of St. Catharines, were involved. The trucks were en route from St. Catharines to Montreal travelling together.

C. Foxwell became tired of driving behind his partner and decided to take the lead. In doing so his truck skidded to the left from side of the front truck with the result that it turned into a ditch about four feet deep, on front of the truck going up the bank, leaving the rear end in the road. The driver of this truck was Thomas Bulger of Port Colborne.

Foxwell, seemingly ignorant of having put his partner in the ditch and the car was greatly damaged when he was overtaken about three miles east on the highway by Constable Evans of the city police, and informed that he had crossed the double white line. The driver of the truck was Thomas Bulger of Port Colborne.

Dust and Gas Fumes Cause T. B., Cancer?

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 22.—Cancer, the scrawl of cities, filled with dust and automobile exhaust gas, was considered today as possibly contributing to tuberculosis and cancer of the lungs, speakers at the International Assembly of the Interstate Post Graduate Medical Association, said today.

"Personally I think there is a high incidence among automobile mechanics," he said. "Another theory is that lung cancers are the aftermath of "flu" epidemic in 1918. There are several types of these cancers. They can be cured if treated early enough."

MANY TRADES ARE MOOTED IN THE MAJORS

Chicago Cubs Will Let Hack Wilson and Pat Malone Drift

CARDS ARE SET

World Champions May Make Minor Changes Before Next Season

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 23.—Football holds the stage as most headlines these days by night of ancient precedent but baseball, rumored beyond by no pro football season of the year.

Trades, trades and line-up changes have been made—or paper—in the baseball world more of late than the sixteen major managers actually made in the whole season.

Perhaps with good reason, most of the rumours have involved the Chicago Cubs, who acknowledge Rogers Hornsby as boss. Picked to finish anywhere in the National League race last season, the Cubs finished a disappointing third behind the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Giants.

Cubs Make Announcement

Hornsby and the Cubs' owner, Will Ham Wrigley, jointly have announced that Hack Wilson has played his last game in a Cub uniform and that pudgy outfielder has been on the block ever since his suspension when out pay for breaking training rules. Pat Malone, the big right hander from central Pennsylvania, is another whose name will be in the figures in the outfield.

Hornsby has his eye on Chuck Klein and Pinky Whitney of the Phillies but has small hopes of landing either one. The Phillies have announced definitely that Klein is not for sale. Hornsby would take Babe Herman for Wilson if he could get him and he'll jump at a chance to get Ed Brandt of the Braves for Malone. There's been talk of a trade involving Malone and Dazzy Vance but indications are the Cubs aren't keen about it.

In addition to Brandt, the Braves have another pitcher several clubs could use, Fred Frankhouse. The Giants particularly are interested and so is Barnsby.

Cards Are Set.

The champion Cardinals apparently are pretty well set for another year although third base may prove a problem child for long. The Cards' leak are grooming Burgess White-head from Columbus as an eventual successor to Frankie Frisch at second base and the pitching staff won't be harmed by the addition of Dizzy Dean, Tex Carleton and Ray Starr who, among them, accounted for sixty-six victories in the minors in 1931.

One of the most interesting prospects in the American League is Frank Crosetti, who batted .345 with San Francisco. He'll try to land the shortstop berth with the New York Yankees.

Washington is looking for a hard-hitting outfielder and might be willing to use Bumps Hanney or Joe Juego to get him. On the other hand, Johnny Gill from Baltimore may fill the bill.

If Charley Oberinger's arm fails to return to normal he may be shifted from second base to first with Big Dale Alexander going into the outfield where Bump Hadley is now.

Still searching for batting punch, the Boston Braves have picked up Oscar Eckhardt from the Missions, where he hit a tidy .366. Art Shires also will be wearing a Brave uniform next season and probably will be the regular first baseman in place of Earl Sheely.

BOSTON READY FOR FIRST TITLE CONTEST SINCE 1900

Boston, Mass., Oct. 23—Boston's first championship bout since 1926 is slated for the Boston Garden tonight, appeared today to resolve itself into a battle between stamina and luck and experience and clever hitting.

Young Jack Thompson, of Chicago, welterweight champion of the world, had the experience and cleverness on his side of the ledger. The challenger, Lou Brouillard of Danielson, Conn., seemed physically the more fit.

Brouillard, who has yet to take part in a 15-round fray, was the favorite before the weigh-in. His victory over Thompson here several months ago had much to do with the way the odds went, but "lady luck," who always seems in stick by the challenger in Boston champion-ships, played no small part in the betting. Then again, Brouillard has nothing to lose and everything to gain.

Thompson has been bothered with his weight and has had to work hard on the road to take it off. Today he appeared capable of putting on a fast battle, however, and seemed in fine condition. His boxing is excellent but he has taken his grim work rather lightly during the training period.

Those who claim to know believe that Thompson will find Brouillard eager to hit but hard to knock out and there lay the advantages of each.

BIG GAMES OF GRID SEASON ARE IN EAST

McGill Engages Queen's At Richardson Stadium Saturday

VARSITY WEAKENED

Hamilton Tigers Have a Stiff Proposition With Winged Wheelers

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP)—With the two major football attractions of the week end cancled for the east, when the mighty Hamilton Tigers tackle the greatly improved M.A.A.A. aggregation in Montreal and the strong McGill College squad meets the Kingston battle Queen's, rugby enthusiasts of Toronto and district will have to be content to watch less important fixtures Saturday.

Hamilton Tigers wound up their training for Saturday's fixture in the Eastern city last night when Coach Lionel Hughes sent his starts through a gruelling but hour practice drill against the Hamilton O.R.F.U. entry. One of the largest crowds of the season is expected to be on hand to watch the winged wheelers battle the champions for the big four leadership. The two three players will make the trip with the squad and Coach Coach Hughes has intimated he will field his strongest team against the Montreal squad.

Varsity Handicapped

A number of familiar faces will be missing from the Toronto Varsity lineup Saturday, when the local college aggregation tackles Western University of London. Not less than three of the blue and white regulars will be missing when Coach Harry Hobbs selects his team on the field. Harold Wilson will be out with an infected toe. Don Wood will not be able to play on account of illness and Moe Charney is unlikely to get into the game. The Varsity gridders must win Saturday's game to remain in the running for the College title.

Twenty eight players were in uniform last night when Coach Alex Ponton halted the balmy beach. Dominion champions, squad workout under the floodlights, in preparation for a couple of rugged who were watching the drill from a distance. Captain Joe Cummings would be the only absentee, when the Beaches meet Kitchener-Waterloo Rangers on Saturday.

Joe Breen, mentor of the Westerners, stated yesterday aggregation sent his team through a three hour last night in an effort to get round the squad into excellent shape for Saturday's game in Toronto. A light signal drill this evening will conclude the Londoners workouts before they meet the Hard Varsity.

Satisfied that his players are in excellent shape following a stiff week's training programme, Coach "Buck" McKenna, of Argonauts, confidently for Ottawa tonight.

WEEK-ENDS

Mrs. Beeckman: — Do you it is polite to write a guest the hour of arriving and leaving, you are inviting him or her to you? Of course, I realize that ay it is most convenient to tell guest the "best trains" on which arrive, so that plans may be made meeting the train, and so forth. it does seem to me that to tell guests when they are expected ave is a bit "queer". Don't you?

—Justine.

o, frankly, I don't think that this ld be "queer" or the least bit polite or unmannerly. As a matter of fact, I think that it is most ible and reasonable, and saves the guest and the hostess all the embarrassment. Many busy and especially those who entertain a great deal, make this their rule when inviting guests to visit. Usually in this done in week-end itations, for the term "week- ," well you know, is rather indefinite, meaning anything from urday to Tuesday or Saturday Monday morning. Any ests, I should think, would welcome the invitation as to the hour ice of the particular week-end to which they are invited.

course, this extreme definite- does not always apply to long its (although it sometimes does), does it apply usually to the invitations of close relations friends, where each under- nds that the margins of the visit to be gauged by the convenience the hostess. It is wise thing for the hostess of many week-ends to say, "I will you, come to us for week-end of July second to the ." We are asking some friends spend the week-end with us and we ult very much to have you come. I am expecting to Marysville Friday, leaving Blank City at two clock and arriving here at four clock. Can you plan to take that, or would you have some congenial minds on the train, for several whom you know are coming that train. And you need not ry about getting back to town in time for dinner on Tuesday, for re is an excellent train that Marysville at nine o'clock, dis- arding every station until it rives yourself. Do make us happy saying that you will be with us."

TELEPHONE ETIQUETTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: — If Mrs. calls up Mrs. Brown on the phone who should be the one to say "goodbye" to end the conversation?

—E.

Mrs. Smith should be the one to end the conversation. Since it was who started the conversation, she should be the one to give the signal to end it. Mrs. Smith's object in wishing to speak to Mrs. Brown might be frustrated by an end being put to the conversation before she had really finished what she had to say.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

Our Older Children

by Constance Cameron

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

I've tried for years to figure out just why mothers and fathers plan and draw back with such utterly confused expressions when daughter gets her first love letter from the lad she met at the fraternity dance or when son (for once) sees that his neck is quite clean, adjusts his best tie, and tries nonchalantly to saunter out some bright evening.

I have the parents I tried in a secret hope that the youngsters were always going to stick to compliance of their own ace, or always adhere to the friendly fireside for all their amusements? If so, what is to be the fate of the future youngsters and home firesides—if any?

There seems to be two attitudes toward the first so-called "love affair"—for want of a more accurate name—of adolescents. In one family, especially if there are other children, the victim of attraction for one of the opposite sex gets teased and reminded of it until all meetings, all thoughts, are securely inhibited only to be taken out and threshed over in the seclusion of one's own room.

In the other family—well, to state it briefly, hare's an example: The mother has for years remarked in front of her daughter "Elsie is an outdoor girl. She doesn't care for boys, and dancing, and parties, and I'm so glad." Elsie is so clean and sweet. Elsie regards her mother with a peculiar expression and goes on living —if it weren't such a conventional expression—a double life. For she tries to keep mother thinking she's utterly indifferent, while in her heart she wants, and gets, attention from the other sex. Here is an unnatural state of affairs. Here is a situation which creates a feeling of shame in the girl. And there should be no shame attached to a wholesome mingling of boys and girls.

It is natural. It is right that boys and girls should find each other attractive, and the parent who stresses this relationship with yoke or evil denies it, entirely, is building very surely a feeling of shame and an aptitude for subterfuge in the minds of his adolescent children.

Mingling of boys and girls is a natural, wholesome relationship unless tampered with by older people. Help the child to keep it lovely and calm and free from self-conscious ness.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Go to the theatre and if you are not in evening clothes wear a little dinner frock and a wrap to match. One of the newest is of jet bugle beads sewn on black net. A double paradise swirl is placed at the side against the cheek.

Nearly but not quite formal is a short-sleeved slender dress in navy sheer crepe in white with a delicate tracery of gold threads scattered all over it. Both the hem and the edge of the short sleeves are banded with kolinsky fur.

It is right to wear the long wrap for winter evening functions, no matter how short your frock may be. But who would object to a long, slinky wrap of black velvet with a curved border at the hem of white fox fur. There is also a short fitted shoulder cape, trimmed with fox and lined with white satin.

It should be forbidden to use trimming on a multi-colored lame frock since it is so rich and colorful in itself. A new lame model combines green, red and gold in a Persian pattern. There is a fishtail train and a pointed back peplum.

The stately home needs stately clothes. Ideal for a hostess at an important party would be an evening frock of luscious white transparent velvet with blue seamings continuing into a long train. The decolletage both back and front is outlined with straas.

A degree of smartness for the college girl would be earned by the student wearing an evening frock of white taffeta with a deep decolletage cut square at the base, puffed sleeves and ruffled tiers at the back.

Problem Girls

"Problem girls" exist aplenty and by that term I include all female youngsters who are wayward, incorrigible, given to sex transgressions, stealing and all the other traits that go with bad character.

Less pronounced cases also exist. Many families have to contend with daughters who display no definite criminal or vicious tendencies yet who are wilful and disobedient, who lie, display undue independence, or otherwise create what, for want of a better term, one designates as a problem.

"Keeping bad company" is a ready reason given for all problem girls and there is a lot of truth in it too. Girls are liad yto be susceptible and readily swayed by the glittering show. They like men who can please them. They want to outdo their girl friends also.

The love of finery, particularly clothes, is a tremendous factor in shaking girls stray from the time proverbial "straight and narrow path." For all women love self-adornment. Often they will go to any length to be dressed in fashion. And particularly is this true of girls who have been deprived of variety in clothes before they had to work or because of their extreme youth.

The problem girl is not necessarily one of abnormal mentality. A girl whose mind does not function like the average, who is suffering from defect of the brain, cannot be expected to think and behave in accordance with accepted social and moral standards.

A mentally defective girl, in other words, may be an incurable liar, she may steal, she may be wayward. But the point is that she may steal, lie, and commit other transgressions and still be mentally normal.

It is a mistake to consider all problem girls mentally defective. If a girl's immorality or criminality is caused by mental deficiencies, then her behavior will never improve. Hundreds of problem girls, however, have no mental defects. The emotional maladjustments are caused largely and primarily by lack of emotional training.

It must be remembered that adolescence, the period when most of the "problem girls" appear, is a time when all sorts of emotional upheavals make secret. The girl has her reasons differently than she did during the days of her first bust.

Impulses never before noted—and brought about through psychological changes in the glandular within her body—lead her to yearn for the com panionship of the opposite sex. She finds she is stirred readily by anything that is forbidden, especially taboo. She wants to be a "good sport" and go around with the crowd, for such carousing appears to her as the height of being "grown up."

On the other hand, and pulling her in an opposite direction, are all the principles in which living and moral conduct taught her by her parents and teachers for years. The world says, "Don't repress; let yourself go and have a good time." Her training says, "Hold yourself in check."

What the intellectually normal problem girl needs, as she needs bread, is systematic character drills. She must also be taught, self-censorship pays in the long run anyway. Youth is inherently good—not bad and vicious. Make it possible for it to act always that you have faith in her. Never accuse her of being mentally abnormal.

In cases where nothing helps, and the problem girl becomes an ever-increasing problem, the advice of a psychiatrist should be sought. This is for the girl's own good. One owes it to the girl herself.

MOURNING WARDROBE

"A death occurred in our family and I had to go in mourning. I could hardly afford to buy all black clothes, so decided to dye what I had. I consulted one druggist and he advised using Diamond Dyes. Everything black and beautiful—coats, wool dresses, stockings and all. I have since learned to appreciate the excellence of the black Diamond Dyes. I tried another black dye and the results were impossible. I had to get Diamond Dyes and do the work over. Recently I have tinted my curtains a beautiful raspberry shade and dyed a rug to match with Diamond Dyes. They are real money savers—the finest dyes money can buy—I truly believe."

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

One nice feature any girl can have, and that's eyes. No matter what the shape, what the color, if she puts twinkles in them, softens their expression with warm human feelings, her face will be illuminated and will carry an element of beauty. Eyes talk; make witty speeches, offer sympathy, send messages of affection, carry on all sorts of nice ways. The brain and the heart are motors that work them. Intelligence and kindliness are eye tonics, better than anything to be bought at the drug store. They are the fires that light soul lamps.

Can you make your mind a blank. If so, you will be able to reap beauty benefits of complete relaxation. Never let unpleasant thoughts mill around before going to sleep; sleep will not be restful if it is impossible to think of nothing; at all, one can have a kaleidoscope reflection by installing pleasant ones, memories of happy holidays, smiles some lovely spot; the sandman will come along in a hurry.

Oily skins won't shine out like good deeds in a naughty world if a good powder base is applied and frictioned in well before make-up is put on. You can buy them. They are related to the vanishing creams of war time. Not greasy. Dry quickly.

Make powder stick like a friend and a brother. Cold cream should be used for their removal.

Flabbiness under the skin is a crushing beauty woe. Tissues have gone to pot skin surface too loose. The plastic surgeon can take tucks in it, but he wants money, heap big money. Cold water is the first requisite. Pat it on morning and night with a bath spray, being careful not to chill the fingers. There will be a rush of blood to the throat which will lighten up sagging flesh. Fasting treatment are an aid.

Heavy, overpowering perfumes stamp the user as a woman who is lacking in fastidiousness. She puts the public nose under a strain which isn't nice of her. Choose perfumes with discretion.

Astronomers use the spectroscope to detect the substance of which tar are made.

Stiffness in neck muscles, with the aching, "pulling" pain commonly relieved by RADIUS BENGUE (pronounced Ben-Gay).

Applied freely, rubbed in well, and covered with flannel, the powerful ingredients penetrate deeply into the tissues, loosening congestion, easing spasm, soothing irritated nerves, bringing rest and comfort. Good for every ache and pain. Insist upon the original

Facts

Concerning the World's Best Tonic Food Beverage

YOUR health is too important for you to take risks by drinking any haphazard mixture of food ingredients. You want a food beverage which will be perfect and complete, and which you can rely upon to give health and strength.

The Essential Food Elements

A perfect food beverage must contain proteins, fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts and vitamins. Scientists claim that these vital elements are contained most abundantly in malt, milk and eggs. That is why these wonderful foods of Nature form the constituents of "Ovaltine". Malt extract is used, for powdered malt does not yield the same food value or exert the same digestive power. Pure fresh milk is used. Dried milk is not good enough for "Ovaltine". The eggs are obtained from specially selected sources. 12,500,000 fresh eggs are used each year.

Proteins are obtained from all three ingredients. There are several proteins—all of which are necessary. Milk does not give them all, but a combination of malt, milk and eggs, as in "Ovaltine", supplies them. Fats are contained in the milk and eggs. Carbohydrates are present in the malt and milk. These are natural sugars and are far superior to cane sugar.

Mineral salts—iron, calcium and phosphorus—are derived from the milk and eggs. No nerve-restoring food would be complete without lecithin, which is derived from egg-yolk—hence the importance of fresh eggs in "Ovaltine". Vitamins—owing to the combination of malt, milk and eggs—are all contained in "Ovaltine" and are present in correct ratio.

Correctly Balanced Nourishment

Not only must a perfect food beverage contain all these elements but they must be supplied in correct proportions and in the most readily assimilable form, as in "Ovaltine". It is easily digested because it contains no starch or added sugar. It is flavoured with cocoa—not chocolate. It is emphasized that it nourishes the system normally without causing "fatness".

Avoid So-Called Substitutes

Your common sense will tell you that ordinary malt or cocoa drinks, without real scientific preparation, cannot possibly compare with "Ovaltine". You cannot make these comparisons. Are they made from malt extract as in "Ovaltine" or powdered malt? Is the milk fresh milk as in "Ovaltine" or dried milk? If they contain eggs are they new laid as in "Ovaltine" or merely dried eggs? Consider carefully if these substitutes are sweet in flavour, whether you are not paying an enormous price for sugar, which if necessary you can add yourself. "Ovaltine" contains no added sugar, but only the natural sugars contained in two of the ingredients—malt and milk.

Economical in Use

"Ovaltine"—although so superior in food value—is low in price and the most economical in use of all forms of concentrated nourishment. Make delicious "Ovaltine" your daily beverage—it is acknowledged to be the best means of giving and maintaining health, strength and vitality.

"Ovaltine" is sold at all stores in air-tight tins, at 50c, 75c, $1.25 and $4.50 (special family size).

NO COLLAPSE SAYS SCHWAB

Restrained Cheerfulness Upon Future of Business is Mood

New York, Oct. 22.—"Restrained cheerfulness" is the mood of the business featured the address of Charles M. Schwab today at the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute here.

Although recognizing that "we have a real depression," the speaker declared the country had been through "perilous periods" in times past and had always emerged to a prosperity greater than ever before. He believed that "history will repeat itself." Mr. Schwab is president of the institute.

"Fear has been removed," he said "there will be no collapse. The forces of credit have been modified and we shall pull through. I see signs of it. The country is not going to be overwhelmed by the failure of a few institutions. Although, he said "every one is selling better," Mr. Schwab warned he must not accept hard facts with our own business and the industrial world as they are. He said the last meeting that the tide was turning in certainty was that it proved to be a tidal wave.

"Our production this year will be about 35,000,000 tons of ingots, or 7 per cent. under what was expected.

"This change in conditions reaches us an important lesson. As a matter of fact this country was in the upward move last spring. Production rose 10 per cent. daily from the first of the month. Then came the breakdown of finance. In Central Europe which spread to Great Britain and brought vicious repercussions upon our country.

"The lesson is that we cannot longer ignore the economy of other countries."

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 22.—Standard Stock and Mining Exchange closed in a slightly irregular appearance in the forenoon today, with gains in the majority at mid-day. After a brief rally the afternoon fell off towards noon.

Base metals were an early feature, moving above $16 in the first half hour and holding that level at noon for a net gain of 50 points. Consolidated advanced 20c to $11, six-eighth reporters being sidelined in seven of a definite curtailment measures arising out of the New York Preparedness Conference.

Dome was under pressure and lost 50 to $10 when selling by Lake Shore and Wright Hargreaves featured much of the trading in golds. Hollinger regained 5 to 46 of York Knit Mines.

Among cheaper issues Kirkland Lake Bay turned over at 85 for quick advance. No obvious news demand being credited to a move involving the Bay property there. LIFELESS TONE TO STOCK MARKETS

Toronto, Oct. 22.—(Noon)—A lifeless market, with neither color nor tone, characterized Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. The local market was waiting on New York for an indication regarding a general trend and in the absence of definite developments in Wall Street merely remained stationary.

There were not many stocks called and only a light volume of business was transacted in those which did come up.

Noranda was if the outstanding issue from the point of advance, rising approximately 1 point to 16. Hamilton Steel made another 1-3 point gain, selling up to 18 3-4 but on a very light turnover.

Other issues were unchanged to a minimum fraction higher. C.P.R. at 16 3-8 was unchanged, as were Massey-Harris at 2 1-8, Gypsum at 3, Watson at 1 3-4, Canada Bud at 3, Brazilian, Nickel, Cockshutt Plow, B. A. Oil and International Petroleum showed small but unimportant gains. Supertest was firm.

STOCK MART INDECISIVE

Market Encounters Difficult Going After Early Hours

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
(Associated Press Financial Editor)

New York, Oct. 22.—The stock market seemed more willing to adjust itself to the declining today, but trading was in slim volume, and price trend narrow and indecisive.

Confidence expressed by executives attending the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and the mildly cheerful tone of the steel trade journalistic reviews, tended to brighten market sentiment.

The market put its best foot forward at the start, the decline being considered difficult going. Early gains of one to two points were largely lost by mid-day, but a slow advance set in during the afternoon, and advances were registered. Shares showing advances of one to more than two points included Consolidated Telephone, American Can, American Smelting, U. S. Steel, Sears Roebuck, New York Central, Chesapeake and Ohio, and Union Pacific. Industrial Alcohol was a strong spot, rising 4 points with a sustaining most of its advance. As the morning advanced, nickel plate lost five, and unchanged at 10.

The Weekly Mercantile Review spoke of further improvement in retail and wholesale trade, and maintenance of the better tone recently evident. With the exception of coal, however, the heavier industries remain quiescent.

Make Hen Tell If She Had Laid Egg

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 23.—A contraption on display at an inventor's congress here will, if its designers are correct, make a hen to tell whether she has laid an egg.

It is a trap nest with a double cat. If she enters and does not lay an egg, the hen must go out through the exit, leading to a pen set aside for non-layers.

If the egg is forthcoming, the second exit opens and allows her to depart to a pen for the laying hens.

LAVAL BOWS BEFORE TOMB

Premier of France Later Enters Parley on World Crisis

Washington, D.C., Oct. 26 (AP)—Premier Laval bowed his head in solemn tribute before the tomb of the unknown soldier in beginning this day that will end with the return of President Hoover of ways of easing the world's burdens.

On the cold gray field in Arlington cemetery, the spokesman for France laid a wreath and spoke for him—words told in red roses, chrysanthemums, white lilacs and ferns.

In the forenoon, too, he visited the capital and paid respects to Vice President Curtis.

Secretary of State Chief Justice Hughes and Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson also were on the morning programme, followed by luncheon at the French embassy. Then he and his young daughter were invited as guests beneath the White House roof for the night. No formal agenda is set for the talks between President and the Premier.

CHINA AGREES WITH DRAFT

Briand Resolution Calls For Direct Negotiations

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 23 AP—Dr. Alfred Sze, China's representative on the League of Nations council, informed the body tonight that his government accepts the draft resolution presented yesterday by Aristide Briand as a basis for restoring peace in Manchuria.

The Briand proposals requested the Chinese and Japanese governments to begin direct negotiations with a view to arranging details of evacuation of Manchuria by Japanese troops.

It recommended also that China pledged the security of Japanese lives and property in Manchuria and suggested establishment of a permanent conciliation commission through which both governments could deal with problems arising from the present difficulty.

Kenichiro Yoshizawa told the council yesterday that his government could not accept any time limit on the evacuation of Manchuria although M. Briand proposed that all Japanese troops be withdrawn to the railway zone by Nov. 16 when the council will meet again.

Stocks of Wheat In Australia Light

Ottawa, Oct. 23 (CP)—Australia, as a result of the extensive trade with the United States in the past year, holds very light stocks of the present time and will not be an important factor in the world wheat market until the new crop is harvested in December. The International Institute of Agriculture in Rome has calculated the surplus of the 1931 Australian acreage in the region of 15,000,000 acres which compares with 18,000,000 acres sown to wheat in 1930. This factor should reduce the quantity of wheat produced in Australia this year, says the monthly review of the wheat situation issued yesterday.

"I'll give you all the time you need, Bob. Even if the worst happens you won't be kept under detention until the trial comes. But don't let your men try a rescue. That will only mean bloodshed. And after that, God knows Meanwhile, spend the night with me at camp, and tomorrow I'll go to Verdi with you. Verdi," he repeated slowly. "I wish to God I'd never seen it."

"Softly," admonished Don Bob, and rubbed the velvet ear of his horse. "Remember what the Spanish proverb says: 'The work is with us, the event with God.' Who does knows what still lies ahead, for good or evil?"

CHAPTER XXXII

The sun had passed high noon on the following day, when, powdered with alkali, Bob and the major reached the Verdi reservation. Ted had driven in from the ranch and was sitting on the shady porch of the commandant's home, with Aunt Clara and Adela.

Even before the major had taken off his spurs his wife read some vague, troubling message in the air. She linked her arm in his, and with quick anxiety scanned the major's worn face, but wise with the wisdom of years, she only said: "Come and sit down, you two. Lunch is on its way." Blount kissed her.

"I'm going inside and take a long drink of brandy, dear," he told her. Then he left them.

On the porch Aunt Clara turned to Bob. "What's wrong? Here, don't veil our light out of mine."

Adela held a match. With a sigh of weariness Bob sank back into the chair that Ted had brought forward. "You spoil me, you three. You make me entirely too comfortable."

But Aunt Clara would not be put off. "Tell me what's the matter, or I'll go and pry it from the major," she warned.

"I wonder if you could," Bob considered. "Yes, I suppose you could, but I'd rather tell you myself. I know you can't. I'm only telling you what your departure will would do."

"I still believe his only hope is to get Sandra's help." Blount said at last. "Sandra has nothing to lose by his revenge. She has now what can dictate his own terms. He can buy Bob, go fishing a week, and come back with renewed energy to hunt my son down. Yes, dear, I know you can't. I'm only telling you what your departure will would do."

"You'd let him escape? It's the one thing I can't do, of course," the major said.

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Belle

LAUREL AND HARDY'S SONG AND DANCE ACT

That stage experience is beneficial to screen actors is proved by Laurel and Hardy in "Pardon Us," their first feature-length comedy, now at the Belle Theatre.

Their past experience behind the footlights aided them greatly in making this film. Both were called upon to display their stage talents in the form of singing and dancing. An additional audience which was worthy of laughs extra was made when hilarity of because of their stage accomplishment.

Years ago, when Stan Laurel traveled over England with Fred Karno's London Panatime Company, he learned to dance. Every one in that company had to be adept at singing, dancing and dramatic acting.

Sort-Shoe Expert

Stan chose soft-shoe dancing and for several months did a single dance act.

Little did he realize that some day his ability to keep a light fantastic would stand him to advantage and be recorded with sound on film, the original dance act adds to the merriment of "Pardon Us."

Oliver Hardy, Laurel's round partner in fun, stages a song in this picture that he learned more than twenty years ago while a member of Cobden's Minstrel Show. Although a college man, Oliver preferred grease paint and footlights so he cast aside his knowledge of law and trudged all through the South as the "boy soprano" in a minstrel show.

In "Pardon Us," Laurel and Hardy are reported to have their funniest scenes while in jail. They are seen as a couple of bootleggers who innocently offer a policeman a drink and are consequently sent to jail.

Here they go through a wide variety of hilarious episodes which finality end up in a burlesqued prison riot with the two heroes ultimately winning a return to freedom. The locale also shifts to a Southern Plantation, which gives the comedy pair a chance to cut up in "black-face," which they use as a disguise from the police.

A startlingly differend screen attraction is being exhibited on the same program in "Monsters of the Deep". Within Kinemacrine pictures, descending to the bottom of the ocean you are taken for a Forty Five minute cruise, and the sights encountered can truly be described as unique, weird, unholy-but chock full of thrills. The passing of Thomas A. Edison, is recorded in Paramount News.

More than 1700 merchant vessels carry the American flag.

A life-time of emotion and drama is revealed in Leslie Beresford's novel, "24 Hours," featuring Kay Francis, Clive Brook and Miriam Hopkins, coming to the Belle, Monday.

At The Capitol

AT THE CAPITOL AMUS LARGE CROWD SEES "TOO MANY COOKS"

An atmosphere of keen enjoyment prevailed at the Capitol last night when the large audience saw "Too Many Cooks", the comedy-drama starring Bert Wheeler and Dorothy Lee not to mention that great favorite, Rosco Ates, the Comic Stutterer.

The story of "Too Many Cooks" is a ridiculous one, dealing with the housing schemes of a young couple who are assailed by the bride's relations, who will persist in being head cooks and bottlewashers, with disasterous results to the patience of the bridegroom. The net result is War, and things get mighty hot for a while. However, a surprising ending leaves everyone satisfied except the discomfited relations.

The additional attractions bring the programme, which will be shown for the last time tonight, to a nice state of completion, them being "Thanks Again", a comedy above the average and "Animal Pair", one of these ever-popular cartoons.

DOROTHY MACKAIL IN "PARTY HUSBAND"

The attraction at the Capitol on Saturday and Monday will be in favour with this theatre's increasing patronage. In this critical age an old favourite like Dorothy Mackail can be relied upon for a good performance, and her charming vehicle, "Party Husband" will come up to all expectations.

Hailing from Hull, England, where she followed the profession of stage, Dorothy Mackail first appeared in the famous picture "Midge Lee's Rose", and was an instantaneous hit as the blind violinist. From drama she branched out into lighter portrayals, and "Party Husband" is an example of what this girl can do in the role of a young wife who endeavors to influe her ideas into that old-fashioned ritual-marriage.

Opposite to Dorothy Mackail we have a Toronto boy playing the "Party Husband. This boy, Cecil Rannie, will be remembered for his marked performance in "Girl of the Golden West" with Alice Harding.

The story of "Party Husband" deals with a couple of up-to-the-minute newlyweds, who believe that they can play around with their respective gangs of pre-marriage days, flirting here and petting there, and still remain true to each other. This is not a preachment, but a cross-section of modern life, as human, so tender, so logical, that it gets you in spite of yourself, if you are an old-fash-ioned husband it will get you too by an old-fashioned wife.

The supporting cast of "Party Husband" is brilliant, including as it does, Don Douglas, Dorothy Mackaill, Mary Doran and Barbara Weeks.

A comedy, a cartoon and the ever popular Pathe Sound News are on the bill of fare.

Japan Sets No Time Limit For Evacuation

Geneva, Oct. 22 (AP)—Chairman Aristide Briand today submitted to the League Council a proposal calling upon the Japanese Government to withdraw immediately and progressively its troops from Manchuria in order that total evacuation may be effected before the next meeting of the council.

Japan's representative on the League of Nations council today refused to accept any definite time limit for withdrawal of her troops from Manchuria.

Shanghai, Oct. 22 (AP)—Political reunification of China in the face of its controversy with Japan is considered nearer today as Chiang Kai-Shek, head of the Central Government, conferred here with Wang Ching-Wei, leader of the Canton insurgent regime.

Tokyo, Oct. 22 (AP)—Official circles here today termed as unacceptable the basic demands reportedly submitted by China to the League of Nations Council as a basis for formulating a settlement of the Sino-Japanese controversy in Manchuria.

FIVE YEARS IN ARSON CASES

Prentice Sent Down To Penitentiary on Four Counts

Owen Sound, Ont., Oct. 22.—Harold Prentice was this morning sentenced to five years in penitentiary on each of four charges of arson, the sentences to run concurrently. Prentice was responsible for the disastrous fire at Clarksburg, thirty miles east of here, on Wednesday, September 30.

Prentice was caught on Thursday morning when he tried to set fire to the business section of the neighboring village of Thornbury, appearing in police court here before Magistrate E. C. Sperman on Thursday, October 1, he pleaded guilty to the arson charges. Sentence was passed this morning.

Fines' Allocation May Be Changed

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP)—Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario, predicted the province would apply for amendment to the criminal code in regard to the allocation of fines as between the province and the municipalities. This followed the announcement the privy council had decided in favor of the city of Toronto in the long standing dispute as to whether the city or the province of Ontario should get the $80,000 fine imposed in the Jarvis case. The city of Toronto will claim several thousand dollars from the province as the result of the decision.

FEDERAL LAWS ARE INVALID

Provinces of Canada Are Favored By Privy Council

London, October 22.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The provinces of Canada are favored by the decision of the judicial committee of the Privy Council today, which answered favorably to the provinces, all questions submitted to it in a reference as to the validity of certain sections of the Federal Insurance Act.

The dispute was between the provinces with Quebec taking the appeal and Ontario being directly interested, and the Dominion Government, as to the question of jurisdiction over insurance.

The provinces of Ontario in particular questioned the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government in regard to the licensing of English companies doing business in Ontario.

In the judgment today Lord Dunedin remarked it might be hoped this case would be the last of the series of litigations between the Dominion and the provinces regarding insurance.

After referring to four cases that had been heard before the Privy Council, Their Lordships' judgment declared the Dominion Legislation in question had not been properly framed in regard either to alien immigration, taxation or criminal law and was invalid.

First Church Built at Thomasburg 75 Years Ago

50th Anniversary of Present Church To Be Celebrated

U. C. HISTORY

The United Church at Thomasburg will celebrate next Sunday, October 25th, the 50th Anniversary of its present church, and the 75th year since the building of the first church. It was in 1856 that the first family moved into this district and the village received its name from the pioneers Thomas Clare, Thomas Hoey and Thomas Graham who lived on adjacent farms.

The early settlers were not long without religious services, these services for some years being held in the houses and conducted by local preachers, soon came the itinerant preachers and almost 100 years ago the Thomasburg district became part of the Belleville circuit with Revs. Thomas Henson and Geo. Ferguson as the first preachers. The circuits in the early days covered a large area with a dozen or more appointments, the school houses being used for the purpose of holding meetings. In the year 1856 the methodists began building the first church and opened it in May 1857 amid great rejoicing. The church was a centre for a large area for about 25 years. Then in 1881 the present brick church was built and opened free of debt. Jubilee services will be held October 25th, Sunday, at 11 evening, when Rev. R. T. Richards, a former pastor will be associated with the present pastor Rv. J. W. Platt in the services. Former members and friends of the church will be interested in this event.

Sailors in Navy Cast Their Votes

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 22—The first votes are already being cast in the British general election, though polling generally does not take place until October 27. Voters who are with the Atlantic fleet, now manoeuvring in the North Sea, are divided between Invergordon and Hull are making their decision between the National government supporters and Labor.

Directly after nomination day returning officers were notified of the names of the candidates and the sailors and officers aboard who were entitled to vote. They despatched ballot papers which are returnable before the close of the polls next Tuesday.

The sailors of the Atlantic fleet have been able to hear political speeches over the ship's wireless. On numerous ships journals have been edited either in naval or military barracks.

Two More Fires In Wentworth Area

Hamilton, Oct. 22. — The fire fiend again struck terror into the hearts of district farmers today when two conflagrations occurred early this morning reducing a large barn and a house to ashes.

Husband Appeals To Wife To Give Self Up

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 23.—A renewed appeal by Winnie Ruth Judd to surrender and face charges of murdering two women companions's bodies were found in trunks here Monday night, was issued tonight by her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, who promised to provide legal defense.

"Police said it was their belief that Mrs. Judd was in hiding in California. A search of the sparsely populated section in Beverly Glen Canyon, where Mrs. Judd's brother, Burton J. McClintock, resided in a cabin, failed to give trace of the woman's whereabouts. Some authorities, however, were still inclined to the theory that Mrs. Judd had taken her life.

Bartering of Judgeship Described Euphoniously

New York, Oct. 22.—The story of a bi-partisan agreement for establishment of a Municipal Judge in the Second Judicial District was unfolded by a Democratic leader and a Republican leader, testifying before the Hofstadter Legislative Committee. Jim Donovan, Queen's Democratic leader, admitted that a political deal favored him and Jacob Grumet, still creating twelve new Supreme Court judgeships, one City Court Judgeship and two Municipal Court judgeships, which was passed by the Legislature. Warren B. Ashmead, Republican leader, in the same session declaimed responsibility for negotiations described by the sponsor of the bills but said he arranged with Theodel for the selection of the two Judgeships allotted to Queens. Ashmead termed the arrangement by which the judgeships were filled as two of the positions and the Republicans as "the spoils of the agreement." "I'd call it plain, ordinary bargain and barter deal," commented Samuel Seabury, counsel for the committee investigating the city government.

Democrats Outnumber Republicans in House

Washington, D.C., Oct. 22.—(AP)—The Democrats for the first time in history will today outnumber the Republicans in the House.

The death yesterday of Representative Fletcher Hale of New Hampshire, a Republican, left the lineup of the House as follows: Democrats 214; Republicans 213; Farmer Labor 1; vacancy 7.

Not since November, 1918, when Woodrow Wilson appealed dramatically to the country for a return of a Democratic majority and saw a Republican majority elected have the Democrats been in the ascendancy, even temporarily.

The present lineup, however, will not last until Congress convenes in December.

Five special elections have already been set for November 3 to fill vacancies caused by death.

Farming, Manufacturing and Other Interests Are Mutual

Bay of Quinte Butter-makers' Club Holds Annual Banquet

CO-OPERATION

"A pound of creamery butter—perfect." It is so easy to say that the butter is taken from the properly cooled refrigerator—prepared and the purchaser is away. It has reached its final point of the long journey—the work which commenced on the farm when the cream was separated, when the labor has been used in the production of the one pound of butter—the proper caring for of cattle, the milking of a cow, the careful handling of the cream, the shipping of the cream to the creamery, the grading in the creamery, the making of the butter and the inspection of the butter and of the creameries by government men.

The meeting about the Bay of Quinte creamery of creamery operators and instructors in the art of grading and making butter and many other interested people was held in the city of Belleville, primarily for the purpose of the consumer getting a first class sanitary condition.

Sanitary Conditions

The men who make the butter in the creameries must be qualified according to a strict standard and they must thoroughly understand the science of butter making in every detail. This body of men assembled at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday evening to attend the annual banquet of the Bay of Quinte Buttermakers' Club. During the year the monthly meetings at Belleville during the season take the place of the banquet meeting in addition also the Campbellford, Madoc, Trenton and Napanee district meetings. The meeting Thursday night was held for the last time until next April or May.

The officers of the club are as follows: Hon. Pres., Mr. Fred McGuin, Citizen's Dairy, Belleville; Pres., Mr. Frederick Mr. A. W. Wallace, Tamworth Creamery, Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Ernest Reed Creamery. Committee, Mr. Sidney, Picton Creamery; Mr. Roy Jose, Belleville Creamery and Mr. A. Caskell, Trenton Creamery.

About seventy men sat down to the banquet, which was provided by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. The supper was excellent in every detail—the service of the dining room carried out perfectly. During the dinner Mr. Leo Rigor, who was also a director of the club, delighted all present with several songs; his rousing chorus, "Sparkling Eyes" was also a great success.

The chairman of the evening was Mr. John H. Scott, Toronto, Chief Creamery Instructor for Ontario and he carried the meeting through most admirably.

Mr. Geo. H. Barr, Director of Dairying for Ontario, was the first speaker. He did not address the gathering, but in his regret and to the credit of the members of the club, he could not arrange to be with them. Mr. Barr's work in the club were nicely expressed by Mr. Reynolds.

The chief speaker of the evening was Dr. J. B. Reynolds of Port Hope, President Emeritus, Dentistry, Toronto University College, Guelph.

Mr. Scott said it was a great pleasure to be present with the Bay of Quinte Buttermakers' Club and he considered it a great honor to be asked to preside at a meeting of so fine a lot of young men. The butter industry seemed to be carried on almost entirely by young men—few older men were engaged in the making of butter.

Dr. Reynolds he said, was a great friend of his thirty six years ago he called on him at his home under Dr. Reynolds. The club was for tunate in having Dr. Reynolds with them as he possesses vast experience in matters relative to the work in which the members are greatly interested.

Dr. Reynolds thanked the chairman for his kind introduction. As for being here Mr. Scott he said, I assure thirty-six years ago, he knew he would be here and that he was delighted to be present. He was deeply touched by the mutual interests and also to greet old friends. The association, he had taught at some time in the past, had the same mutual interest and harmony, said Dr. Reynolds in closing, as thirty-six years ago the farmers took a stand against what they termed the "big interests" which would have "no truck nor trade with them." Now they control their problems by themselves, outside organizations were also united from the bankers, manufacturers, railroads, in fact every other business interests—they thought that they were a few years they would be sufficiently strong themselves but after and now the problems of art are handled by all—that's what I have found that there must be mutual interest. "If we cooperate more our dependence one on the other the more successful we will be. This is the main thought I would like to impress you."

Buttermakers' Problems

Buttermakers have many problems and questions to ask and to solve them. They must remember that the farmers from whom they obtain cream have problems and questions to ask remember that the buttermaker has many problems and questions to answer. Contests, the considering of the other man's problems is a great help to all. Dr. Reynolds advised the buttermakers at all possible to attend the conventions and to confer with them the problems they may have in their work to improve their end of the butter making industry, particularly the quality of cream. Dr. Reynolds touched upon many matters, results of tests, etc., which were greatly enjoyed and appreciated.

Mr. John Scott, the chairman, who is chief Creamery Instructor for Ontario, referred particularly to the club regarding the demonstrations which it had conducted and he discussed numerous matters of mutual interest pertaining to be solved for the better benefit of the butter making industry.

Mr. Barr, the one time Provincial Government Dairy Commissioner at Belleville, now Federal Dairy Commissioner, was visiting Belleville a short interesting address to the club. Mr. Barr's address, Dairy Government Dairy Inspector at Belleville and the Provincial staff at the club, Mr. Fred McGuin of Belleville, short addresses. Mr. Wallace, Tamworth Creamery, Ontario, has taken a great interest in the club also gave a short interesting talk. The banquet judging from the appreciation of all present was a great success.

NAVAL FORCES TO QUELL RIOT

Every Town in Cyprus is Affected By Revolutionists

Lanarka, Island of Cyprus, Oct. 23 (AP)—The military and naval forces of British Britannia are hastening today to quell a revolt in Cyprus, ancient Mediterranean island over which Alexander the Great scrambled, Richard the Lion-hearted snatched from the Saracens, and where St. Paul, St. Mark and St. Barnabas preached early Christianity.

For more than a day a band of the island has been in control of revolters who are demanding union with Greece, which aided Cyprus in the struggle against Alexander 2,400-odd years ago.

The revolt developed after weeks of growing resentment against a British decree under imposing tariffs which the Cyprian legislature council has passed.

Stop Motor Trucks

Late last night a group of revolutionists stopped motor trucks carrying rations to British troops and destroyed the ancient town where Richard the Lion-hearted married Berengaria in 1191. Frightened drivers of the trucks were forced to abandon them.

The mob then overpowered the police and attacked the building of the District Commissioner's house.

Wednesday night, when the riot began, several members of the council, after addressing a large meeting in Nicosia, went to the revolters to government house to present their demands and demand union with Greece.

They rushed the guard and stoned the building. Then they overturned the automobiles, including the cars of the governor and the high commissioner, which made the government house itself was set on fire and burned to the ground.

Several policemen were injured in the fight. The mob surrounded the into the crowd and 10 or 12 persons were wounded.

Every Town Affected

Meanwhile the revolt spread to every town in Cyprus. At Polis Chrysochou, 30 miles from Paphos, a band of Royal Welsh Fusiliers, numbering 40, were taken out to ships in the harbor.

At Paphos, where mythology says Venus arose from the sea and was born at Sea Foam, mobs roamed and burned buildings.

Although a state of nervous tension prevailed throughout last night the only new outbreak was the one at Limasol.
